Three Cohasset boys' soccer teams remained in contention for state championship play at the conclusion of the eighth week of Coastal League competition. Under 10-1 stayed undefeated by tying Hanover 1-1; under 12-1 trounced Scituate 5-1; and under 19 won twice, beating Scituate 6-1 and 7-2.

"Our second win over Scituate was exceptional," said under-19 coach Larry Shultz. "Four of our best players were trying out for the state all-star team. Yet we beat them as badly as we had the day before, with those players."

Saturday, striker Jim Reidy and midfielder Todd Fitzpatrick both had a pair of goals in the 6-1 win. Jay Staunton and fullback Steve Myers, in a remarkable length-of-the-field run, added single tallies. The next day, with Matt Beggan making his first appearance ever in goal, Cohasset won again, sparked by Kostas Roukounakis' hat trick. Brothers Brian and David Shultz contributed two goals apiece.

Jeremiah Stevenson's two goals led Steve Endris' under 12-1 squad to their victory. "Brendan Kinchla, Drew Pozatek and my son, Charlie, also scored," said Endris. "And Adam Reed was outstanding in goal."

Jonathan Crafts, switching from midfield to forward, scored his seventh goal of the season midway through the second half to give under 10-1 the tie at Hanover. Backs Brett MacQuarrie, Jamey Kondrat and Matt Belson led the defense. "Our toughest opponent yet," said coach Terry Kahn. "Belson played great, and goalie Kevin McKenna had 10 saves in the first half to break their hearts."

Paul Cotter's under 10-2 won their second game of the season, knocking off Middleboro 4-2. Striker Burke Davis scored three goals, and Nate Cotter had one. Jason Murphy played well, Cotter said.

In other boys' play, under 12-2 dropped a close 2-1 decision to Scituate. Chris McKenna was a standout in goal, as were midfielder Chip Moore, fullback Toby Horn, and forward Andrew Fitzsimmons. Ben Redfield scored the goal.

Under 14-1 fell to Halifax 5-0, although Mike Burns, Dan DeMichele and Mike Equi all played well. Under 14-2's game with Kingston was postponed until this Sunday.

Under 16 boys were tipped by Halifax 3-2, a marked improvement over their earlier 7-1 loss. Bart Weisenfluh and Sean Gallagher scored, while Travis Coley turned in an outstanding job at midfield.

Cohasset girls had a tougher time, losing several close contests. In the most dramatic contest, under 19 was edged by Scituate 2-1, despite Amy Sheppard's great effort in goal. Liz O'Leary scored for under 19, and Kerry Kirkendall and Katie Lord stood out on defense.

Under 10-1 lost to powerhouse Duxbury 5-0, despite good play from Michelle Wood, Chloe Chittick, Megan McNamara and Amy Theriault.

Under 10-2 were beaten by Kingston 3-1, but "This was like a tie," said coach Kevin O'Connell. "They scored two goals on penalty kicks, and had beaten us 8-1, and 6-1 in two other games." Kelly Marie O'Donnell got the goal, scoring on a throw-in from Emily Henderson. Midfielder Jesse Sandell, and goalies Cara McKinney and Julie Smith also played well.

The Girls 10 and Under Team I of the Cohasset Youth Soccer League.

Under 12-1 wasn't scheduled, and 12-2 won on a forfeit when Duxbury refused to travel north to face Nino D'Urso's squad.

Under 14-1 was edged by Hingham 1-0. Coach Jim Gallant praised the goaltending of Tanya Peterson and Michelle Woodland. 14-2 fell to tough Plymouth 4-1, although it was a one goal game with four minutes left, said coach Jack O'Brien. Katie O'Sullivan played her best game of the season at midfield, and Lisa Ohlsson was also outstanding.

Under 16 fell to Pembroke 3-0. "Pembroke had the best defense we've seen," said coach Steve Hague. Forward Cory DeSantis and midfielder Barbara Migliaccio led Cohasset.

"From what I've seen," said league coordinator Shultz, "Our teams are playing like teams. There's more passing, and less dribbling."

The home schedule this week:

Saturday at Milliken — Girls under 12-2 vs. Kingston, 10:15; Girls 14-2 vs. Plymouth, 11:30; Boys 10-1 vs. Kingston, 1 p.m.; Boys 12-2 vs. Duxbury, 2:15.

Sunday at Milliken — Girls under 16 vs. Marshfield, 1 p.m.; Boys under 19 vs. Hingham, 4 p.m.

Thanks to all who have contributed. Those who have not participated in the Annual Drive may do so during the Sundays of May.

Second Congregational Church

News of the Parish:

Church School: We were happy to celebrate the May birthdays of Maren Cameron, Sim Ketchum and Amy Silvia. We heard that Mrs. Ritts ha a May birthday also! Best wishes!

Our Heifer project lamb looks very "wooly," thanks to so many generous people. Let's see if we can cover him completely this Sunday. Children, after attending church this week, go directly to chapel for a brief rehearsal before going to classes.

I'd like to urge all children to come this Sunday in order to prepare for Children's Sunday, June 12. 5th and 6th graders—Everyone should attend in order to finalize parts!—GW

Widow's Group to Begin—for all widows, any age, no matter how long widowed; to gather together and explore new insights, the grieving process and thoughts on coping. Group facilitators will be Karen Ford and Ester Pratt. The first meeting will be held Sunday, June 5, from 4 to 5:30 p.m. in a corner of Bates Hall.

The Road Less Traveled* Available Now!! For the six evenings in the fall, we'll be having a Wednesday night book study beginning October 12. The book chosen for discussion is M. Scott Peck's The Road Less Traveled, which can be purchased from Alison Callahan (at coffee hour) for a special price of $8.46 (cover price is $9.95). The reason it's being presented now rests in the feeling that it is a rather challenging and highly insightful book and is best read with plenty of time available—perfect summer reading!

Auction Notes—A special thanks to Marsh Silvia for all of her organizational work; likewise to marvelous auctioneer, Bruce Doten who kept things moving at a lively pace; and to all those who helped make the auction a great success—workers, donators, bakers and buyers. We raised nearly $600 for the Mary Martha Center and Youth Work Project. And beyond all that, we all had a lot of fun! ("I'll bid a quarter," "I'll make the sandwiches," "He'll even walk on water"). We're also going to try this again next spring and will be collecting items from now until then. Call the church office whenever you come across something auction-worthy.

Sunday, June 5—Graduate Recognition

High School graduation nears. Below is a list of the seniors we have currently on our list. If you know of others within our constituency, please contact the office right away:

Jen Coley; Julie Bowdoin, John Linsley, David Schultz, Steve Myers, Heather St. Onge, Margo Nedrow, Peter Sandblom, Jim Maguire, Erica Ford, Adam Durant, Mike Anderson.

College Graduations—We would also like to know of any college students who are graduating this spring or who have graduated since last spring ('87) in order that we might recognize them as well.

Art center featuring local photography exhibit

The South Shore Art Center will have an exhibit of works by "3 Photographers" in the Bancroft Invitational Gallery from May 25 to June 18.

Featured in this exhibit are black and white photographs by Amy Whorf and David F. Saul and color prints by Krisanne Carnovale. An opening reception will be held at the Center, 119 Ripley Road Friday, May 27 from 5-7 p.m.

Some of the works by these photographers will reveal how each has looked at the same landscape and interpreted the scene differently. Primarily the work in this exhibit will be photographs capturing the New England landscape particularly Maine and Cape Cod and the landscape of Florida.

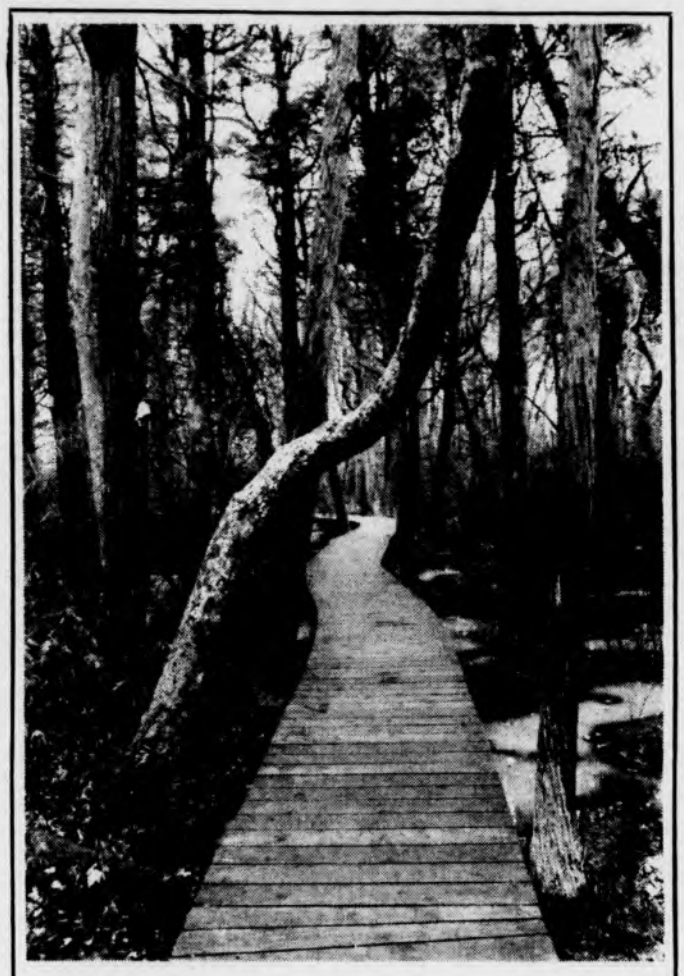
The black and white works of Saul and Whorf may be of similar sites but interpreted differently with Saul's work being more abstract. Carnovale's color prints of Florida and New England are mostly abstracted in her interpretations.

A South Shore photographer and Hingham resident, Whorf will include in her body of work photographs taken at seaside. Whorf, who has served as a freelance photographer for the Mariner Newspaper, has won numerous awards including a first prize and honorable mention in the South Shore Art Center's All New England Juried Photography Show.

She has prepared photographs and manuscripts of St. Ives Cornwall, England and of the Crombie Woolen Mill in Scotland, both for publication in the Boston Globe: of the Burns Supper for the Patriot Ledger; and of Scottish Shortbread for Country Living.

She has had one-person exhibits at the Netherbow Arts Center in Edinburgh, Scotland; Peacock Gallery in Craigavon, Northern Ireland; at the Queen's Hall in Edinburgh; the Aberdeen Arts Center in Scotland; and at the Hingham Public Library. Her works have been included in many group shows in Boston and on the South Shore.

Both Saul and Carnovale work out of Worcester. Saul has just completed a body of work, "Studio Portrait Project," under a grant sponsored by the Cultural Assembly of Greater Worcester and funded by the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Commission as administered by the Worcester Cultural Commission.



The culmination of this grant is a 60-print collection, "Artist Domain," in which he developed panoramic photographs of artists and their work space. The collection will be on exhibit May 22-June 19 at the Cultural Assembly Gallery in Worcester Center and a second exhibit will run simultaneously at the Worcester Center for Crafts.

As an educator Saul teaches at the Andover Summer Session and will be the artist-in-residence next year at the Rivers School and as an arts administrator, he is currently the treasurer of the Art Association of New England Preparatory Schools and has previously served as its chairman for two years. A graduate of Harvard College with a degree in visual and environmental studies concentrating in photography, Saul has had exhibits at the Worcester Public Library, St. Mark's School in Southborough, Phillips Academy Art Center and the Mutual Bank in Weston as well as having his work included in numerous group shows.

His work is in the permanent collections of Sprint Systems of Photography in Pawtucket, R.I.; the Main Photographic Workshops in Rockport; and the Carpenter Center at Harvard.

As a graduate of the New England School of Photography, Carnovale is currently a photographic specialist in the corporate photography department of the Digital Equipment Corporation. She also is a photography instructor in the adult education program at the Algonquin Regional High School.

She will be having a one person exhbit, "Rough Edges," of her hand colored silver prints at the Atwood Gallery in Worcester. In addition to the Atwood exhibit and the one in the South Shore Art Center, she has had one person exhibits at Gallery 69A, Grove Street Gallery and the Quinsigamond Gallery, all in Worcester; the Rivers School; Lee Gallery, Boston; and the New England School of Photography where she had an exhibit of Polaroid photographs. Her work has also been included in numerous group exhibits.

Visitors to "3 Photographers" will have the opportunity to learn just how differently photographers can visually perceive the same scene. Comparing and contrasting the works of these photographers will give the viewer insight into the creative elements in photographic work.

The exhibit is open to the public Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The Center is supported in part by a grant from the Council on the Arts and Humanities.

Authority begins search for housing plan

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

The Cohasset Housing Authority hopes to select a consulting firm within the next month to work on a comprehensive plan for Cohasset affordable housing.

According to Barbara Clain, the housing authority's executive director, nine firms have responded to advertisements placed by the town. Cohasset was awarded $1.14 million in state grants to provide affordable housing within the town.

Once a firm is selected, the site selection process will begin, she said.

The Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) awarded the grant earlier this year to develop 12 three-bedroom units of affordable housing.

It was the largest grant ever awarded to the Cohasset Housing Authority. The money can be used to construct new homes or to renovate existing structures into affordable family housing.

At the time the grant was awarded, Housing Authority Chairman John Muncey said the town would review all town-owned land.

Muncey also said the town would entertain donations of land or would talk with residents who would like to sell property.

There is about $7,500 available for the purchase of the land and engineering work, according to the guidelines.

A consultant must be hired with the initial planning money.

That consultant will identify and evaluate sites for the construction of the units.

Percolation tests will then be completed. All results must be submitted to the state and the bids are let out for architectural services.

The state's design selection committee will recommend an architect and then the construction process can begin.

Late last year, the housing authority also received grants to modernize the elderly housing complex and to begin site work on a home for retarded adults.

According to Clain, phase two of the modernization of the elderly housing complex at 60 Elm St. is almost completed.

"We're about to make a decision to award a contract to the low bidder for the modernization program," she said.

It will probably be made within 10 days, she said.

The grant for the 64-unit complex first occupied in 1975 totalled $388,000.

The authority is making some progress in selecting a site for the development of eight housing units for the mentally retarded with a $589,600 grant, Clain said.

"Nothing has been signed," she said. "But we have a place in mind and we are actively pursuing it."

The authority is seeking a quarter-acre of land which would be suitable for the small housing complex.

The project will begin under the direction of EOCD in conjunction with the state Department of Mental Health.

"We're pleased with the way things are going, for the most part," said Clain of all three programs.

Police and fire overtime results in overdraft

Overtime budgets for the police and fire departments will have to be overdrawn this year because the town doesn't have enough money to cover the costs.

The advisory committee voted Tuesday night to give the police and fire departments half of what they need to fund their overtime budgets until the new fiscal year begins in July. The police department was given $5,000, although $9,000 was requested. The fire department was alloted $8,000 of the $15,500 in overtime requests until July 1.

After that money is expended, the town will have to pay any police and fire overtime salaries by overdrawing the depleted reserve fund account. Currently, that fund contains about $17,000 which must meet other departmental requests until the end of the fiscal year, June 30.

Police Chief Joseph Kealey told a joint meeting of selectmen and the advisory committee that overtime for the department currently averages $2,000 per week.

Fire Chief Daniel Brock said his department's overtime averages $1,000 weekly, because of heavy vacation times during the spring and summer.

The chief expected a new firefighter to be appointed last July 1. That appointment was delayed by Civil Service until October 30. Coupled with the death of a firefighter last year, he stated, the overtime budget expenses were larger than he estimated.

When asked whether there was any way to reduce the overtime until the end of the fiscal year, Chief Kealey replied, "this is a contractual obligation. We are obliged to pay if someone works an overtime shift. Everything is by contract. We have not added men. I saw this coming a long time ago, and waited as long as I could."

Although the chief expects to return money from his capital outlay account to the town's general budget, Executive Secretary Donald Andrew explained that money can not be transferred into the overtime account.

"This is the seventh budget I've submitted that is level-funded," the chief complained. "Households can not go level funded for seven years. We can't keep going on like this. My operating budget has not gone up $1."

Record turnout honors Cohasset's war veterans

It was, according to one veteran of many Cohasset Memorial Day parades, the best turnout in years.

Stephen Wigmore, master of ceremonies for the 1988 Memorial Day parade and ceremonies, and past commander of the George H. Mealy American Legion Post, praised the hundreds of spectators who lined the parade route Monday morning

He turned to the proud veterans who had just completed the marathon parade route from Beechwood, to the Woodside Cemetery, to the harbor, and he thanked them. "This was the best I've seen yet," he said. Wigmore was assisted in his duties by Ralph Peroncello, commander of the Cohasset Veterans of Foreign War Post.

Beginning at 8:30 a.m., a parade unit of more than 50 veterans from all branches of the service formed in North Cohasset. They traveled by bus to the Beechwood and Woodside cemeteries and then to the North Cohasset Honor Roll where the name of Cohasset's war dead were solemnly announced.

The official parade formed along Sohier Street as hundreds of anxious spectaors, including elderly residents, veterans, and young children, listened to the approaching wail of the bagpipe players.

For many years, a special feature of the Cohasset Memorial Day parade has been the appearance of the Kevin Barry Irish American Pipes and Drum from Malden. Each year, the band members are treated to a luncheon after the parade at the American Legion Post.

At Cohasset's Central Cemetery, Rev. Edward Atkinson noted that Memorial Day is a time for people to gather "in solemn remembrance of those lost lives, of those who served our country so that we might continue to dwell securely in freedom."

The First Parish minister noted that Memorial Day is a "rededication to a world where all people know each other as friends and neighbors encompassed by the spirit of love."

Political opponents in race for state house seat

● Murray seeks seventh term

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

"My first love is local government," State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray said. "Although I'm at the state house, the local people are the ones I serve."

She has served at the state house for the past 12 years and is now seeking a seventh term as the representative of Hingham, Hull and Cohasset. For the first time since 1982, the Cohasset republican faces opposition.

Rep. Murray, known on a first-name basis by many of her constituents, was a Cohasset selectman for nine years. Last elected to the board in 1975, she was serving out that three-year term when State Rep. Chet Young announced he would be stepping down.

"My husband Phil talked to me and just figured I would run. A lot of people did - everyone but me, I think. We talked for about three hours that night and I decided to give it a try. I have a lot of energy, and I was taught by my father and mother to channel that energy into helping people - using politics to help people," she recalled. Murray was elected to the state house seat in November, 1978, in the same district once represented by her late father, Nate Hurwitz.

Although Murray was a selectman at the time, she thought she could serve in both positions, at least until her term expired the following April. But as state house committee hearings began in February, she realized,"I could not possibly serve the people of my town as well as I had in the past," she said.

"I didn't want the town to go through the cost of a special election, so I finished out my term as selectman and that was that," she added. Previous to her years as selectman, she served as a housing authority member, its vice chairman and chairman, for a total of ten years.

Rep. Murray now serves on the joint committee on Local Affairs, and the joint committee on Counties. She is a ranking Republican member of both committees.

She was formerly a member of the Human Services Committee, where she

● Silva eyes uphill battle

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

John Silva admits he is facing an uphill battle. But the challenge of taking on a well-known incumbent is one he welcomes.

The 32-year-old Hull democrat has deliberately planned for this race. He has put career advancement on hold and has carefully avoided taking on more responsibilities in order to make this run for the State House of Representatives.

"There is no better time than now," he stated in an interview this week. "I thought long and hard before I decided to do this. I felt that if this lack of regional leadership continued, and I was re-elected (to the Hull Board of Selectmen) by a sizeable majority, I would run. I was re-elected by more than a 2 to 1 margin (in April), and I think our regional leadership has become worse rather than better.

"Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray has built a reputation on constituent services. That's good, but that is what she's supposed to do - it's one of the things she was elected to do. But there are other necessary things - to stand in the forefront of issues affecting our communities. Her record of legislative successes is weak at best."

Silva continued, "Another issue is that anyone in elected office that long (12 years) begins to lose touch with the day-to-day issues of the communities and simply focuses in on the individual constituent.

"Mary Jeanette has no idea how these communities are progressing post-Proposition 2 1/2."

A resident of Hull since the age of seven, Silva is beginning his fourth year as a Hull selectman, and his second year as its chairman. He is also serving as chairman of the Hingham, Hull and Cohasset tri-town commission. Silva was a founding member and is chairman of the South Shore Coalition.

He is executive director of the New England Community Health Center Association and holds a certificate in health center administration from Columbia University School of Public

Variance denied

The zoning board of appeals denied a variance for Barron and Isabel Salvador to park two trucks in the driveway at their Bayberry Lane residence.

A hearing on the variance was held by the appeal board April 7. Based on information obtained at the hearing from the Salvador's attorney and abutters, the board voted to deny the variance.

The Salvadors have conducted a trucking business since 1969. Although the trucks were once parked on land adjacent to their property, selectmen revoked permission to use the land in 1984. Since that time, the Salvadors have stored the trucks in their driveway which is located in a residential B district.

Abutters to the property questioned the Salvadors' request, saying the trucks would present safety and noise problems in the neighborhood. And because Tupelo Road is now closed off to Rte.3A, the trucks must pass through residential areas to access the state highway.

Questions were also raised at the hearing regarding security, because the trucks parked at night contain full loads of liquor.

The zoning board denied the variance, noting that none of the bylaw conditions was met by the applicants. "Allowing the storage of these trucks on the applicants' land and the consequent travel to and from the applicants' land on a regular basis to the state highway would create traffic and noise issues which would be unacceptable in Residential B district.

Hazardous waste report

Twenty-one Cohasset residents deposited 270 containers of household hazardous waste at the regional collection day May 14 in Hingham.

According to the Cohasset health department, the total cost of the collection day was $23,400. Each of the four towns participating contributed money in proportion to population. Cohasset contributed $3,500.

Hingham, the sponsor of the event, contributed $15,000. Hull and Scituate also participated. Officials from the four towns were scheduled to meet late yesterday (June 1) to prorate the costs. The state Department of Environmental Management is funding 35 percent of the cost.

Mostly Hingham residents participated in the area's first regional household hazardous waste disposal day. According to a survey done at the Station Street drop-off site, 123 Hingham residents dropped off about 1,330 containers of household hazardous waste.

This first attempt at a regional disposal day on the South Shore was a waste of money, Scituate selectmen believe.

Scituate contributed $8,000 toward the disposal of household hazardous waste collected, and only 15 Scituate households participated.

Scituate Selectman Joseph Norton said at the board's May 31 meeting that this points out that locals won't travel to Hingham to dispose of their hazardous waste. And he believes this is foreboding for any regional waste disposal plan.

"Regional waste is gonzo with these figures," Norton said.

Fifteen Scituate residents disposed of 170 containers, while 34 Hull residents disposed of 238, according to the survey.

The firm contracted to dispose of the waste is Northeast Solvents in North Andover. Collection stopped at 1:30 p.m. when the money ran out.

"It certainly demonstrates the need, the fact that they had to close collection early," said Barbara Zia of the Hingham League of Women Voters, one of the event's promoters. "What the four towns need to decide is whether or not they should continuing doing it as four towns."

Recycling bylaw approved

The state attorney general has approved a bylaw change approved by voters at the April 2 annual town meeting.

The amended bylaw requires residents to recycle bulky materials, glass, newspapers and other paper and corregated cardboard, yard waste and household hazardous waste material beginning July 1.

According to the bylaw, residents must begin recycling those materials at the Cedar Street landfill. The bylaw also gives the health board authority to direct and supervise the landfill recycling operation. A special recycling committee has been established to help develop regulations pertaining to the operation.

Town officials agree to support housing plan

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"This is the first time that organizations in town that have an interest in affordable housing have met together," said the Rev. E. Clifford Cutler of St. Stephen's Parish after the May 26 meeting on the topic of the Curtis Estate.

Rev. Cutler, chairman of the Fair Housing Committee, said that the idea for the meeting, attended by 15 people, came from the Curtis Estate Action Committee.

Other groups with representatives at the hour and 15-minute meeting at Town Hall were the Cohasset Housing Authority and Housing Partnership Committee.

Selectmen Martha Gjesteby and James Gallagher also attended.

During the meeting, the group reached a consensus to support the housing authority's plan for the 55-acre estate on Jerusalem Road.

Donald R. Andrew, executive secretary, Board of Selectmen, sent a letter stating that support to Amy S. Anthony, Secretary, Executive Office of Communities and Development.

"We, therefore, urge EOCD to support the position of the Town of Cohasset as stated by the Housing Authority with regard to the Curtis Estate," he stated.

Housing Authority chairman John Muncey explained that the plan is similar to that of the Curtis Estate Action Committee with emphasis on housing for the homeless, single parent families and single room occupancy.

"We feel that is staying closest to Curtis' will," he said.

When George Curtis died in 1931, he requested that upon the death of his wife, the "Curtis Home" was to be used "as a home and refuge for feeble, deformed, or invalid women who are without means and are unable to provide for their own living."

However, the ten trustees who have maintained the home and about $1.8 million in stocks and bonds since Curtis' death want to sell the property, valued at about $1.7 million, for development of 40 condominiums by a private developer.

Before the land is sold, permission must be granted by the state attorney general.

Curtis Estate Action Committee member Joseph McElroy, who has lived next to the Curtis Estate for three years, has suggested that the land and existing structures be used as housing for low income or the retarded.

"Curtis intended that the property be used for needy housing," said McElroy at the meeting as he outlined the action committee's plan filed with the state April 1.

According to McElroy, the estate has four structures: a mansion, second largest home, another home and a barn.

As part of Phase I, he said, the mansion could be used for the retarded or elderly; the second house, as a duplex; the other house, as affordable-type housing; and barn, a shelter-type house.

Occupancy could be immediate, McElroy said.

As part of Phase II, four additional duplex units could be added, he said.

Phase III, would have the balance of the property, which he said is mostly ledge and wetlands, as a conservation trust.

Gallagher said that the selectmen support the plan.

"United we stand," he said.

Those attending the meeting also agreed to ascertain the positions of the attorney general's office and estate trustees on the housing authority plan.

Dist. Atty. William Delahunt last week gave his strong support for the plans.

In addition, a letter will be sent to Amy Anthony, head of the Executive Office of Communities and Development, asking her support of the housing authority plan.

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Cohasset officials had mixed reactions to the comments last week made by Amy Anthony, head of the Executive Office of Communities and Development, citing the town's poor track record on low-income housing and integration.

Anthony told a local newspaper, "Cohasset hasn't done much — that would be an understatement."

John Muncey, Cohasset Housing Authority chairman, said, "I don't think her remarks were appropriate for this time."

Muncey explained that Cohasset has had an executive housing order in her office for over a month. The order is an agreement between the town and state to promote affordable housing, he said.

"If we were doing absolutely nothing, it would be a different thing.

"It's not an appropriate thing to put it in the paper," Muncey said.

On the other hand, Burt Pratt, chairman of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, had no problem with Anthony's remarks.

"She spoke the absolute truth," Pratt said.

"We are trying, but there have been delays on both sides."

Pratt noted that during the past year, three separate agreements have been presented to the EOCD regarding affordable housing. The third is currently being considered, he said.

According to Pratt, there is a difference of opinion on the matter between the Cohasset Selectmen, Housing Authority and Planning Board.

The problem is a philosophical discussion involving the state vs. home rule, Pratt said.

"The selectmen have had no problem with any of the three agreements," Pratt noted.

He also acknowledged that the EOCD "takes a long time to get back to us."

"If we all get together and deal with the problem it can be resolved," he said.

"I think you'll see progress very shortly."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she understood Anthony's remark.

"The situation dates back to 1983," she said. "We haven't progressed very far.

"The Board of Selectmen has been upfront. We sent in an agreement in March," Gjesteby said.

"I wasn't that happy with it. I'm not sure it was in the perimeters.

"The EOCD is a good organization. They have a

According to the fire chief, his firefighters are already owed $5,500 of the $10,000 in overtime transfers he has requested. Chief Brock delayed a request for the reserve fund transfer because he was waiting until the department was at full compliment, which was only four weeks ago, in order to average the weekly overtime expenditure.

Advisory committee member Arne Gjesteby criticized the department's method of utilizing the overtime budget. He noted that a safe minimum manning level clause included in the fire contract "should be avoided. It shouldn't be there as far as I'm concerned"

He also noted that when a box alarm is sounded, the first three call firemen who respond are guaranteed two hours pay. Another regulation followed by the department is that if no call firefighters respond to a box alarm, a volunteer firefighter is called in at a four-hour guaranteed rate. This has occurred two times since January, according to the advisory committee member.

"There are ways we could change the system," Gjesteby stated.

Advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke noted that overtime expenses are increasing despite a non-growing town population. "The townspeople need to know that benefits cost money, and they don't always understand that cost. Townspeople need to be aware of what this cost is, so they are informed about what level of service they want," she stated.

"I don't think as an individual I like being told I have no control over a budget because it is in the contract," Goedecke added.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle explained that during police and fire contract negotiations, the selectmen, personnel board and unions meet for several months to develop a good contract for both sides. "We're trying to do the best we can. If we gave them whatever they wanted, we could sign the thing in two days," he noted.

"But it looks like in ten years, they've gotten most of what they wanted," advisory committee member Gjesteby answered.

The fire chief noted that in comparison to other fire department contracts in other communities, Cohasset firefighters average less benefits than others.

Advisory committee member Jill O'Donnell objected that contract negotiations are closed to the advisory committee until the matter is settled, "and we're thrown some numbers and told we must pay for it with little or no knowledge of what's happened," she said.

Advisory chairman Goedecke agreed, noting that if someone objected to the contract and suggested major changes to the document at town meeting, "everything would be thrown into terrible chaos."

Executive Secretary Andrew explained that the only alternative to overdrawing the reserve fund, would be not to pay the fire and police personnel for services rendered. That would be a felony, he noted, an alternative he could not recommend.

By overdrawing the reserve fund, the overdrawn amount would appear on next year's tax recap sheet, and would result in an audit by the state. That is not serious occurrence and would not affect the town's bond rating, he said, but it would prove an embarassment to the town.

The advisory committee voted to approve a reserve fund transfer of $5,000 for the police department, and $8000 for the police department. An additional $2,400 in transfer requests were also approved, leaving a balance of about $2,000 until June 30.

Goedecke suggested that during the summer, an ad hoc sub committee be formed to investigate the budget appropriations and expenditures of police and fire departments in comparable towns. "We have to determine if our level of service is average, low or high," she stated. "Maybe this is something that everybody is doing. We need to have a lot of facts. We need to know if we're average, or we may find we have the cadillac department here. We can use that information."

Rep. Murray seeks seventh term . . .

was able to serve one of "greatest loves" - the elderly. She is also a former member of the taxation committee.

"Last year I was on taxation, counties and local affairs, and wouldn't you know it, they all met twice a week on the same days and at the same time," she stated. "On my first day, I ran from one roll call vote to another, walking from the second floor to the third floor to the fourth floor. When I was driving home with Phil that night, I said to him, 'I don't know why I'm so tired today.' Then he asked me if I took an elevator at all, and I realized I never did. I learned my lesson.

"Anyone who knows me knows I'm active and full of energy," she noted. "But that day was ridiculous."

Rep. Murray has a list of items she would like to continue in her seventh term at the state house. "There are a lot of things I've tried to get through that I will try hard to get passed, including a waterways drunk driving law. It would be similar to the penalities assed to a person found guilty of drunk driving on the roads. Right now, someone could be drunk in our harbors and waterways, and nothing happens," she explained.

Rep. Murray

She also plans to refile a bill calling for more statutory authority for harbormasters. By law, she noted, harbormasters can not arrest anyone violating the law. This bill would give the poewer of arrest to all harbormasters.

"I have always been in favor of decreasing state taxes for the elderly over the age of 70," Rep. Murray continued. "And I would like to see legislation to help keep the Korean veterans in this state."

Rep. Murray said the pleasure of serving the three towns has been her reward for the past 12 years. Among her accomplishments has been acquiring state aid for dredging the harbors in Hingham, Hull and Cohasset. Through her efforts, more than $500,000 was allocated for Allerton Bluff and rehabilitation of the Pemberton and Nantasket piers.

"I was one of the first legislators to push for a commuter boat to Logan, and through my meeting with Massport's Paul Davis, the pier at Logan was rebuilt to accomodate the boats," she stated.

A piece of legislation which Murray co-authored would initiate county-controlled solid waste management plans. As she explained, towns within a county would decide for themselves whether to participate in the county-sponsored plan. If a town did not participate, it would not be liable for pay for services. No town would be obligated to join, Rep. Murray stated.

"I firmly believe in county government, and I don't want it scrapped for some 'regional' plan," she said. "Why should taxpayers have to pay even more for new facilities and a new organization?"

With help from her husband and leading supporter, Phil, Rep. Murray recalled she was a leading legislative opponent to a proposal which would have brought legalized gambling to Hull. She also initiated a meeting between Cohasset sewer officials and the attorney general to begin negotiations on a sewer plan for the town.

"I never get involved in a local issue, unless state assistance is requested," she noted.

After such a request, Rep. Murray set up a meeting between Cohasset housing officials and the state Department of Communities and Development to create a housing agreement between the two agencies.

"Through the years I was also instrumental in obtaining state grants for my district's libraries, historical societies and housing authorities," she stated.

She and her husband, Philip, have three children, Philip Jr., Nate, and Lillian.

Butterflies at the science center

Mid-June is one of the prettiest times of the year. Enjoy the activity and beauty of nature with programs at South Shore Natural Science in Norwell.

BUTTERFLIES OF THE SOUTH SHORE

Butterflies can be found on every continent in the world except for Antartica. Did you know that there are about 20,000 species of butterflies in the world as opposed to only 9,000 birds? Did you know that some butterflies play dead when they are picked up, that others defend their territory, and yet others use their wings as solar panels?

Children ages 7 years and older are invited to join naturalist Ellyn Einhorn for an afternoon exploring the world of the butterfly on Sunday, June 12 from 1 to 3 p.m. Look for and learn about butterflies of the South Shore area, their life cycles, the differences between moths and butterflies, and where to find them! Explore the fields and paths of the Center in search for local varieties. Pre-paid registration required (members/$5; non-members/$6.50). Call 659-2559.

EGYPTIAN ADVENTURE

Egypt is reknowned for its contrasts — ancient culture and modern cities, fertile Nile and barren deserts, rich cultural history and varied natural environment. Join teacher Michael Marty for a voyage up the Nile on Friday, June 10 from 2:30 to 4 p.m. View the Sudan Desert, the pyramids of Gaza, and the temples of Abu-Simbal. This is our last armchair travel tour until autumn. Don't miss this final festive occasion! Refreshments will be served.

Preregister by calling 659-2559 (members/$3; non-members/$4).

Silva acknowledges uphill battle . . .

Health.

Silva decided to run against the incumbent state representative because he was not satisfied with the regional representation this area was receiving at the state house. "A better question is, why not run now?" he stated. "There are major regional isues facing the South Shore now - issues just coming to the surface, like solid waste management, affordable housing, transportation, cleaning up our bays and beaches and groundwater protection. I intend to focus on leadership as a central issue of my campaign. I intend to ask questions such as are we getting the type of leadership on Beacon Hill we deserve and that is essential."

The Holy Cross graduate said lack of local representation at the state house is evident. "For a state representative who has been in office 12 years, she has a surprising lack of clout and access to power on Beacon Hill," he said. Silva recalled during a recent confrontation with the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) regarding location of a sewer effluent pipe off Allerton Point, Rep. Murray sent local opponents to an MWRA state house lobbyist.

"That is the level she is dealing on," he stated. "When we needed gubernatorial attention, or someone from the MWRA or at least a cabinet official to talk with, we were sent to a lobbyist. It was only through agitation from the South Shore Coalition, with no assistance from Rep. Murray, that we met with the executive board of the MWRA."

Silva said he is familiar with the issues affecting the three communities. "I don't think anybody is more familiar with the issues than I," he said. "The entire purpose of the Coalition and the tri-town commission is to affect these three communities and to affect regional solutions to our common problems. Hingham, Hull and Cohasset are facing the same solid waste, affordable housing, landfill maintenance and expansion issues as well as incredible transportation and development questions."

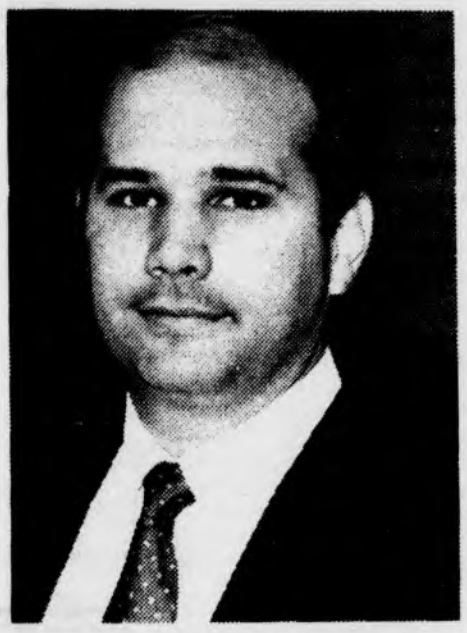
As chairman of the Coalition, Silva was involved in obtaining a state grant to propose solid waste managment solutions, "because each of the ten Coalition towns listed that as their first or second priority," he explained.

"The state has recognized this as an incredible problem for each town on the South Shore. But where has our leadership been in the House of Representatives? There has been no proposal from our current representative. She has never attended a South Shore Coalition meeting, because she considers it a (Senator) Bill Golden group. We can't deal in parochialism. We have to deal with regional issues. Truly, I don't think I could tell you the party affiliation of one-half the members of the Coalition."

Silva continued, "When the current representative's only response to solid waste management is to repeatedly file a bill to have Norfolk County develop an incineration facility, not only does that not show leadership, but it leaves the South Shore open to incredible environmental risks and fails to give the South Shore control over its own solutions."

Another example of lack of local representation at the state house, Silva said, is evident in the push to revive the Old Colony railroad.

"Constituents must require their representatives to say whether they are for or against an issue. Regarding the revitalization of the Greenbush line, I don't know where Rep. Murray stands. She doesn't want anyone to know because it is a politically volatile issue. I am for it. It seems to me it is now simply a debate on public safety and station locations, and not on the issue of whether it should be revitalized or not.



John Silva

"The South Shore is the second fastest growing area in the state. But our transportation problems are getting worse. The least we should expect is some leadership, Silva said.

The Hull selectman intends to challenge the incumbent to public discussions and debates. "I am not as familiar as Mary Jeanette, but I am a good public speaker and people will clearly understand where I stand on the issues. I believe I am articulate when it comes to expressing the needs of the South Shore. People tend to listen to me. I am backed by the leadership of the South Shore, and I have credentials here that she does not have."

He and his wife, Helena, live in Hull with their three sons, John, 10, Michael, 7, and Kevin, 3.

Flood insurance available

Owners of buildings subject to "imminent collapse or subsidence" as a result of erosion may be eligible for claim payments from the National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP) to relocate or demolish the building — if flood insurance coverage is in place before June 1.

After June 1, in order to be eligible for this coverage, flood insurance has to be in effect for two years (or the period of ownership, if less) before the building is condemned or certified to be subject to collapse of subsidence.

Before the Housing and Community Development Act of 1987 became effective, NFIP followed standard insurance industry practices and paid claims only when damage actually occurred.

Until the Federal Insurance Administration publishes final regulations, buildings are eligible for the new coverage only when they are condemned or declared uninhabitable by an appropriate state or local officials and are determined to be subject to imminent collapse.

Immediately following the completion of the show, the Smothers Brothers, their staff, as well as a couple hundred Hollywood celebrities were treated to a real New England clambake.

The clambake performed by New England Clambakes Executive Chef Dana J. Salvador of Cohasset and staff flew to ABC television studios in Hollywood, Calif., especially to cater this event. It consisted of oysters on the half-shell, jumbo shrimp with lemon slices, BBQ chicken cooked over an open fire, native Califonia corn-on-the cob, tossed garden salad, hot boiled 1½ lb. Massachusetts lobsters, hot Maine steamers and mussels, served with hot drawn butter, for dessert, ice chilled watermelon was served.

As a result of the function the Smothers Brother will be endorsing New England Clambakes in an upcoming advertising campaign.

□ The Webelos had a super weekend recently, under the direction of Earl Bestick Sr. The six Cohasset boys that attended were Grant Emde, John Kasameyer, David Marr, Jason Murphy, Greg Shultz and David Hanson. Bear (rank) John Kasameyer, with his feathers, also Den Chief Earl Bestick Jr. were there. Jeff Forsdick was the Webelo leader. The weekend took place at Camp Child in Plymouth, and it was for the whole district. There were 74 boys and 75 adults; the boys learned skills, camped overnight at eight stations, had a chicken barbeque that was supplied by the camp, and ended the weekend with a tug-of-war. Sounds like fun—don't you wish you were young enough to be a Webelo? If you are, perhaps you can get in touch with Mr. Bestick . . . then you can go to Camp Child next year.

Editorial

Interesting campaign

A few weeks ago, it became evident that a local tradition was to be challenged.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, the state representative for Hingham, Hull and Cohasset for the past 12 years, will face her first election opponent since 1982.

In the next few weeks, we will attempt to present as much news space as the two candidates require, and we can allot to this issue. It is important that our readers are well served, yet in addition to this important race, there are many other local issues of concern to us.

For many townspeople and those in the local press corps, Mary Jeanette has been a familiar face in our neighborhood. How she ever makes it to the Hingham and to the Cohasset Memorial Day parades, which are held at approximately the same time, is beyond most people's comprehension and logistical planning.

But that is Mary Jeanette, who has always possessed an uncanny knack of being everywhere at all times.

John Silva, familiar to those who have followed the coastal towns' fight against the MWRA to locate a sewer treatment pipe off Hull's coast, or to those who follow the South Shore Coalition's actions, has an uphill battle, he admits. Although he is well known throughout the South Shore and on Beacon Hill, he may not yet be a recognizable face in the neighborhoods of Cohasset or Hingham.

He is a Hull resident, and a selectman there. He recently won re-election to the board, winning a return to that seat by more than a two-to-one margin.

He is knowledgeable about the issues affecting the three towns, as chairman of the recently reactivated tri-town commission, and the increasingly powerful regional organization, the South Shore Coalition. He may not have Mary Jeanette's personal recognition factor, but he is experienced and widely respected for his political views and actions.

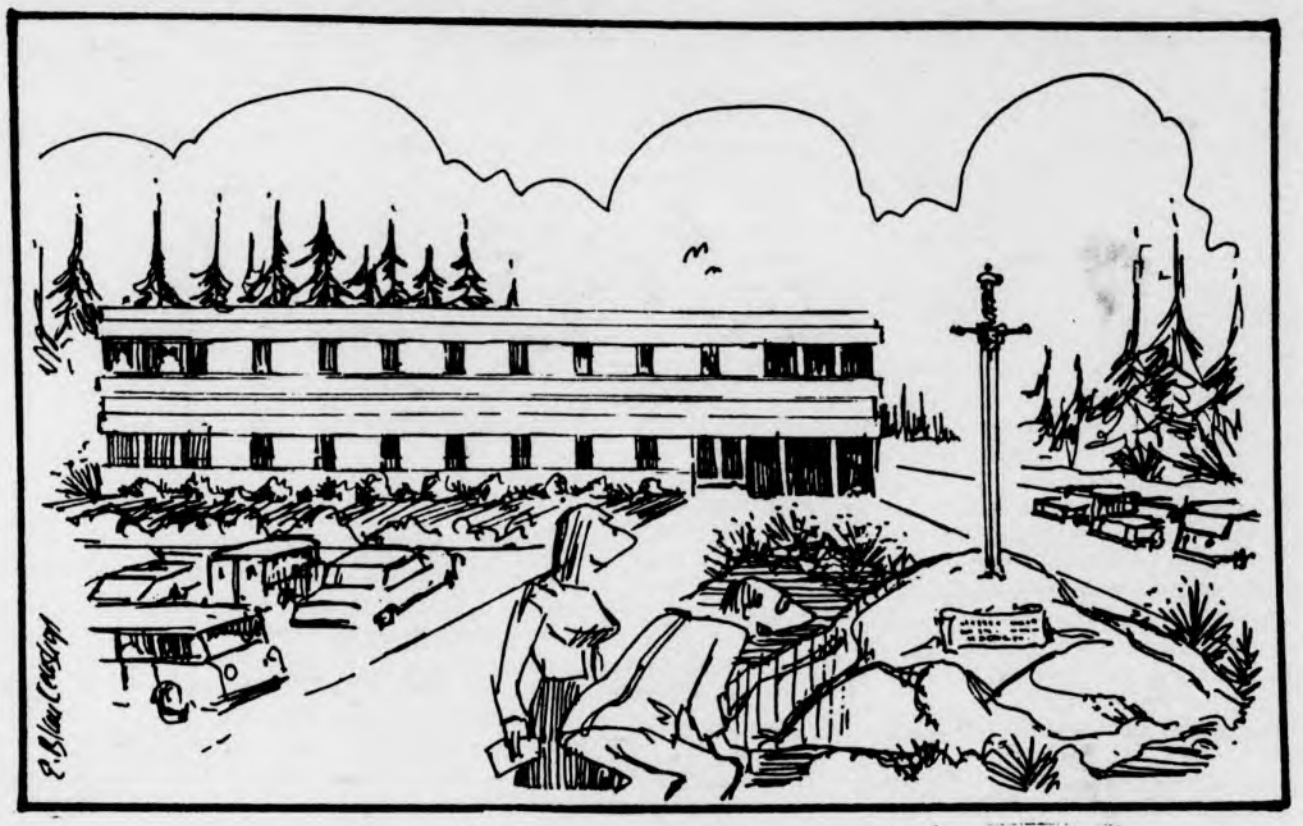
It will be a very interesting campaign, as both candidates battle hard for victory. Silva has promised to challenge his opponent to public debates and forums. There is no better way for the public to see their candidates in action, than behind a podium at a debate.

The electorate of Hingham, Hull and Cohasset must also maintain the responsibility of being an informed, knowledgeable voter. They should read what candidates have to say about the issues, and listen when the candidates speak about the important events that affect our lives.

We are all concerned about viable solid waste management, state aid to local towns, water and environmental problems. We must demand that our candidates be aware and present their solutions to these concerns.

A campaign need not sink into mindless name-calling and mud-slinging. We don't believe that will happen here. We believe both candidates will conduct an issue-oriented, yet exciting campaign, one that will excite the electorate and bring them back to the polls in November.

A new million-dollar plus, 18,000 square-foot building on Marshfield's Enterprise Drive is now the home of the 16 Mariner Newspapers. Large open spaces, walls of windows frame expanded production and advertising spaces combined for first time with state-of-the art high volume printing plant. 'Our 4th move in 16 years,' said publisher David S. Cutler. 'We expect to be here a good long time...'



"...It's said legend has it whoever shall remove the sword with ease is destined to rule in a world of publishing..."

Concerned citizens meeting June 9

Letters

To the Editor:

This is an open letter to the citizens of Cohasset:

The citizens of Cohasset have reason to rejoice! We have won another battle against the dumping of unknown refuse in our watershed. Many of you are aware that there are ongoing legal battles between Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL) and the town of Cohasset. You may not be aware, however, that the Mass. Court of Appeals has upheld a prior Land Court decision that CHL is operating illegally. Specifically, CHL is operating beyond its zoning permit.

The Barry Brothers, owners of CHL, however, have ignored the Court's rulings. They continue to run the dump in defiance of their site assignment, in excess of DEQE slope requirements, with no real insurance, and within the Lily Pond watershed protection boundry. Now, they are attempting to divert the town's attention and legitimize their illegal operations by offering the town of Cohasset free dumping at CHL for two years; in short, they are seeking to bribe the town.

We hope we can count on the officials of this town, as well as the residents, to rise to this latest issue. We hope our town officials will not be seduced by a seemingly FREE offer. That would undermine the health and well being of all of us. We urge immediate rejection of this proposal. Our town just has to say: "No. . .No Dumping. . .No Thanks".

Citizens of Cohasset, join us in saying: "No more dumping in our watershed." We urge you to take action against this proposal by writing your selectmen/women and your board of health members. Concerned Citizens of Cohasset is sponsoring an information night in the boardroom of Super Stop & Shop on Thursday, June 9 at 7:30 p.m. We urge you all to attend. Come and learn. Come with your questions and ideas.

A tribute to Cohasset's fallen soldiers

The Kevin Barry Bagpipers lead the Memorial Day procession along Main Street.

Bugler John Atkinson performs taps at Central Cemetery along with bagpiper Anthony DiCarlo.

The daughters and grandchildren of Cohasset veterans carried flowers that were thrown into the harbor in memory of US Naval War Veterans.

ceremonies, a volley of gun shots were fired above the war memorials. "Taps" was performed by John Atkinson, and a single bagpiper played "Amazing Grace."

Under increasingly grey skies, the parade marchers and cheering spectators walked to the Common, where they were greeted at the war memorial by Rev. Clifford Cutler.

In his brief prayer, Rev. Cutler urged residents "not to rest until all the people of all lands have true freedom."

The carillon bells at St. Stephen's Church were silent as once again a firing squad let out a round of shots high into the air. As they echoed throughout the common, "Taps" was played, and then a chorus of "Amazing Grace."

The parade marchers proceeded down Elm Street to the harbor and their final destination.

At the Veterans Memorial, Past Commander

Wigmore thanked the large crowds and the number of marchers who participated in the day's events.

Rev. John Keohane thanked the Legion Post "for providing us with a way to express our gratitude for those who have gone before us. No greater love is there, than a man lays down his life for a friend.

"With gratefulness, we keep in our hearts the memory of those who have gone before us."

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray entered the parade along Elm Street after participating in the Hingham Memorial Day ceremonies. Wearing her World War II Womens' Marine Corps uniform, Rep. Murray recalled that the images of Memorial Day, poppies in the field along a line of white grave markers, "marks one of the most violent times of U.S. history," she said.

"The names and places change of the soliders who have fought and died," she stated. "they were our sons, brothers, husbands and neighbors. They were bank clerks and carpenters and fishermen. But they shared one objective - to protect our freedom. The price of freedom does not come cheaply."

Rep. Murray read from a poem which hangs in the chapel at West Point. It reads:

They did give that you
Might live,
Our country.
Their lives in the air
When the need was there;
Their bodies to the sea
When that had to be;
Their sweat and toil,
Their bodies to the soil,
Before they would yield
A rock, a pebble, or a feld of this,
Our country.

At the conclusion of Monday morning's ceremonies, American Legion Post past commander, William Spiers, presented bugler John Atkinson with a certificate of appreciation for dedicated service to the Post. For the past several years, Atkinson has voluntarily performed on Memorial Day.

Gold Star mothers Margaret Keating and Laurentine Lyons placed a commemorative wreath at the base of the harbor war memorial. Several young children dropped bouquets of flowers into the harbor in memory of those veterans who lost their lives at sea.

The Deer Hill School band completed the day's event by performing "The Star Spangled banner." With assistance from the Boy Scouts, flags at the veterans' park were raised from half-staff. A final rendition of "Taps" was performed as the flags waved in the brisk wind.

Joining the Boy Scouts in the Memorial Day ceremonies were the local Girl Scouts and Brownies, Cub Scouts and Tiger Cubs.

Cohasset selectmen James Gallagher, Martha Gjesteby, past American Legion commander Rocco Laugelle, and Burt Pratt, wearing his World War II Army master sergeant's uniform, also participated in the parade and ceremonies.

Science Center campaign update

"South Shore Natural Science Center's million dollar building campaign couldn't have had a better start!" exclaimed the Center's Director, Faith Burbank of Hingham. "We received a challenge gift of $50,000 that required two other matching gifts. . .and it was matched within three weeks. We are delighted!"

The original challenge gift was from the Anderson Family Foundation in Norwell. Eric Anderson of Halifax, president of Anderson Insulation and an active trustee at the Science Center, said the terms of the gift were that it was a $50,000 gift if the challenge was matched twice, or a $30,000 gift if it remained unmatched. "A million dollar campaign on the South Shore is very ambitious," said Anderson. "To accomplish it, people will have to think big, especially for the 'lead' gifts, as the major donations are called. My family and I thought the most helpful thing we could do for the campaign would be to encourage some early major gifts. We are pleased that it has worked out so well. The Science Center is an excellent organization and an important resource on the South Shore."

Anderson is also chairing the gifts-in-kind portion of the campaign, working with South Shore contractors who are donating materials and assistance with the actual building process, rather than making cash donations.

lot of applications. It takes time to act on them.

"I can understand her comment. Other places seem to have it more easy."

Gjesteby noted that she spoke to Anthony twice last week.

She knows the town of Cohasset," she said.

"She has friends here. She is no stranger to Cohasset."

Selectman Rocco Langelle had a different opinion. "All I can say is that selectmen signed a housing agreement and have gone as far as we could," he said. "I think we've bent over backwards from the first meeting we had in Boston. As far as we're concerned, selectmen and all other town departments have cooperated 100 percent."

School news

Heritage Musical Festival

This past weekend, CHS' senior chorus attended the Heritage Musical Festival in Rhode Island. They competed in three categories, and did quite well.

The Show Choir received first place and a "superior" rating. The Show Choir consists of: (soprano) Melissa Greiner, Melissa Nothnagle, Celia Mullen, Pam Haase; (alto) Amanda Sweeney, Maggie Moore, Laurel Collins; (tenor) Jay Cameron; (bass) Derek Lacks, Danny Farwell.

The two numbers performed were "The Varsity Drag," choreographed by Melissa Greiner, and "Everybody Loves My Baby," choreographed by Amanda Sweeney. All costumes worn by the Show Choir were designed and made by Amanda Sweeney and Mrs. Contis.

The Swing Choir, consisting of the full chorus and accompanied by Celia Mullen, received third place and an "excellent" rating. The numbers performed were "Moon Glow" and "Trickle Trickle."

The Madrigal Choir, again consisting of the full chorus and accompanied by Celia Mullen, received a participation award (missing third place by two points) and an "excellent" rating. The numbers performed were "Come Let Us Start A Joyful Song" and "Sing We and Chant It."

All in all, everyone had a great time. The highlights seemed to have been a late breakfast at Denny's, a game of Red Rover, Plymouth Middle School, sighting Robert Plant's limo, and...twinkies(?!?).

The chorus wishes to thank John Foster, the bus driver.

P.S. Everybody who was there deserves a twinkie!!!

Art center scholarships

Scituate High School senior James Young has been named the recipient of the South Shore Art Center's $1,000 Fred E. Bergfors Scholarship.

Along with Young, fellow classmate Jennifer L. McMurrer has been named to receive the $200 MacIvor Reddie Scholarship.

The recipient of the $500 Marion Huse Scholarship is a Rockland High School senior Jennifer L. Sullivan.

Honorable mentions have been designated to Jason J. Carreiro of South Weymouth High School, Janet Hlozik of Canton High School and Susan Lynch of Quincy High School.

Twenty-two portfolios were received from seniors representing high schools in Scituate, Rockland, Weymouth, Norwell, Quincy, Canton, Milton, and Kingston. Jurying for the Bergfors Scholarships, named for lifelong Quincy resident, businessman and civic leader Fred E. Bergfors, was Mrs. Constance Bergfors Rice, a trustee of the fund. Selection of the recipients of the Marion Huse and MacIvor Reddie scholarships was done by artists Serena Brundige and Susan deMichele.

Young will attend the Corcoran School of Art in Washington, D.C.; Sullivan, the University of Hartford; and McMurrer, the Rhode Island School of Design.

Marine adventure week in Maine

Calling all kids ages 8 to 12 years!

Join naturalists from South Shore Natural Science Center for a week exploring the marine habitats of Kennebunk, Maine! This Aug. 14 to 19 adventure will be filled with fun — investigating tidepools and beaches, viewing whales and sea birds from aboard the 75-foot Indian Head, participating in early morning bird watches, visiting the Maine Aquarium and more. Campers will also set up marine aquariums, play natural history games, make crafts such as seaweed prints and marine seascapes, and enjoy evening campfires and stargazing.

The group will "camp" indoors in an A-frame cabin, and campers will assist in all meal preparations and clean-up.

Led by naturalists Sandra Palmer and Tryg Swift, this exciting marine adventure should not be missed! Space is limited, so register early.

Parents will be responsible for transportation to and from the camp, located two hours north of Boston.

Registration fee is $295 for members and $325 for non-members. There will be a non-refundable $25 fee for cancellations after July 23. Payment must be made in full to reserve a space.

Everyone interested in Marine Adventure Week is invited to attend a general orientation meeting at the center June 29 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. A mandatory meeting for registrants and parents will be held at the center Aug. 1 from 7 to 8 p.m.

The deadline for registration is Aug. 1.

Please call Sandra Palmer at 659-2559 for further information.

A non-profit environmental education institution, South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane in Norwell. The Center is open Mondays to Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays and most holidays from 1 to 4 p.m. Trails, exhibits, store, library. Free admission.

A new study area designed and built by Deer Hill custodian John Jacobucci is well used in the outside courtyard by (1) Annie Theriault, Devon Noonan and Gina Rosano. (Chris Edwards)

Paper chains link love of reading for students

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Someone call the Guiness Book of World Records!

The Deer Hill School has a paper chain link that just may interest them.

As of late last week, a paper chain wound itself around the entire school building. But what makes this phenomenon even more intriguing is that each of the 2,192 paper links represents one book read by a Deer Hill student since February.

Most students in the elementary school have finished at least four books each, librarian Marge Murphy explained as students assisted her in ceremoniously closing the last link in the paper chain.

By last Wednesday, students at the school had carefully measured the paper chain. It was 255 meters, or approximately 767 feet in length.

"And now they've asked me to start another one around the other side of the hall," Murphy said in amazement and shaking her head.

But what is even more wonderous, she stated, is the enthusiasm for reading this program has generated.

The Deer Hill Reading is Fundamental program began with some help from John O'Leary at Cohasset High School and Supt. Stephen Hart. After discussing the project with Murphy, the two administrators applied for a federal grant for the program. Together with money donated by the PSO, and a discount from Scholastic Books, the project began in February.

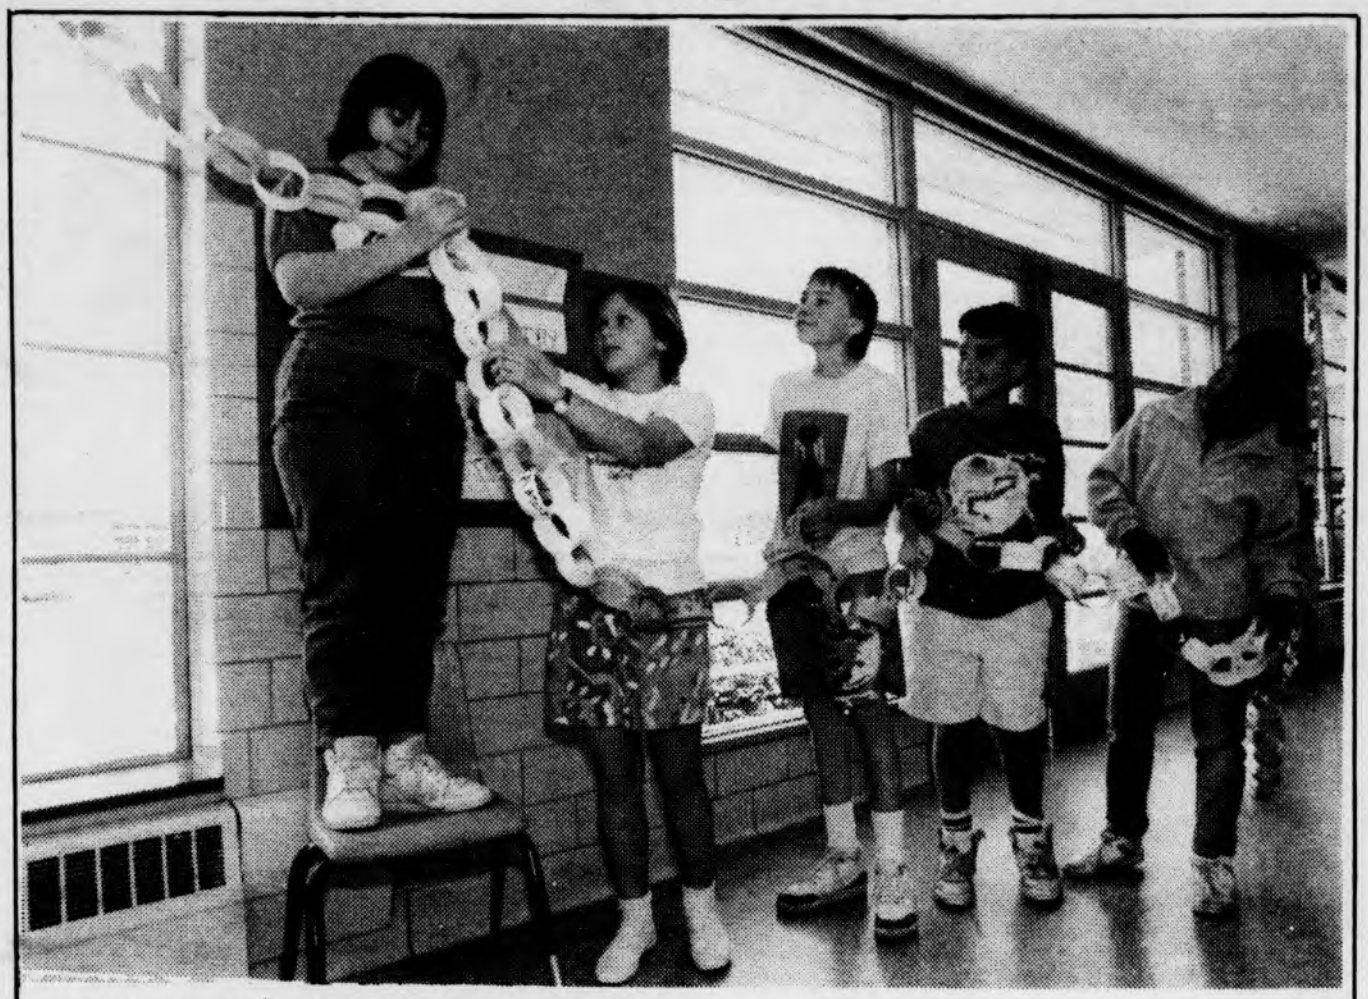
As Murphy explained, each student was allowed to select a book to read. Once the student read the book, he or she notified the school librarian. Murphy would ask each student a question relating to a specific incident in the book, and if answered correctly, the student kept the book.

"You mean it's mine?" they would gasp, the librarian mimicked. "That's what they loved about this program. They read a book they loved, and then they actually got to keep it. It really mushroomed into something bigger than I imagined."

Along with the book, the student reader was given a link. The name of the book and its reader was written upon the link which was then attached to the previous book title along the Deer Hall corridors.

"These kids are so enthusiastic about reading," Murphy exclaimed. "They want to tell you everything about the book. They don't want to stop at just one question."

The librarian said she is familiar with all the books ordered in the program. Since she placed the order, she read brief descriptions of the stories. Others, she admitted with delight, she took home to read herself.



Joining the last links in the Reading Is Fundamental program at the Deer Hill School are: (l to r) Bonnie Krveger, Rebecca Golden, Brendan Mulligan, Thomas Greco and Christopher Jordan. Chris Edwards)

"There are a lot of authors and titles I know they love, so I ordered a lot of them. These kids love the babysitting club series by Ann Martin. They relate actual babysitting situations, and the reader has to decide how best to handle the problem."Although she would be the last to admit it, Murphy's colleagues credit the librarian with the success and enthusiasm of the school's reading program.

"She's awesome," sixth grade teacher Larry Shultz explained as he walked past the library with his students. "This is all because of her."

Teaching assistant Linda Henderson noted that without Murphy, there would be no special reading projects. "She's incredible," Henderson whispered.

Murphy, who refused to listen to the accolades, said the success of the Reading is Fundamental program was because of school-wide participation. "Every student was involved," she explained. "Special needs kids, students from the Collaborative . . . everyone had the opportunity to read."

And the neatest thing, according to the school librarian, was that the kids never considered it a contest. "It was not a measurement of how fast or how much each student read," she stated. "They simply wanted to read a book they would enjoy, and to bring it home. I loved the idea, and so did the students."

As one last gesture, the students were asked to bring in postcards. With assistance from a directory listing all the elementary schools in the country, the students are going to select a school. On the postcard, each student will write a synopsis of the book and send it to the various schools. The goal is for other students to share their enthusiasm for the story, Murphy explained.

"It's really amazing to see how much they have enjoyed reading," she exclaimed. "They want to tell you everything about the book. Then they can't wait to go onto to the next."

South Shore Art Center grant recipient

Two Massachusetts arts foundations have awarded funding to the South Shore Art Center for "Artist in the Gallery" and the center's summer arts festival.

Both the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities and the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council have designated the center, at 119 Ripley Road, to receive funding.

The grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities covers general programming and the arts education at the center. This agency also most recently awarded the center a technical assistance grant to conduct a market research survey to identify current and potential audiences and to provide the center with marketing information for its programming.

The Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council funding (pending approval) is administered through its local South Shore councils in Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Stoughton.

The Hingham Arts Lottery Council has designated funding for "Artist in the Gallery," a program which will bring together audiences and artists for discussions of artwork on display in the center's Bancroft Invitational Gallery. The idea is to generate educational discussions of the various art media with the artists involved in exhibiting at the center.

The "Artist in the Gallery" program will be launched during the center's June exhibit, "3 Photographers," featuring works by Amy Whorf, David Saul and Krisanne Carnovale. Whorf will lead a discussion for Hingham junior and senior high school students and for a senior citizens group.

The remainder of the funding from the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council is to be applied to the South Shore Arts Festival sponsored by the center and held each year on the Cohasset Common. This summer's June 24-26 festival will feature musical and dramatic performances, juried and members' art exhibits, children's drop-in workshops, artist demonstrations, a juried craft show and much more.

Funding from the Councils of Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Pembroke and Rockland will be used to cover the cost of the performances. The cash awards for the juried art exhibits will be funded by the Councils of Cohasset, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke and Stoughton; the children's workshops will be funded by the Councils of Hull and Scituate.

Karin Bartow, development manager of the center, explained that because of such grants the center is able to offer the festival performances free of charge to the public, and attract talented Boston, New England and South Shore artists to submit their works for the juried exhibits.

Lambert to serve in Ohio mission

Dr. Brent W. Lambert, noted eye surgeon of the South Shore, has been asked by his church — The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints — to serve as mission president for the next three years in the church's Ohio Cleveland Mission.

He will be in charge of the missionary activity in northern Ohio, devoting himself full-time to church work. His wife, Kitty will accompany him in this assignment which will start in June.

Lambert, a Mormon, has held many positions in this lay church, the most recent being Gospel Doctrine teacher for the Hingham Ward (congregation), and he served as Stake President of the Hingham Mass. Stake for nearly ten years. He was formerly a bishop.

In his professional life, Dr. Lambert is one of the founders of Eye Health Services of Weymouth

Paintings by Plympton artist

Paintings by Plympton artist Janet Norton are presented by the South Shore Art Center at the Quincy Co-Operative Bank Galleria in Cohasset.

Norton works in acrylics, clay, oil, pastel, watercolor and graphics. She is well known for her murals; notably at Howard Johnson's, Boston and the Five Cents Savings Bank in Plymouth and for her book illustrations, jacket design, etc.; for which she won the publishers award. Her illustrations include those in "The Call of the Phoenix Vignettes of Old and New China" and those in "My Corner of New England" by the author Robert M. Benett.

Norton's work is in public and private collections in Europe and the United States and appears in juried and one-artist shows in New England. She is an active member in all the art associations from Cohasset to Plymouth.

The show is open to the public during banking hours and will continue through May and June.

Vo-tech reports '88 budget surplus

South Shore Vo-Tech School Treasurer Robert Kelley Jr. reported an estimated $20-$30,000 surplus in the budget this year.

The surplus comes from excess funds for pupil transportation, he said. The regional committee voted not to dispense the surplus until further review was taken.

In his school lunch report, Kelley reported a loss of $4,000 due to a decline in state and federal government participation, and a ten percent drop in lunch sales.

In his chairman's report, Robert Molla Jr. informed the board of an obligation to submit to state specifications on asbestos removal.

Molla suggested the board begin collecting bids for cost estimates. The board must begin removal by October. Molla reminded the board that an August inspection found asbestos in the boiler room. He underlined the fact that a more comprehensive inspection may reveal a larger problem and stressed speedy action.

Molla urged that "everyone start watching every nickel, begin thinking positively, and think of the unit as whole, not just with individual concerns."

Superintendent Clifford W. Easton gave an update on the newly-formed smoking committee. Easton said the committee (made up of smokers and non-smokers alike) has been working hard to comply with state law, while seeking out compassionate solutions.

The board approved revisions of Facility Use Regulations that include a ban on the practice of hazing.

The committee also declared two junior sailboats as surplus, and approved sale of parts of a 1977 Scout 4x4 to Tim Easton for $100.

In bid awards Paul Kiley, a C.P.A. from Hanover, was awarded the annual financial audit with a bid of $6,000.

Colony, Inc. of Hingham was awarded the maintenance of welding equipment for the year.

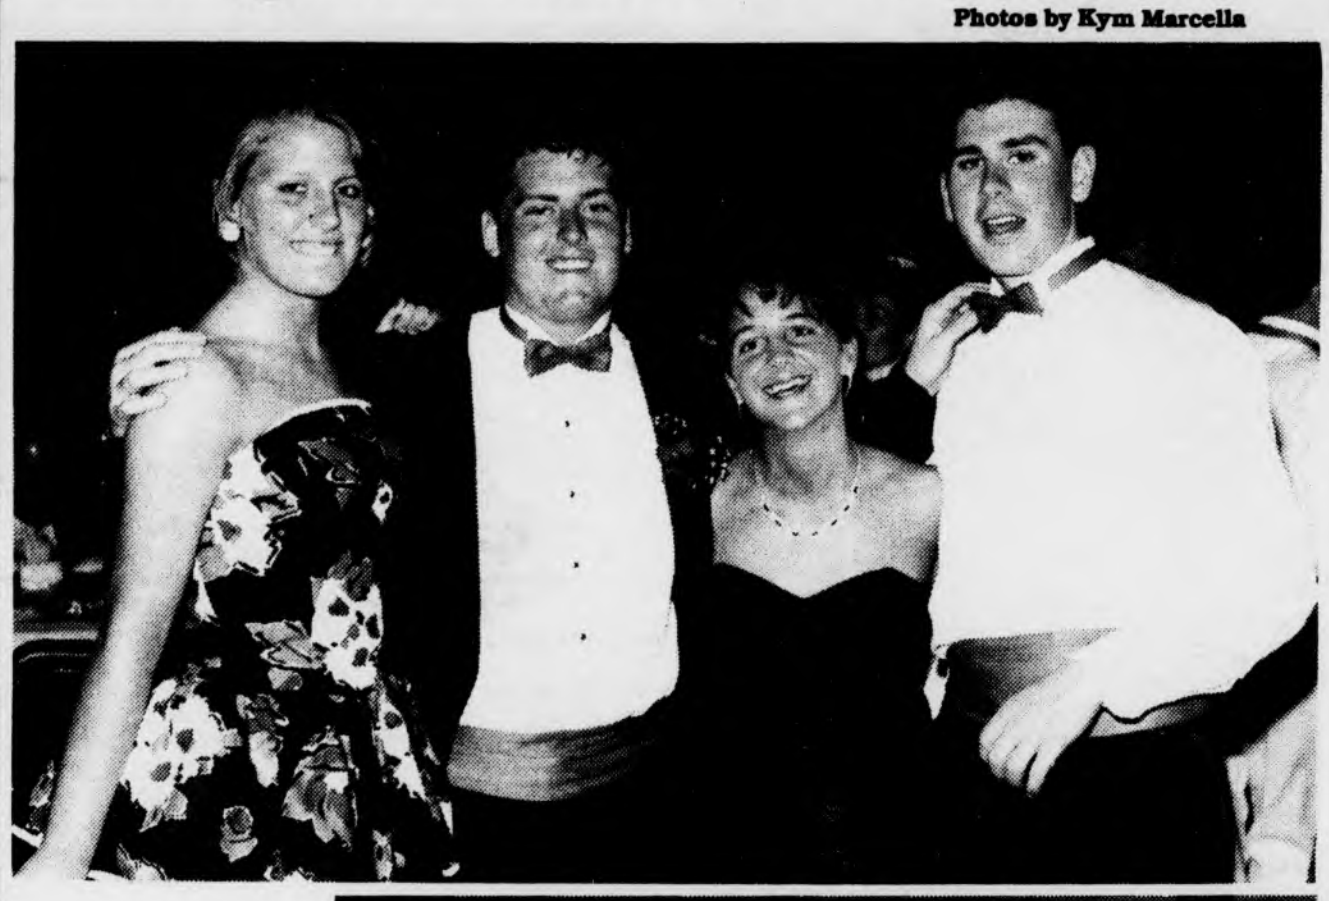
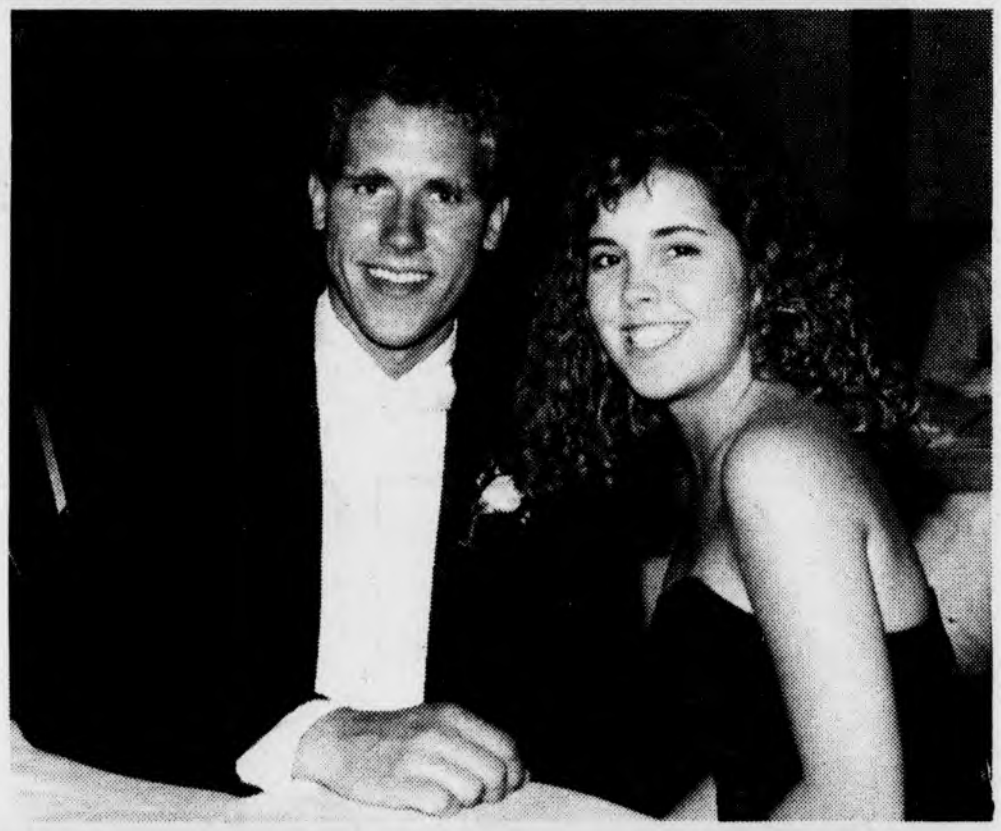
A night of music and romance

Photos by Kym Marcella

John O'Brien and his lovely date, Laurel Collins, danced the night away at the CHS prom.



A happy crowd gathered Tuesday night at the Westin Hotel for the Senior Prom, including (l to r) Coleby Mantz, Jeff Hartwell, Holly Pompeo and Tom Larson.



Derek Lacks and Missy Nothnagle stopped stargazing long enough to oblige the photographer.

A great time was had by everyone attending the prom. Now it's on to graduation!

Postseason soccer hopes still alive

Two wins over previously undefeated opponents marked the ninth week of Coastal League play for Cohasset youth soccer. The victories — boys' Under 19 over Plymouth and boys' Under 12-1 over Hingham — kept both squads mathematically alive for the postseason playoffs leading to the state championships.

Under 19's win Monday morning at Milliken Field was sparked by outstanding defense. Goalkeeper Joel Reidy registered a shutout in the 3-0 victory, with strong support from backs Ian Smart, Jim Gallagher, Ned Chase and Steve Myers. Kostas Roukanakis scored the first, and winning, goal picking up a rebound on an error by the Plymouth goalie. Brothers Brian and David Shultz played some nice give-and-go for the second, and Jay Staunton scored the third.

Steve Endris' 12-1 boys upset Hingham at Hingham, as Eric Henry headed the ball in off a Jeremiah Stevenson corner kick with two minutes to play. Scott Theriault scored Cohasset's first, which tied the game. "We play Plymouth in our last game next week," said Endris. "We need to win, and we need help from whoever's playing Hingham." Cohasset, with a loss and a tie, trails Hingham by a point.

Under 14-2, finding scoring punch from the players just added to the roster, rolled over Kingston 6-1. Coach Ed Gromada's team had tied their opponents earlier in the season, and Willie Adams and Mike Reynolds made a big difference. Adams, in his first game of the season, scored four goals — the most by any Cohasset player in a Coastal League game this year. Reynolds added two, and Chris Goodman had a strong game in goal.

"We're pleased we could find a way to include them," said league coordinator Larry Shultz. Shultz also noted with the season winding down — many teams play their final game this week — parents and players had to remember to return their uniforms to their coaches. "We'll recycle them for as long as we can," Shultz said.

Boys Under 10-1 remained in the playoff hunt, too, earning a forfeit victory over Kingston. Its showdown is Saturday, against undefeated Duxbury. With two ties, 10-1 needs a win. "True," said coach Terry Kahn, "but win or lose, we've had an unbelievable season." Kahn praised his assistant coaches Kevin O'Connor, Roger Crafts and Peter Mangan for their efforts.

In other boys' play Under 10-2 fell to Plymouth 4-0 despite good performances from Steve Kovach, Ryan Staszko and Sam Goedecke. "We started with only eight players," said coach Paul Cotter. "By the time we had 11, we were down 3-0. But Jon Lacks was outstanding in goal."

Members of the Boys Under 14 Team II.

12-2 were demolished by Duxbury 8-0, and 14-1 lost to Plymouth 5-0. "Mike Equi and Brooks Doten did good jobs though," said coach John Kinchla.

Under 16 were edged by Marshfield 1-0 in a well-played contest. Midfielder Greg Nourie stood out for Cohasset.

The top girls' result was turned in by Under 14-1, which beat a tough Norwell squad 1-0. Tanya Peterson scored the only tally after shutting out the opposition in the first half. Michelle Woodland guarded the nets in the second half.

Under 14-2 had another outstanding effort end in frustration. Coach Jack O'Brien's team fell to Plymouth 3-2 despite Kathleen O'Brien's sixth goal of the season, and Lisa Coates' second. Sarah Thompson assisted on both scores.

Under 10-1 girls fell to Hanover 2-0, despite great goalkeeping from Megan Fahey. Midfielder Chloe Chittick, and forwards Liz Goode and Tammy Maitland also played well, said coach Sandy Theriault.

10-2 girls lost to Kingston 3-0, getting good play from Laura Slotnick, Andrea Grew and Jennifer Cellucci. "A good effort," said coach Kevin O'Donnell, "considering we had a reduced squad."

The holiday blues affected girls 12-1 too, as they lost to Middleboro 6-0. 12-2 girls did a bit better, falling to Kingston 3-1. Coach Nino D'Urse praised the field work of Jessica Sammon and Carina McMakin. Andrea Mercurie scored the goal.

The older girls' team were particularly hardhit by the holiday weekend. Under 16 lost to Marshfield 5-1, with Jen McKenna scoring on an assist by Cory DeSantis. And Under 19, with only nine players, fell to Hingham 6-0. Coach Irene Lord said Katie Murphy, Kristin Ellinger and Letitia Linsley played well in defeat.

Cohasset track finishes in third place

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Girls' Track

While most people were sun-bathing at the beach or turning over those sizzling hamburgers on the grill last Saturday, the Cohasset girls' varsity track team found themselves in an enviable situation.

Before the EMASS Class D State Championship Track Meet at Ashland, Norwell's star athlete, Karen Phillips, strained a groin muscle during the 300-meter trials. All of a sudden, questions were circulating around the track surface that Norwell's 54-meet winning streak and third consecutive Class D title were indeed in jeopardy. This provided the impetus for Cohasset for a possible EMASS Class D title.

Well, not quite. Faced with the possibility of ending her career a week early, the senior Phillips ignored the pain as she took first place in two events (300-meter hurdles in 45.5 and the long jump with a 16'10" leap) to lead Norwell to first place with 89 points. Stoneham finished second with 43, while Cohasset took third with 35.

Phillips edged out Cohasset's Jen Coley by less than a foot in the long jump. The Cohasset all-around athlete jumped 15'11" to finish in second place.

Meanwhile Sonya Butler recorded another second place finish for Cohasset. She crossed the line in the 400 in 59.7 seconds.

Tisha Wallace took sixth place in the shot put with a toss of 30'5".

In addition, Cohasset's 400 and 1600 relay team each placed fourth in their respective events.

In short, Cohasset's third-place finish is considered an outstanding accomplishment since they were competing against 40 schools in the Class D division.

Softball

However, the other noteworthy story occurred last week when senior Deb Hartley pitched a no-hitter to lead Cohasset's softball team to a 15-0 league victory over visiting Sandwich on Friday.

Barbara Lagrotteria and Kristen Ellinger combined to go six-for-six with four runs batted in. Teammate Sara Bishop went two-for-four with two RBI, while catcher Allison Ludlow had a hit and drove in two runs for the Skippers (3-14).

Hartley, who walked four, pitched a complete game, 14-5 victory over Abington the previous day. She added a three-run double in that game, while Ellinger had a double and two RBI and Kara Mannion and Lagrotteria each had two hits.

Baseball

Jim Maguire and David Shultz each had a single and two RBI to lead visiting Cohasset over Hull, 8-5. The win snaps a two-game losing streak for Cohasset during the week.

Craig Mulcahy pitched three innings of two-hit relief for the Skippers (7-12), while teammate Jeff Bryant added two hits and an RBI.

Meanwhile, Shultz continues his onslaught at the plate as he collected two hits, including a solo home run, in a 9-3 loss to Sandwich last Tuesday.

Boys' Tennis

The Cohasset boys' varsity tennis team rolled up two league victories last week, disposing of Abington twice, 4-1 on Thursday and 5-0 shutout on Friday.

On Thursday, Fred Willshire survived a three-set (6-0, 5-7, 6-4) match and Derek Lacks won a second-set tie-breaker (6-3, 7-6, 8-6) to lead Cohasset (14-2) to its victory at home.

On Friday, senior Rich Redick won his 10th straight match at first singles, sparking to a SSL sweep at Abington.

Girls' Tennis

Michelle Massa secured the pivotal point, avenging an earlier-season loss to Sheila Reilly and helping Cohasset improve to 8-6 with its league victory at home, 3-2.

Results:

Singles: Geeta Prasad (A) defeated Katie Ryan (C), 6-3, 6-4; Massa (C) d. Reilly (A), 7-6 (8-6), 6-2; Amanda Church (C) d. Lori Iacovelli (A), 6-2, 6-1.

Doubles: Noreen Murray and Julie North (A) d. Katie Lord and Katie Murphy (C), 7-6 (8-6), 7-6 (8-6); Sophie Redfield and Ellen Schramm (C) d. Valerie Norton and Lotta Lorena (A), 6-0, 6-1.

Sailing

Cohasset, with 89 points, finished fifth place in the 16th annual Mass. High School Sailing Championships last Thursday.

Skipper Colin Studds and crew Rob Lawrence competed in the A division (35 points), while Skipper Andrew Rossi and crew Chip Weier accumulated 54 points in the B section for Cohasset, despite battling unfavorable conditions on the Charles River.

Fifteen schools competed in Divisions A and B, each group sailing seven races in the two-day competition. The event was conducted by M.I.T. college coach Harold Brown.

Students told about Chinatown

I bet there are a lot of things that you don't know about Chinatown. There was alot about Chinatown that I didn't know, but most of my questions were answered when Mr. Stevens from the Historic Neighborhood Association spoke to the sixth grade social studies classes on Wednesday, May 25.

Did you know that when the Chinese came to the U.S. they started working on railroads in California? The Americans were very prejudiced against the newcomers so they decided to form a colony of their own, right here in Boston.

Mrs. Stevens showed us a number of slides that illustrated what early Chinatown was like. One particular slide that interested me was one of an early 1930s classroom. All the children in the classroom were boys who were wearing suits! The class looked very disciplined because each child had his hands folded and most of them weren't smiling. Another slide she showed us was a late 1940s classroom which was very different. This picture showed boys and girls of all ages dressed in colorful clothes. There was also a tall American flag standing at the back of the room. All the children were smiling.

Along with her slides and video, Mrs. Stevens brought a small branch of a ginkgo tree. Most of the streets in Chinatown are bordered by ginkgo trees. "The ginkgo tree can be found on any street," said Mrs. Stevens, "see if you can find one in Cohasset!" Not two days later Katie O'Connor brought in the unique fan-shaped leaf of the ginkgo tree which she found on the ground outside of St. Anthony's Church!

Overall, Mrs. Stevens' presentation was very interesting and all the children were disappointed when she ended her discussion.

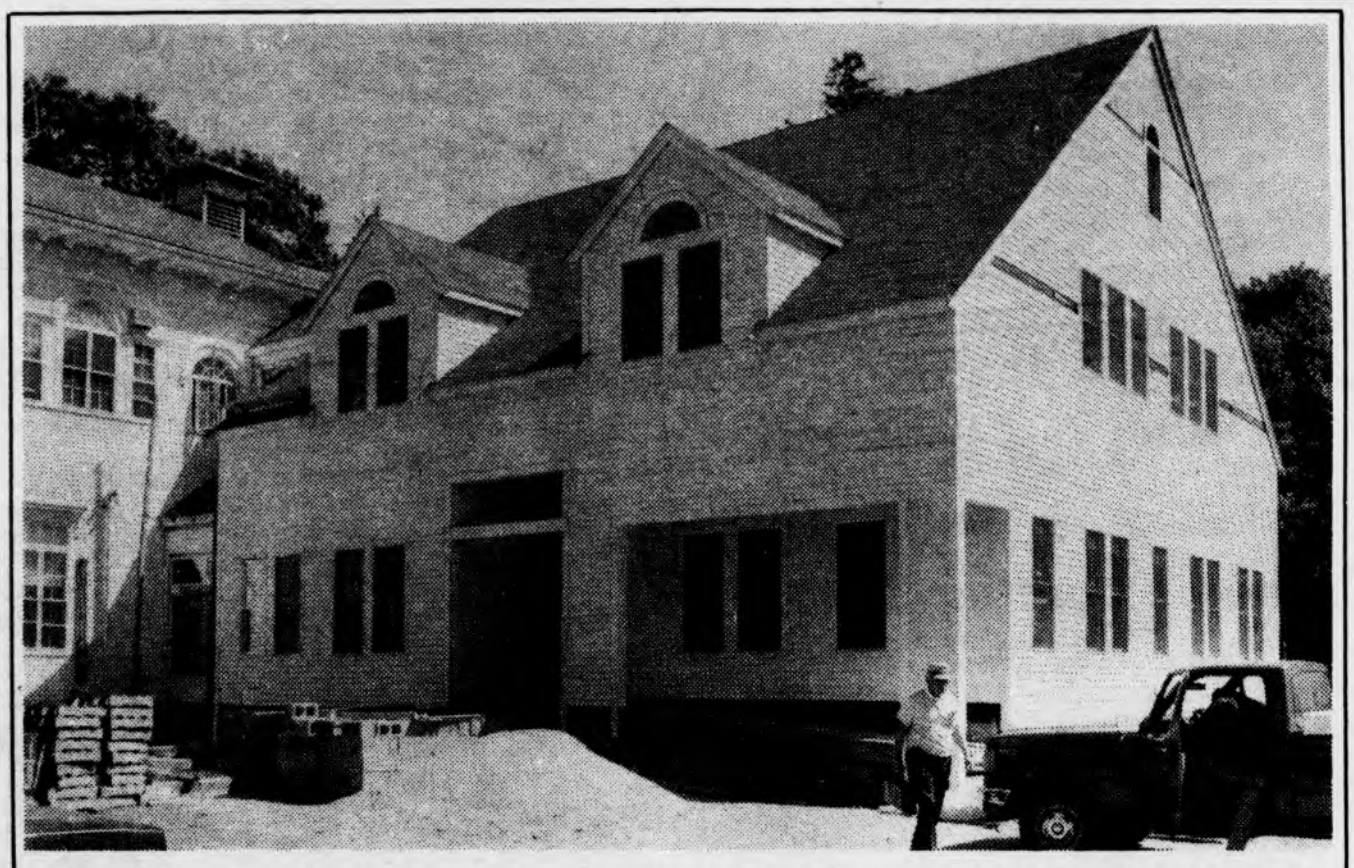
Vol: X, No. 37 | Thursday, June 9, 1988 | 50 cents



The addition at town hall is on schedule — ready for a September 1 completion date. (Kym Marcella)

Union pay scale inflates costs

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The new $1. 1 million town hall addition is on schedule and should be ready for occupancy by the end of August.

The entire project, which includes some renovations to the existing town hall, should be completed by September 1.

There have been no major changes to the original plans for the two-story addition, although some construction "extras" have been added since the project began late last fall.

That includes a $32,000 sprinkler system approved by town meeting in April for the addition, and a $600 fire door required by local fire codes.

According to project superintendent Charles MacIntosh of A.P. Whittaker and Sons, the cost of commercial construction such as this skyrockets because labor crews must be paid "prevailing wages."

The law requires that on all local, state, county or federal government construction jobs, laborers must be paid according to the prevailing wage of

A top-notch class is disappointed

The Class of 1988 will long be remembered. And when they are mentioned in conversation, superlatives will be used.

Academically, artistically and athletically they were standouts, according to the head of the guidance department at Cohasset High School.

But perhaps most importantly, John Leary stated, the recent graduates will be remembered "as an awfully nice bunch of kids."

The 1988 graduates of Cohasset High School belonged to one of the largest classes to graduate from the school in recent years. There were 123 graduates, the largest class during their four years at the school, and the greatest number that Leary can recall.

"Who knows exactly why there were so many," he said. "But it falls to 113 next year. And all the way down to kindergarten there is not another class that approaches three figures after that."

Scholastically, he said, the graduates of 1988 were an even match for last year's class which was noted for its academic talents.

There was one National Merit Scholarship finalist - an achievement attained by less than one percent of all test participants throughout the country. There were also four Commonwealth scholars in this class.

"I'd match the top ten percent of this class with any of the preceding classes at Cohasset High or private school," Leary said. "They were outstanding scholastically."

State rejects plan

The Executive Office of Communities and Development, has rejected Cohasset's latest proposed agreement regarding local housing policies.

"The proposed agreement is not acceptable to EOCD, and Cohasset's status pursuant to Executive Order 215 has not changed," stated EOCD Executive Secretary Joseph L. Flatley in a June 2 letter.

Don Andrew, executive secretary of the Cohasset Selectmen, said the planning board, selectmen and housing authority will have to get together to talk about the situation.

"It's good that we have finally gotten a response, said Andrew. "We hadn't previously.

"But it's bad because we are still at ground level."

Amy Anthony, EOCD secretary, recently criticized

Tearful embraces mark end of high school years

Tears and embraces marked the close of their high school days at Cohasset High School.

"St. Elmo's Fire", a theme from a movie marking a similar event, played on as members of the Class of 1988 bid farewell. Graduation was over, and now it was time for family parties and long, sad good-byes to classmates and friends.

One hundred and twenty-three graduates gathered Sunday afternoon at the South Shore Music Circus. Graduation took place under sunny skies and warm temperatures. The huge green tent comfortably enclosed hundreds of family members and friends who inched closer to the stage with each diploma presentation.

The graduation was over in one hour, thanks to brief but poignant speeches by the class salutatorian and valedictorian. By two o'clock that afternoon, high school was over for the senior class.

The ceremonies began with a rousing rendition of "The Star Spangled Banner" by the Cohasset High School band, accompanied by graduate, Joy Turner. Her performance was greeted with thunderous applause.

In his invocation, Rev. John Maheris implored God "to enlightene their hearts, minds and souls with the wisdom of truth. Grant them the intelligence and wisdom and enlighten their souls to know who they are . . . and keep their teachers and parents in your grace."

Class President Jason Marsac greeted his classmates in a colorful beach hat which temporarily replaced the traditional mortar board. In a few words, he greeted the graduates and introduced class salutatorian, Charles H. Sturdy.

In his address, Sturdy noted that throughout high school, their objective has been to seek the best colleges in the pursuit of future wealth. "But is this really what we want?" he questioned.

Success, he stated, does not lie in a person's net worth but in happiness and enjoyment of life. "Happiness is not in acquisitions or more possessions, but it is in our sense of accomplishment." Sturdy concluded his speech by "thanking all parents and teachers in helping us reach this point."

David Shultz, the top-ranked student in the Class of 1988, reminisced about their high school career. Although his first thoughts were to "borrrow" excerpts from a previous speech given ten years ago, Shultz opted to alphabetize his

Square review

The planning board is scheduled to continue a site plan review for a proposed five-shop building next to Jonathan Livingston Square on Route 3A, Wednesday, June 15.

At the board's June 1 meeting, Thomas Cummings, owner and developer, said that he will seek a variance to put a fence on his back property line as was requested by neighbors.

"I have no objection," Cummings said.

In response to a question from the planning board, Cummings said the stores would probably not be open past 11 p.m.

He also said that he would use asphalt shingle on the building, and would like to leave one light shining on the property over night.

Carved wooden signs are planned for the stores he said, not free standing signs.

Cummings said he would be the landlord for the building.

Board chairman Robert H. Sturdy said he was concerned about a cellar planned for the building, which he felt could be used for retail space and would affect parking requirements.

However, Cummings said the cellar "basically holds the building up" and is not for customers.

It is for plumbing, heating and mechanical equipment, Cummings said.

The June 15, meeting will cover the definition of a cellar, as well as discussion of lighting, building materials and planting at the north end of the building.

Curtis plan endorsed

The secretary of the state Executive Office of Human Services has endorsed a plan to develop the George Curtis estate into housing for elderly, low income and retarded residents.

Secretary Philip Johnston submitted a letter to the attorney general, outlining his support for a plan submitted to that office by the Curtis Estate Action Committee. The plan calls for the development of housing for low income, retarded and elderly residents on land now owned by the estate trustees. The board of trustees is attempting to legally break the will left by the late George Curtis, in which he states that his 53-acre estate should be used by the "needy, indigent and feeble persons" of the area.

The trustees want to break the will in order to sell the land and existing buildings for private development. The state attorney general must rule on the trustee's petition.

The Curtis Estate Action Committee has submitted an alternative plan to the state, which has received the support of the district attorney and town officials.

Selectmen's votes

Cohasset selectmen took the following action at their Monday, June 6, meeting at Town Hall.

• Granted permission for the Cohasset Historical Commission to reconstruct the upper portion of Minot's Light on Government Island.

Commission chairman Noel Ripley told selectmen the commission has received the old stone from the Coast Guard.

• Granted a request from the Water Commissioners for a no-parking sign on Kings Street near Lily Pond.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle noted that a number of residents fish at the pond.

• Granted a request from the Cohasset Church Council to close Long Road for a car wash Saturday, June 11, 9 a.m. to noon, and to use the common for organized games such as frisbee from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Drug response guidelines

Police Chief Joseph Kealey assured selectmen the police department follows guidelines set forth in a memorandum between school officials and the police, regarding their response to allegations of drug and alcohol possession in the schools.

In a letter to selectmen, Chief Kealey noted that police department involvement in the schools is directed by a memorandum of agreement signed by the chief, the superintendent of schools and the chairman of the school committee.

"This agreement establishes the policies and procedures in regard to police response and participation in incidents of drug and alcohol use, possession or distribution in or around our schools," he stated in the letter.

Chief Kealey submitted the letter in response to a request from Selectman Martha Gjesteby "regarding drug abuse in the town of Cohasset."

The police chief noted that a citizens committee was formed several years ago to educate the community about the dangers of drug abuse. "We believe the youth of our community have to be educated as to the dangers that will confront them," the chief stated. "This education process primarily and logically takes place in our school system and begins at the lower grade level."

Minimal asbestos

Building Inspector Donald Robbins said a recent state asbestos inspection of town-owned buildings, resulted in minimal findings. He estimated it may cost "a couple of hundred dollars at the most" to complete the recommended repairs at the town hall.

The state Department of Labor and Industries, Division of Occupational Hygiene, recently completed a one-day tour of all town-owned public buildings. They were searching throughout the buildings for exposed asbestos, particularly in heavily-traveled areas.

The state concluded that a pipe in the boiler room of the town hall was covered with a deteriorating asbestos material and recommended its removal.

In an area of the basement, the state inspectors observed a damaged area of the ceiling which exposed asbestos materials. And in the basement storage area another pipe was covered in deteriorated asbestos material. The state recommended a licensed asbestos abatement contractor be hired to remove the materials.

Although the fire curtain in the town hall auditorium contained asbestos, it was in good condition. The state did not recommend its removal "as this would increase the potential for asbestos fiber release," it stated in the report.

The buildings inspected by the state included the town hall, the fire and police stations, the board of health/planning board offices, the sewer treatment plant, the library, the highway department office and the water treatment plant.

Red tide continues

Cohasset has been informed that all shellfishing in this area is prohibited until further notice from the state Division of Marine Fisheries.

The shellfishing ban has been imposed because of Paralytic Shellfish Poison, or Red Tide. All water and flats from the north side of the east end of the Cape Cod Canal to Point Allerton in Hull are included in the widespread ban.

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

The public will have the opportunity to offer its comments on a proposal for 12 more stores at Cohasset Plaza during a continued planning board public hearing Thursday, June 15, at 7:30 p.m. at 43 Elm St.

About 10 people attended the planning board hearing Wednesday, June 1, but most of the hour and a half meeting was taken up with a site plan approval check list.

Developer Donald Staszko is proposing a single-level brick building next to his Super Stop & Shop on Rte. 3A.

Tenants will include a men's clothing store, women's clothing store, bank, jewelry store, dry cleaner and an interior decorating shop.

Entrance will be from the present access into the plaza from Rte. 3A.

Some 266 parking spaces are planned, although only 231 are required under the town's bylaw.

During last week's meeting, Staszko said that rear doors to the stores, with the same brick as the Stop & Shop, will be used for loading areas.

"It will all be done through the rear," said Staszko.

Dumpsters will be located behind screened plantings, he said.

Staszko also said that Cohasset's fire chief will determine the location of a fire hydrant, and that fire trucks will be able to maneuver around the circumference of the structure.

The developer also said he would try to save two spruce trees and an apple tree on the property.

At the request of planning board member Al Moore, Staszko said he would clear debris from the property after filing for permission from the Conservation Commission.

Planning board chairman Robert H. Sturdy told Staszko he would like more details on the landscaping, including a buffer zone on the Sohier St. side.

"We would like details such as why the material was picked, how it will be after 5, 10, 15 or 20 years," said Sturdy.

"It may or may not be the right species," he said.

"We want a solid, reasonable permanent screen that won't have to be done every 10 years. Spacing is critical too."

Max Pounder of the design review board said he was concerned about water run-off from the gables.

Pounder also said he was a "little concerned" about parking which would be "tight up against the back of the building."

Sturdy said that the public hearing would be continued in two weeks.

"We'll allow the applicant to really pursue any part of the case which has not come up yet," he said.

"We'll also make time for public comment at the next meeting."

Plans can be examined at the town clerk's office or at the planning board office, 43 Elm St.

No housing plan . . .

Cohasset for its lack of housing progress.

"Cohasset hasn't done much," she said. "That would be an understatement."

Cohasset is on a list of six towns statewide which can't receive state money because town officials don't have an approved plan for low income and moderate income housing.

The town could lose a $2.6 million sewer grant if it fails to develop a plan that meets state requirements.

In his letter, Flatley continued that "such an agreement would have the effect of resolving outstanding issues regard to the town's record in providing affordable housing and the town's failure to fulfill commitments made in an earlier agreement with EOCD.

"Resolution of these issues would result in the town becoming eligible for state discretionary funds.

"As you know, EOCD met with local officials in July and October of 1987 to negotiate the terms of a Memorandum of Agreement which was acceptable to all parties.

"The recently submitted proposal was unilaterally rewritten by town officials and does not reflect the agreements reached with local officials at the October meeting held in Rep. (Mary Jeannette) Murray's office."

Flatley told town officials to contact him to renegotiate a new agreement.

Selectmen ponder late payment leniency

Faced with the loss of their coveted moorings because they missed the fee payment deadline, several Cohasset residents asked selectmen for help.

But others cautioned that if selectmen show leniency it might set a poor precedent.

Discussion of the matter which began Monday night will continue at the Monday, June 12, meeting with Town Council Richard Henderson will give a formal legal opinion on the situation.

Called to the meeting in the middle of the discussion, Henderson said there are also conflicting regulations and bylaws regarding the mooring fee payment schedule.

However, in such a situation, the rules should be construed in favor of the private citizen, said Henderson.

"You've got to let the citizens be right for once," he said.

"The town may have to admit that it made a mistake."

Donald Andrew, executive secretary to the board of selectmen, explained the discrepancy with the dates occurred when new Harbormaster Stephen Osborne was mistakenly given an outdated copy of the town bylaws which listed June 1, rather than April 1, for the due date of the mooring fee and excise tax.

Osborne had bills made up and assumed they were correct, according to Andrews.

Nancy Snowdale, clerk in the town treasurer's office, said that the bills with a June 1 due date and a cover letter were sent out in March. No second notice was sent, she said.

As a result of nonpayment of the bill, Andrew said, 18 residents face losing their moorings.

In addition, 63 who did not reaffirm their interest lost their place on the long waiting list, he said. There are currently 42 people waiting on the commercial list and 193 on the recreational list, according to Andrew.

Fritz Pfaffman, chairman of the Harbor Study Committee, said that selectman ought to consider the ramifications if they give leniency.

Henry Dormitzer of South Main St., who has had a mooring for 29 years, was reminded of the impending deadline while speaking to the harbormaster on another matter.

"I did my best to pay it when I found out," said Dormitzer, who explained he went to Town Hall early June 2 and had his payment rejected.

"I suggest you use a little consideration in a situation like this," he said.

"It's the only situation I know where if a fee is not paid by this day, they take your property."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said, "If we allow 18 persons to retain their moorings, we ought to move out of town because they (the other people) will be on our necks."

Dormitzer added, "I've spent the last 20 years trying to do good for people."

"Good citizenship in the community is not at stake here," said Selectman Chairman Burt Pratt.

Paul Sheerin of King St., who has had a mooring for about 15 years, said he received his bill in mid-March, put it aside because it was not due until June 1, and forgot it.

"Because of the seriousness of the mooring situation, I think it requires a little more than non-payment of a bill to remove somebne's mooring," Sheerin said.

"I think it is unreasonable to have to wait 10-15 years to get a mooring back because of a mistake.

"I'm suggesting there is a problem with the system."

Al Moore of Fair Oaks Lane, who has been waiting for a mooring for eight years, said, "I don't want a mooring because someone brought in their check three hours late.

"It ought to be so clearly spelled out there is no confusion," he said.

Archie Rasmussen of Tupelo Road said he forgot about the bill.

"People do make mistakes," said Rasmussen.

He said he then attempted to meet the June 1 deadline but was caught in a traffic jam.

"I intended to be here on time. I was on the list for 10 years before I got a mooring.

"You wait for 10 years and because you are 20 minutes late, you're gone.

"People are human. They do make mistakes.

"You don't live your life in black and white, you have to live in gray.

"We're here to plea for your consideration."

Noel Ripley of South Main St., said "I've had a mooring for 22 years. I didn't pay the fee, but I think this is harsh."

"We're trying to be as even-handed as we can," said Selctman Cliff Mitman.

"People had a couple of months to pay," said Selectman Martha Gjesteby.

Noting how prized the limited harbor moorings are, Snowdale commented, "You would think they would pay the bill the day after they got it."

Peter Wood of Summer St., who has a mooring for a 23-foot boat, but has applied for a larger one, spoke against leniency for those who didn't pay the bill on time.

"I certainly have empathy for those who didn't pay, but rules are rules," said Wood. "The town has got to say we're not going to go any further. If you open up the door and make exceptions, then next year, what do you do? If I can do it (pay the bill), everyone can do it. It really upsets me that the town may do this. You have to make a decision. The harbor has to be controlled. There is a tremendous amount of people who are waiting for moorings or larger moorings."

Former Harbormaster Harry Ritter noted that last year, six people lost their moorings.

Summer theatre auditions

The Young People's Summer Theatre will hold auditions for their annual musical, "It's a Bird, It's a Plane, It's Superman!" Saturday and Sunday, June 11 and 12 from 5 - 9 p.m. at the Congregational Church in Scituate.

All youths who register are accepted into the group. There is a non-refundable registration fee of $30, which must be paid at audition night.

Auditions are only required for those interested in a singing or speaking role. Those interested in just the chorus/dance section need not audition, but should attend either evening to register if they have not previously registered by mail or in the June 6 registration night.

In addition to "Superman," a special showcase production, displaying talented kids who do not get leading roles in "Superman," will be presented. Auditions for this show will be at the same time as the others.

Scripts will be provided at auditions for dialogue readings, but auditioners should prepare a brief song for a singing audition. For more information call 826-7983.

The legacy of '88 . . .

Athletically, he noted, the legacy of 1988 will remain on the record books. "It speaks for itself," Leary said. The girls basketball team, led by a talented group of seniors, won the state championship and the boys were one game shy of holding that same title. Graduating senior Bryan Edwards set the state high school scoring record this past winter.

Perhaps the only negative Leary mentioned did not pertain to the students, but a situation which will reflect on the graduating class. It was a phenomenon of the times, he noted - an occurrence everyone learned from, but may not happen again.

At this point, only one senior will be attending an Ivy League school. Although, he noted, an outstanding class such as this usually would boast of many more.

"We're very disappointed for them and for us," Leary said, adding, "but we're very proud that at this time everyone in the class has been placed. They have a home next year. And if it isn't exactly the school of their first choice, I'm sure they'll make the best of it and go onto successful lives and careers."

Guidance counselors throughout the area are attempting to find out why many of their top students were not selected to the top colleges of their choice.

"So far, the consensus is that for years kids in the northeast part of the country have been aplying to the best colleges in the northeast. But these colleges have been dealing with a declining teenaged population, so this year they began vigorous marketing campaigns to attract the top students from all over the country," he explained. "they have been encouraging applications from outside the northeast, so the competition was more keen than usual."

The guidance department was aware of the marketing efforts, he noted, "but we did not anticipate the effect this effort would have on our graduating class."

Leary continued, "the class of 1988 was as strong as the previous class, maybe even stronger according to their test scores. But the class of 1987 fared much better in the diversity and the 'name' colleges they were accepted into.

"Looking at the strategies for 1988-89, it will be different," he stated. "We will recommend they apply to an equal number of good schools in other parts of the country."

As a matter of course, the three guidance counselors meet with every member of the junior class before the end of school. The students are provided with a list of ten to 15 colleges which the counselors recommend for the individual student. The list includes "reach" colleges - schools the student must meet high standards and grades in order to qualify, "odds are even" schools - colleges the student will likely be accepted into, and a number of "security" colleges which the student is almost assured of getting into.

By the beginning of next school year, the students will return with a pared down list of colleges which their family has reviewed and approved.

"Even though the fallout on college applications was disappointing this year for the kids and for us," Leary said, "they should be proud of the wonderful schools they were accepted into. In many schools throughout this area, there are still a large number of graduates who still have not been placed in colleges for the fall."

Thinking back on the recent graduates, Leary said they will be remembered as "a great bunch that liked to pal around together. They laughed a lot together. As a class, their personality was very upbeat. They were seen as a group who enjoyed their school, their teachers, and especially each other."

Fourth grade teacher made the right career choice

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Her enthusiasm for the job has only strengthened during the past 23 years.

It has been her one dream, her only career choice. Being a fourth grade teacher at the Deer Hill School has been, "absolutely the best," according to Pat Chase.

Chase is retiring at the end of this school year. Forever in pursuit of new knowledge and skills, she promises to continue that search, but away from room 11. It may be on a trip to an exotic country along with her husband, John, or an afternoon spent in her flower garden at her Cohasset home. But Chase is not one to remain idle and let new ideas pass her by.

"I never dreamed of doing anything different," she explains. "I truly feel there is nothing more satisfying than working with children and hoping to make a difference in their lives.

"It can be frustrating and exhausting because you don't always succeed," she says, noting that despite attempts to change a child's unruly behavior may be met with indifference and that is discouraging to an educator.

Chase began her teaching profession 23 years ago in the Deer Hill School. For two years she taught the third grade, and then moved up to the fourth grade where she has remained.

"It's absolutely the best grade to teach," she exclaims. "They've mastered their basic reading skills and now they're so excited about the whole world. It's all opening up to them. They're aware, yet they are still innocent. They think other cultures are great and they want to learn more. It's a very expansive age, yet they are not quite adolescents. They are aware the world is a wonderful place and they love it."

That innocence still brings a giggle when Chase recalls an incident which occurred several years ago. In a written exam, she questioned the students about the route Columbus traveled to the West Indies. One student answered, "Route 3A."

"Every time I'm driving by and look at one of the signs on Rte. 3A I still think of that answer and laugh," she says with a smile.

Chase would prefer not to publicly announce her age, but she appears too young to retire. She is a pretty, petite blond with a wide, friendly smile and a soft, friendly voice.

Pat Chase

When asked if children have changed since she first began teaching, Chase quickly nodded. "Oh, yes," she states. "Children have changed because society has changed. There are a lot more single-parent families, more divorces and more mothers working outside the home. I think children are watching more television, which may be one reason their attention span is shorter and they seem passive sometimes."

This is not true of all fourth graders, she says assuringly. "But to most children, their idea of entertainment is to sit in front of a computer or television rather than running over to play with a friend," she says.

Athough children in the 1980's may appear more mature, Chase contends they may even be less mature. "Perhaps because there is less interaction with their peers, but the behavior of many children is less mature than in previous years.

"On the positive side," she continues, "these children have much more knowledge. They see other countries on television and they watch science programs. A lot of the children are extremely responsible because they've had to handle extra responsibilities around the house."

The fourth grade curriculum has also changed with the years, she notes. Health is now a separate subject - one that she had to learn in depth before teaching it to her students. Social studies and science texts have been altered greatly over the years. Computers have come into the classroom, and teachers had to learn to use them before the students were given lessons.

"They learned them a lot faster than the adults," Chase confides.

Continual knowledge and assimilation of facts, she says, "keeps you from getting stale." Chase recalls one year she decided to teach Greek mythology. She read throughout the summer, attempting to develop a curriculum for the following year.

"That was a wonderful summer - one I'll never forget," Chase adds.

This teacher is leaving her classroom "because I'm ready to go," she says.

"I have other things to do now," Chase adds. "I tend to see my life in 20-year cycles. For 20 years I have been in education and now I want more freedom in my life. We have a new grandson, and the family has been urging me to retire. I have lots of projects to clear out of the attic and my garden needs some attention.

"And now, my husband and I won't be forced to travel only in the summer," she laughs.

One thing that saddens Chase about her profession, is the lack of financial respect the position is granted. It is a real problem, she says, and one that has been driving talented college graduates away from her beloved profession.

"In a sense, the poor salary we receive suggests that society may not value you very much," she states. "It saddens me. I once worked out how much we are paid per diem, and it worked out to be a marginally survival-able rate. I'm afraid if I was asked today if I wanted to be a teacher, my answer would be based on economics."

Chase forgets the negative for a moment, and Officials briefed on coastal plan

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

As various interests compete for use of the region's coastline, municipal agencies have found themselves looking to the state for help.

The Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management agency briefed representatives from Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate and Marshfield last week on their new harbor planning program.

The agency is offering both monetary and technical assistance to towns interested in developing comprehensive harbor plans.

Barbara Ingrum and Lori Thayer said a community could receive a maximum of $50,000 to pay for half of the engineering work of a comprehensive harbor plan.

Most communities do not seek that much, they said. The cap is designed for cities such as Boston and Fall River with very large harbors.

To apply for the grant, communities' plans must be consistent with agency policy, as well as the policy of the state Executive Office of Environmental Affairs..

"There is the possibility that if you apply and then go into left field and don't communicate with us that you might not get it, so keep in touch," Thayer said.

The agency expects communities seeking grants to establish time schedules for completing design work, and to stick to those schedules.

Finally, communities must prove they can pay for 100 percent of the cost of the planning before the agency will commit to a 50 percent reimbursement.

• Weymouth town planner Jim Clarke told Ingrum and Thayer that Weymouth selectmen have appointed a committee to oversee the creation of a waterfront plan.

The town, he said, has hired consultants to design the plan, and would like to take advantage of the agency's program.

• Fritz Pfaffmann of Cohasset said there is a need in the town to refocus on what would be the best utilization of the harbor for the greatest number of people.

"We have a very tiny harbor," he said. "Our waterfront is very small and well-defined."

Presently, the town is trying to decide how the Cox Estate may be used by the town. The property represents 20 percent of the Cohasset waterfront.

Cohasset does not anticipate applying for any state money at this point, he noted.

Although they share the waterway, Cohasset and Scituate have not talked about joint planning for the harbor, Pfaffmann said. "Cohasset Harbor is managed by Cohasset."

• Janet Humphrey, Scituate's town administrator, noted that the town is just completing a master plan of the downtown business district, which includes the harbor.

"The plan," she said, "defines goals and objectives and looks at complex issues."

Humphrey said she does not expect Scituate to take advantage of the agency's program this year, but she anticipates the creation of a harbor planning committee and she foresees local officials going before town meeting next year looking for matching funds.

"I hope the timing will be favorable then," she said. "In Scituate there are a lot of competing interests—fishermen and pleasure boats, parking spaces for businesses and for the marina."

• Marshfield selectman Dan McDonald told Ingrum and Thayer "it has been a tough nine months on the town's waterways."

A series of criminal acts in the harbor area prompted selectmen to reorganize management of the harbor department, putting the harbormaster under the command of the police chief.

The harbormaster resigned following the selectmen's appointment of new assistants, and three members of the waterways advisory committee, including the chairman, then decided to step down.

Meanwhile, selectmen appointed a harbor planning committee to develop a comprehensive plan for the harbor.

McDonald said Marshfield is looking for a develrecalls when she told her students she would be retiring in June. "Are you leaving because you don't like us anymore?" one child inquired.

"Nothing could be further from the truth," she assured them.

For 23 years, Chase says she has entered the classroom on Monday morning with a smile, saying to herself, "I really love being here. I'm so glad to see all their faces."

An honest woman, she confides that by Friday afternoon, "I'm equally glad to see those faces leave - as long I see them again Monday morning!"

□ The Memorial Day parade always brings tears to one's eyes; it truly is a tribute to our country's veterans who gave their lives for what we have today. One of the parade's marchers was Steve Wigmore, and marching last week gave him a memory all his own. That was Steve's thirtieth year marching in Cohasset's parade! Steve, the town salutes you!

□ Linda J. Sheppard, daughter of Paul and Pauline Sheppard, graduated May 28 from UMass, Boston with a Bachelor of Science in Sports Medicine and Physical Education.

□ David Giagrando, son of Gerald and Linda Giagrando, is a 1988 cum laude graduate of Brandeis University. After graduation David will be with Peter Abbot Associates of Wellesley as an Account Executive.

□ Cohasset Liquors is under new ownership, and it sparkles just like its new owner! Located just across from Kimball's Motel, its owner (Tom Churchill) has given the store a "facelift" that looks grand. You can't meet a nicer, more friendly guy, go in there and say hello!

Beverly A. Lacks earned her Graduate Degree from Bridgewater State College recently.

Heard from Phil Mahoney recently. Phil is out on the "high seas" as this is being written, as part of his ROTC program with Cornell University. He is due home at the end of the month, wonder how he will like being a "land lubber" again. . . .

On Saturday, June 25, Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy will host a benefit kick-a-thon to raise money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association. Children, junior and adult members of the school will be seeking pledges of support based on how many kicks they can deliver in a fifteen minute span. Anyone interested in pledging may call 383-6822 or visit the Academy on Rte. 3A.

The University of Massachusetts celebrated its 125th anniversary this year, and awarded 4,661 degrees at it's ceremonies on May 22. Eight Cohasset residents were among the graduates and they are: Lauren Patricia Bradley, Christian B. Brown, David S. Ormiston, David Alexander Rice, Steven J. Ryan, Richele M. Sargent, Catherine M. Smith and Kimberly Wittet.

The Deer Hill School will certainly be changed now that Mrs. Pat Chase is retiring! She has been a part of the school for the last 23 years! There will be a reception today (June 9) from 3 to 5 p.m., in the courtyard of the Deer Hill School. Friends, former students and their parents as well as Mrs. Chase's present students are invited to attend. Good luck in your retirement, Pat. Have fun!

For those of you that attended graduation, I need not tell you about the Valedictorian, David Shultz' speech. It was a wonderful one, and he used the alphabet to reminisce with the class of '88. When it came to "I" he said ice cream; he and fellow graduate Bob Pattison are running the ice cream truck. So, be on the look-out for the blue ice cream truck as it makes its way "Around Town" this summer. Bob and David will be using the money that they earn to put towards their college education that will begin this fall.

Graduation sure was a special one this year, as we seem to say every year! The weather was grand and the Music Circus was the perfect spot for the event. The reception afterwards was a huge success. Congratulations to all who put together this special day, and to the graduates too, of course.

Cohasset Little League results

The Braves closed with a rush the final week of May with wins over the Red Sox and the Mets (to spoil the Mets' attempt at a perfect first half). But they came up a game shy in the standings.

In the only other action of the week, the Yankees and Red Sox played a game which was suspended in the last of the sixth with two outs and the tying run on third for the Sox. The game was scheduled to be completed. The standings at the close of first half action are:

Team	W	L	T	Susp.
Mets	6	1
Braves	5	2	1
Yanks	2	3	1	1
Leo's Exxon Red Sox	0	7		1

Mon., May 23, Braves 21 — Red Sox 5

The Braves pounded out eight solid base hits, got solid pitching from Tim Conroy and Chris Kondrat, and solid infield play defensiviey to cruise by the Sox. The Braves had triples by Kondrat and Steve Harrington ("Mary" to his teammates and coach) and a two-run single by Andy Church to highlight the offense. The Sox, on the other hand, only managed singles from the bats of Matt Larson and Greg Stevens.

Tues., May 24, Yankees 13 — Sox 12 (susp.)

The following night the Yankees opened with four runs in the first and followed with eight in the second inning. Sox pitcher, Ryan Freeman was victimized by sloppy fielding from his mates. Gritty Greg Stevens relieved Ryan in the third and closed the door on the Yanks who scored only one run the rest of the way.

The Red Sox fielders made an equally abrupt turn-around and used sterling defensive plays at short by Ryan Freeman and second by Brendan Leung to thwart late-inning rallies by the Yankees. In the meanwhile, the Sox offense came to life and closed the gap to 13-8.

Chris Goodman relieved starter Tim Brister and fell victim to the pitching woes that have ailed the Sox this season. The game was suspended in the home half of the sixth, Sox batting, two outs, tying run on third, winning run on first, and Brendan Leung at bat.

Thurs., May 26, Braves 7 — Mets 1

Doug Ellinger had a fantastic night on the mound and at the plate to outduel Chris Rolandelli and the Mets for the first time this season. Doug was picture perfect in the box with three hits in three at bats. He had a single, a double, a triple and three RBI's. Batterymate, Tim Conroy matched all Doug's stats except the single. From the rubber, Doug tossed up Rolandelli-like figures as he struck out fourteen, allowed no bases-on-balls, and gave up only one run. A key play occurred in the second when left-fielder, Brian Pattison threw Rolandelli out at the plate to snuff the only Mets' threat of the evening.

WEEK ONE/SECOND HALF

Tues., May 31, Mets 11 — Yankees 5

The Mets got a good pitching effort from Rolandelli again to get off to good start in the second half of this baseball season. However, the big story was the bat of David (what is this guy's nickname?) Zadel. Long, lanky David lashed a double and two triples to account for 6 RBIs in addition to scoring 2 runs. Kenny Leahy, the fine looking younger brother of Mets' slugger David, also contributed mightily with two hits and two RBIs as the Mets ran their overall record to 7-1. Rolandelli owns five of those wins.

Thurs., June 2, Braves 26 — Yankees 6

Thursday, the other powerhouse, the Braves, got off to an impressive second half start at the expense of the Yankees. Timmy Conroy and Doug Ellinger had four hit nights. Conroy, in particular, crushed a home run and had six RBIs. Drew Pozatek pitched in with 3 singles and some wild base running, and Vicky Maynard had her first hit of the year when she singled sharply to center. Chris Kondrat had a noteworthy game defensively at first base. Chris had five unassisted putouts — two coming on pop flies and three on sharply hit ground balls.

Fri., June 3, Mets 18 — Red Sox 4

The Mets provided a hitting clinic for baseball officianadoes Friday night last. They absolutely crushed 17 hits including 6 doubles — Leahy had two; Kamataris, Rolandelli, Henderson, and Thereault the others. They had six — count them! — six guys with multiple hit games and they included: Eric Henry, Andy Fitzsimmons, David Leahy (6 RBIs), Scott Theriault, Andy Kamataris, and Spencer Henderson.

With all the hits, the Sox naturally had quite a defensive workout especially since only one Met struck out. And they responded superbly so that the game never lacked interest or even seemed out of reach.

A safe journey

Another class has passed through the high school. Another group of individuals, bonded together through time and experiences, has completed one more step in a long journey.

Perhaps the full impact of this progression doesn't hit them, does not affect these youngsters, until the ceremony and pageant is complete. And then, as if struck by a bolt of lightning, the impact is felt by the class of 1988.

The daily contact with friends and classmates are gone. The sometimes monotonous routine of homeroom, home economics, gym, art, English and French is over.

The majority of students may be continuing onto college, but it will never be the same. The class of 1988 will never be as silly, as confused, as enthusiastic or as sad as they have been during the four years they spent in high school.

How they have grown - as adolescent, giggling teenagers, to mature young adults. In a brief four years they have undergone a metamorphasis that changed them from children to the adults we are presenting to society.

For better or for worse, their experience durings the last four years helped to shape them into the adults they will be for the remainder of their lives.

High school has surely included many forgettable times, days when a poor grade altered a sensitive ego more than any punishment a parent could inflict. There were personality clashes as friends edged out friends in the fight for more friends and the never-ending popularity contest among teenagers.

And it can be a time of endless hurt. All of sudden, it seems as though adult experiences are cutting into their young lives as they must face the reality of death and illness of loved ones. They are no longer children where the truth is somehow hidden by half-truths designed to lessen the suffering and pain. Our teenagers, now our young adults, had to face some serious questions and situations during the past four years. And they survived.

This is not to say their education is complete - that all knowledge has been assimilated. The base has been formed, but that lifelong search for new knowledge and more facts and greater wisdom hopefully will never end.

They may be going onto college, or they may be going off to work. In either situation, their days in the high school classroom are over, but their education is far from complete. The people they will meet in the coming years, and the situations they will experience will continue to form the adult they are becoming.

They will not all be happy experiences, but that too is an important part of life. They will have good days and bad, exhiliration and sorrow. Each emotion they feel must be used to form future personalities and will guide their decisions in later years.

High school is over, but the memories will linger for the rest of their lives. It was an important step they have traveled, but there is far to go. We wish our graduates a safe and happy journey.

Town hall proceeding . . .

union employees. In other words, MacIntosh explained, workers on this project are paid according to the union wages set when the contract was negotiated last summer.

A carpenter employed on a private job by a private employee may be paid between $12 and $15 per hour, he said. But because this is a government job, carpenters earn about $23 per hour.

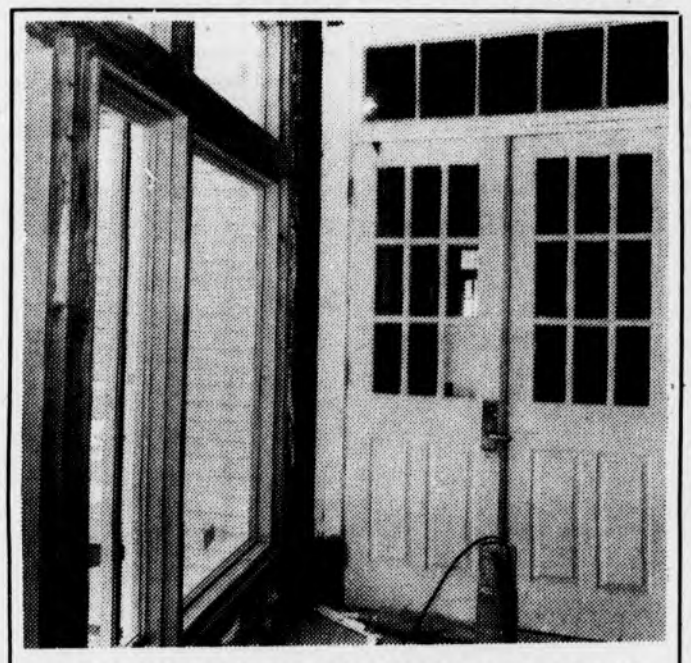
"This wage level applies to everyone on the job - laborers, carpenters, electricians, plumbers, and sheet metal workers," MacIntosh stated.

"The difference between union wages and non-union wages is about 25 percent," he noted. "So right off the bat, a government job is going to cost that much more just with the higher wages."

Another large expense in this project, he stated, is the elevator which will run from the basement level to the top floor of the new addition. Handicapped access from the outside of the building, all the way through the building, into the elevator and the bathrooms, also increases the cost of construction.

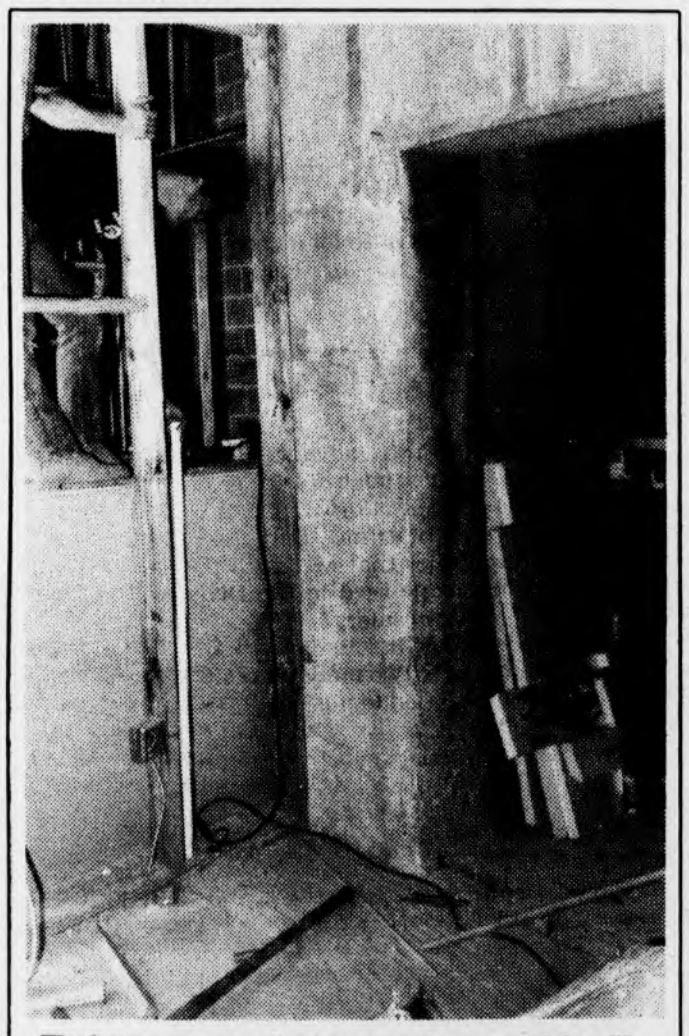
"An elevator, depending on a number of factors, can cost between $50,000 and $60,000," MacIntosh said.

A tour of the incomplete addition shows a progressing maze of partitioned walls sheathed in grey sheetrock and insulation. The windows are installed and electrical outlets are being placed throughout the building. Plywood floors will soon be replaced by carpeting.



This is the first level of the addition where it will enter into the town hall auditorium.

MacIntosh explained that the front doors to the addition will be three-foot glass double-doors. Directly after the doors is the recreation department office. The second office on the ground level of the addition will be the building department, including offices for the plumbing and the building inspectors.



Workmen prepare the basement area which will include space for a vault to house town records.

Photos by Kym Marcella

A laborer takes out debris from the area that will soon be the front lobby.

All windows throughout the addition are insulated, MacIntosh said.

There is a meeting room on the ground floor level, and the town clerk's office with the town's vault located on the same floor. "We expect that by mid-August, we can move a lot of the people from the town hall into their new offices," the superintendent said.

"The remaining renovations can be finished in the old town hall, and everything should be done by the first of September, depending on the weather," he added, noting that prompt arrival of sub-contractors is also a factor in determining a completion date.

There are handicapped bathrooms on the first floor, located near an elevator which is also accessible.

There are 17-foot metal partitions throughout the building. As MacIntosh explained, in commercial construction, the long, sturdy braces provide more stability than wood that may eventually warp. The ceilings are covered with 12-inch insulation, and there are six-inch blankets of insulation on all exterior walls.

The second floor features a meeting room and a small kitchenette/lounge. There is a copy room for employees and the treasurer's office is located on this floor.

The new addition is fully attached to the old town hall building, and is covered by an asphalt-shingled roof.

The superintendent noted the only artifact uncovered when they tore away the exterior wall of the town hall, was a newspaper dating back to 1945 which related the latest events during World War II.

The selectmen's office is located on the second floor of the new addition, adjacent to the executive secretary's office and a small meeting room.

The sheetrock used throughout the building is according to firecode, which adds an unknown amount to the total bill, MacIntosh said. "It's more expensive than the sheetrock used in residential buildings. But I don't know how much more expensive," he noted.

Electrical service in the addition is also more expensive than service provided in a home. "There's a lot more of it," he said. "They need it for computers, telephone lines and they have to have a lot of outlets throughout the building."

The architect's plans, MacIntosh explained, also call for solid oak finish throughout the building - for doors and window trim and handrails. "That's a lot more expensive than many other kinds of wood," he stated.

The basement features two vaults for town records and a storage area for the recreation department. The elevator is accessible from the basement level.

Running down a list of the construction items he must complete in the next two months, MacIntosh repeated that everything is ahead or according to schedule.

"I really can't see us running behind. We'll really know by next month," he said.

METCO grads would do it again

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Among the class of 1988 were five members not from Cohasset, but from a city 30 miles away. Despite the distance, they each left a distinct imprint on their classmates and the school.

METCO student and Cohasset High School graduate Bryan Edwards is most recognizable because of his athletic achievements. But the friends who traveled with him each morning from Boston and every evening from Cohasset, also became a significant part of the senior class.

Lisa Bryan, Twilda Shennette, Joy Turner, and Daniel Bickerstaff graduated along with Bryan, after spending many years in the Cohasset school system. From Sunday's graduation, they are traveling on to distinguished colleges and desired careers.

Lisa has been a Cohasset student since the third grade. Twilda came to Cohasset in the first and Joy has been here since the second grade. Daniel also joined the school system then. Bryan started in the METCO program when he was a seventh grader.

On the eve of their high school graduation, the five talked excitedly about what is was like to learn in Cohasset.

The experience was especially unique for Joy, who came to Cohasset soon after her arrival from the West Indies. "Not only did I have a language barrier, but I had to overcome it in a town that was unfamiliar. I think it was especially rough, but it was nothing I couldn't handle," she recalled.

Joy will be studying early childhood education and special needs educations next year at Leslie College in Boston.

"Sometimes I felt isolated," she recalled. "And sometimes I still feel isolated."

Twilda explained that her black friends back home don't particularly understand the closeness she has shared with her Cohasset classmates. "They look at the pictures I have of all my Cohasset friends, and they think I'm white. They don't understand," she noted.

"Right," Joy added. "But our closest friends really are here in Cohasset. My friends here are the best and the nicest friends I have."

Sharing two distinct worlds has been a difficult, but valuable lesson during their young lives. They have made friends here, and in Boston. But their schedule does not allow them much time to spend with either group.

As Lisa explained, they are up at 5 in the morning every weekday, and they don't arrive back in Boston until 4 that afternoon.

"It was hard to get involved in arts or athletics or anything here at school but I think I would have if I had a second chance. I'd make the time to get more involved with this school," she said.

Bryan, who was showered with national honors and accolades for his basketball prowess, admitted that integrating into Cohasset schools was more difficult for him, because he is "a loner."

"I really haven't had to deal with the situation of having friends here and at home, because I don't make friends easily," he said. "I have a few friends here, and they're really good friends."

Bryan's best friend, mentor and confident during his days at Cohasset High was Coach Eddie Minelli.

"He's helped me more than anyone knows," Bryan stated. "There is nothing he wouldn't have done for me, and I'm closer to him than to anyone else. He is the one person I'll never lose touch with."

Bryan's years in Cohasset have "gone by really fast," but he'll savor the opportunity he had to know other people - "people I never would have met if I stayed in Boston," Bryan noted. "I'm happy I was a part of the METCO program. It helped me further my education - for sure. I think I received a better education than I would have at home."

Bryan will be traveling on to Boston College where he will study communications.

Probably his closest friend at CHS has been his former neighbor, Daniel. His arrival at the Osgood School in the second grade, can not be vividly recalled, yet Daniel is thankful his education was in Cohasset.

"I was more advanced than the other students in my neighborhood school. But when I cam ehere, I really had to work harder. I've done pretty well," he said. Daniel plans to attend Fitchburg State College next fall.

His fondest memories of Cohasset, he said, will be the teachers, the students and the classrooms. But most special to him are Brendan and Craig Mulcahy and their family.

For the past two years they have served as Daniel's host family, offering the Mulcahy home as his "second home" when there was a need.

"They are just like my family. If I had hard times, they were always there," he stated. "Craig and I didn't really know each other until high school, but he's one of my best friends. I got really close with all the members of the family. I really want to stay in touch with them."

Daniel has a special rapport with Craig and Brendan's young brother, Kevin, who shares a fondness for "rap." Daniel has spent time teaching the young boy how they rap in Boston. "He's pretty good," Daniel laughed.

The Dorchester teenager said he's glad he participated in METCO, and that caring people, including METCO Coordinator Patricia Brown, pushed him to work hard for a good education.

"A lot of my friends in Boston don't really care about their education. The schools here pushed me to care," he stated.

When she was a young child, Lisa recalled her opposition to coming into Cohaset. "There was no way I wanted to go. But Mrs Burns (a former METCO coordinator) pushed me. After a little while, I learned to enjoy it here," she said. Lisa will be studying computer science at Dartmouth.

The girls chatted excitedly about their days spent in Cohasset. All agreed it was an experience they would encourage other Boston students to share.

"I'm going to miss my Cohasset friends," Lisa noted. "I want to stay in touch with many of them. I don't intend to waste these precious moments by breaking off with them."

Twilda, who will be studying pre-med at Howard University, said after she becomes a doctor, marries and has children of her own, she will encourage them to participate in METCO.

As for Cohasset, Twilda commented, "This town is great. The guidance counselors were wonderful and the education I received was great. I was lucky I had the chance to do it."

Regarding the difficult and confusing schedule, Twilda said that was something to which they gradually became accustomed.

"It took a lot of scheduling," Lisa agreed. "Some of us had jobs when we'd get home. Then we'd go home, do our homework and get to bed at 11:30 and get up again at 5. But it was worth it."

She agreed with her friends that Cohasset host families enthusiastically opened their homes to the METCO students during difficult times. Lisa and her family were planning to celebrate graduation at the home of her host family, the Conte's. "They call me their adopted daughter," she giggled.

The "scariness" of coming into an unknown, white community soon faded as they became part of Cohasset's student body.

"This experience has given us a better building block to life," Twilda commented. "We were given a better chance to achieve."

Boys varsity tennis awaits tourney action

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

To paraphrase the familiar adage, everything is calm before the storm, is the best way to describe the attitude of the Cohasset boys varsity tennis team prior to their opening-round tournament match. (At the present moment, however, Cohasset is still uncertain who they will face on June 8).

"I have been calling the newspapers to see who won the contest between Harwich and Silver Lake. Nobody knows who won," said the third-year head coach Ed Amaral, whose club compiled a 16-2 record during the regular season, the best winning mark in his brief stint. "On the otherhand, we have been looking forward to playing in the tournament. We are healthy for the first time this year. With the long layoff, we have been enjoying good practices. We are ready to play."

Amaral hopes that the team's successful ride during the regular season competition will carry over into the tournament.

"Our goal is to do well in the tournament. Also, we want to be the best team we are capable of being."

In the two previous tourney appearances, Cohasset has made it to the quarterfinals each time before being eliminated.

"We certainly want to advance past the quarterfinal round this time around, but a lot of it depends on the seedings. For example, Norwell played Sharon two years in a row and lost both times. If we defeat our opponent, there is a possibility that we might play Sharon (16-0 and the number-one seed in the Division Two South Sectionals)," Amaral said.

Cohasset is led by Rick Redick (11-2— at first singles. After losing his first two matches of the year, the senior tri-captain rebounded to post 11 consecutive victories. Moreover, he missed five additional games due to an injury. Last year, Redick pulled off an amazing undefeated season (18-0) as a junior. He was recently named to the South Shore League All-Star Squad for the second year in a row. He was a Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic member last year.

Playing behind Redick is senior Fred Willshire, who is also a captain. Willshire enters the tourney with a 15-3 record.

At third singles, senior Derek Lacks rounds out the final singles spot with a 13-4 mark.

Although Amaral praises the solid contribution he has been receiving all season long from the singles group he does not forget the efforts of his doubles tandems as well.

At first doubles, seniors Steve Myers (captain) and Jason Marsac sport a 14-2 record, while sophomores Joel Reidy and Frank Willshire complete the Skippers' starting lineup.

"They (Reidy and F. Willshire) have done a nice job for us this season. They are superb athletes who keep on improving in every match," Amaral added.

It seems that Cohasset does not possess that calm attitude after all. Instead, they resemble a violent storm ready to break out.

Coastal plan . . .

oper to attract a 50 percent matching grant from the Coastal Zone Management program.

At an earlier meeting, McDonald said he would like to explore with Scituate officials the possibility of a joint project to manage the North and South rivers.

Thayer said the agency encourages cooperation in planning between towns and would give preference for funding to joint projects.

• Paul Lutz of Hingham and Romin Koebel of Hull also were enthusiastic about the program.

Koebel suggested the program could lay the ground work for a cross-bay shuttle between the two towns.

He noted that many of the commuter boats return to the Hingham Shipyard nearly empty and said a shuttle to Nantasket might draw more riders.

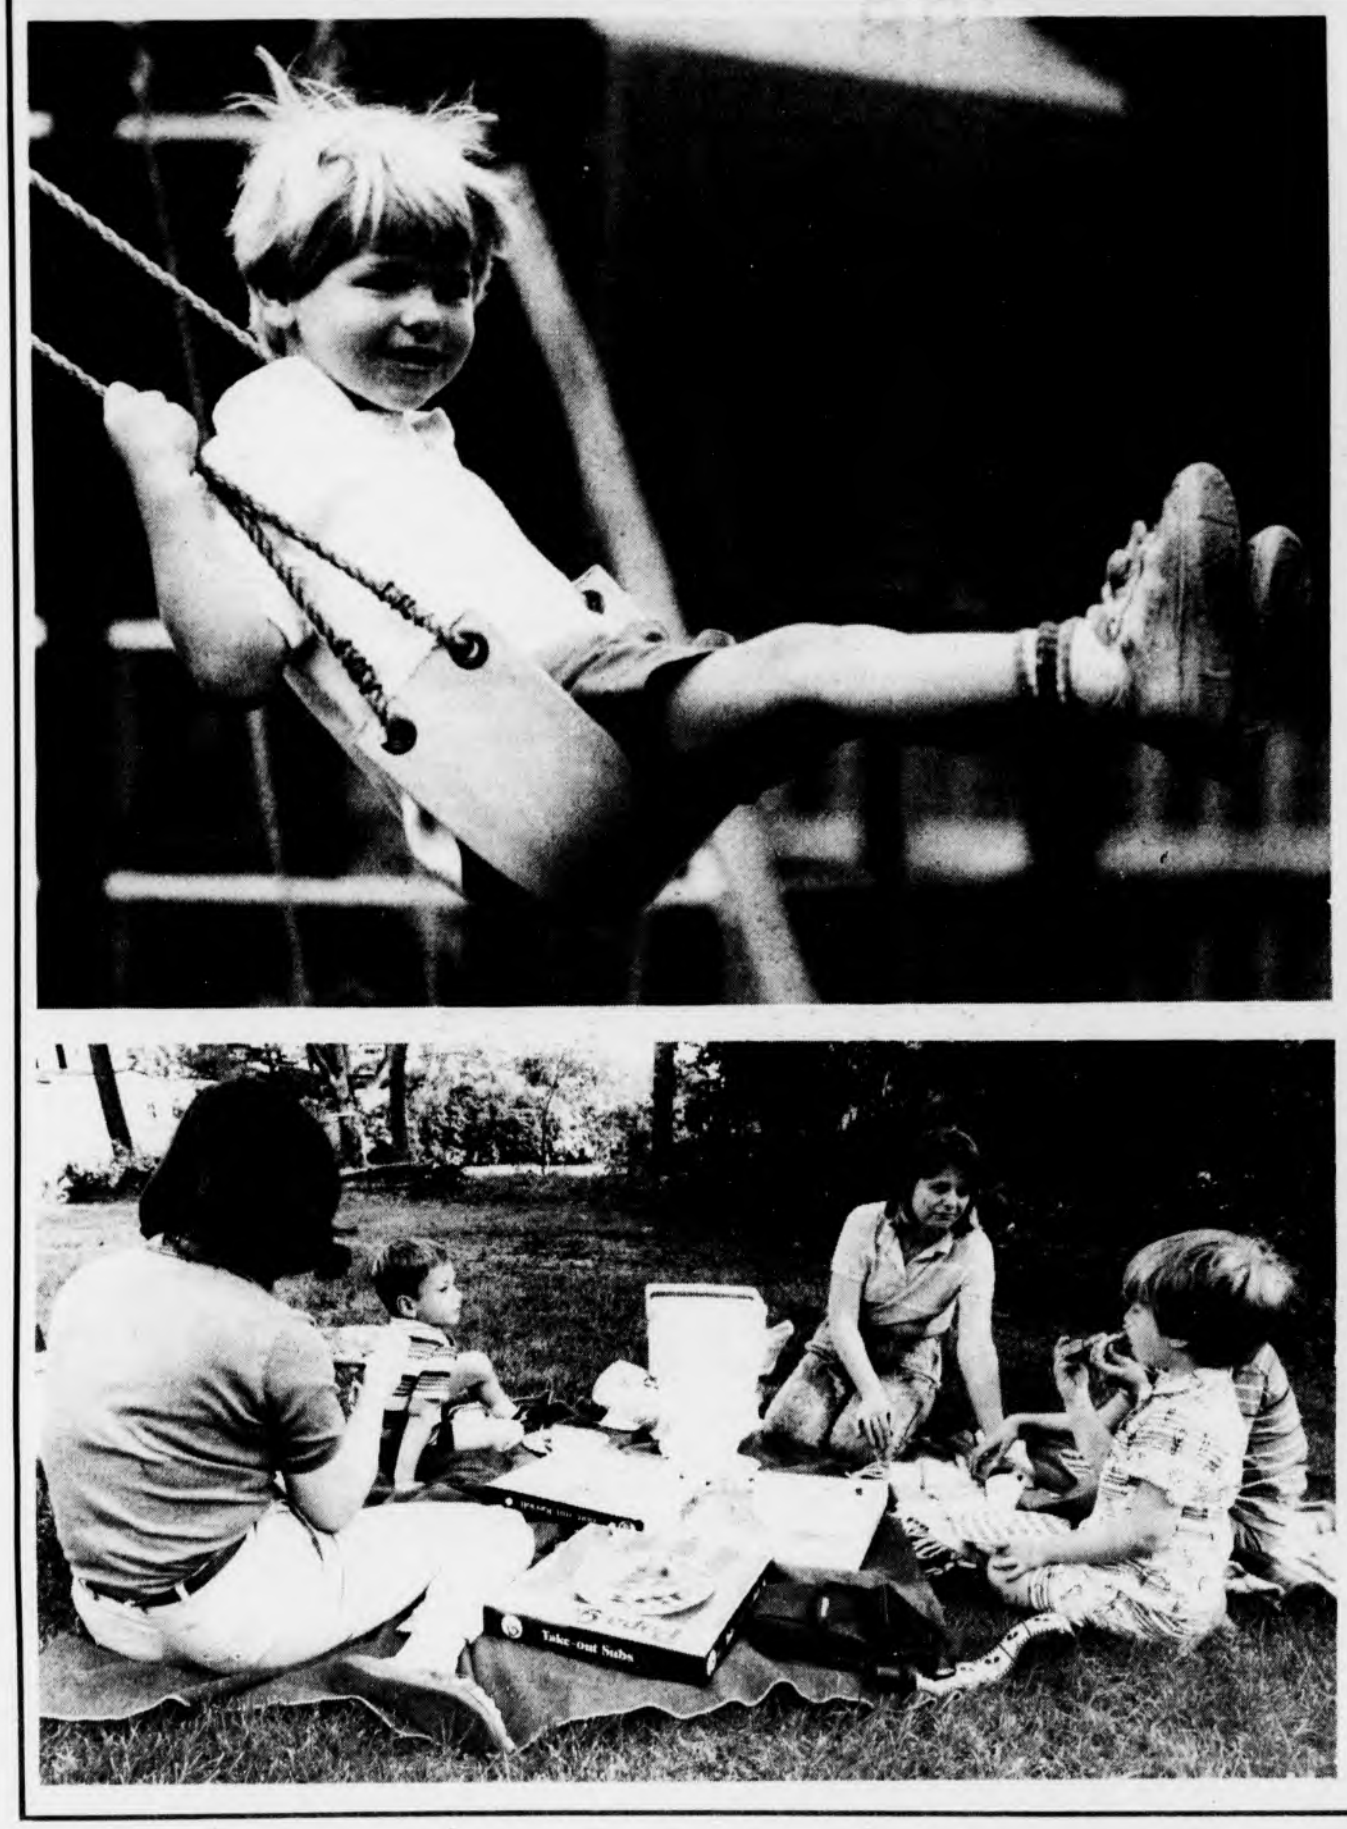
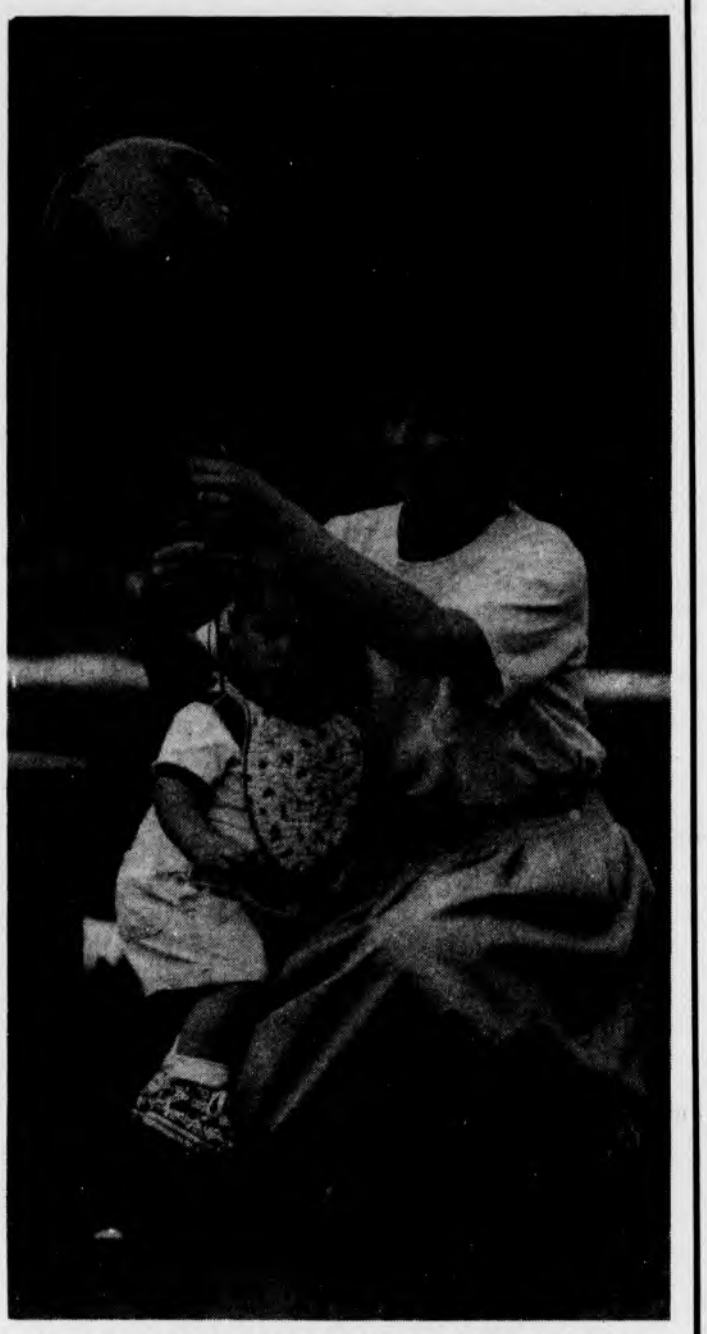
A family picnic on the common





It was a great day for a family picnic last week as students from The Carriage House Nursery School gathered on the school yard. While Gregory Ernst, 4, (top, left) was busy swinging, Peggy Lewis (top) helps out son, Mark, 17 months. In another spot, pizza was shared by Jeanne Schneider, her son, Jeff, Norma Grassey, and sons Matthew and Timmy. (Photos by Chris Edwards)

Successful choral concert

The Sr. High Chorus had a very successful trip to Heritage Music Festival in Newport, R.I. Groups from New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and Massachusetts competed.

AFS exchange program

Five Cohasset High School students will be spending the summer abroad as participants in the American Field Service (AFS) Intercultural International Exchange Program.

Brian Ormiston will be going to Japan, Laura Smart to Peru, and Allie Redfield to the Dominican Republic. Matthew Beggan and Brian Shultz will be going to Uruguay and Brazil, respectively, as participants in a summer soccer program. All participants will be living with families in the respective countries.

Cohasset High School is awaiting the return home of Kim Hunt from a year in Turkey, and Laura Kuhn from West Germany. They have had a wealth of experience during these past months.

The students will be bidding farewell to Steven Sont of the Netherlands who has been living with the Coley family since last August. We hope this has been a positive learning experience for Steven.

From July 6-9, Cohasset families will be hosting approximately 40 foreign AFS students who have spent the past 10 months in the New Jersey and metropolitan New York areas. This will be the first of several 'Bus Stop' tours before these students return to their native countries. It provides an opportunity for them to unwind following emotional farewells to their host families before anticipating the reunions that await them at home.

If anyone is interested in hosting, they should contact Judy Dwyer at 383-1654.

Congratulations to all AFS graduating seniors. They are Scott Caristo, Coleby Mantz, Laurel Collins, Sarah Hamilton, Margo Nedrow, Heather St. Onge, and Mary Elizabeth McNamara.

AFS is seeking a family in Cohasset to host an AFS student during the upcoming school year. There are approximately 1500 students who are waiting to hear if an American family is willing to host them.

For information, call Judy Dwyer, 383-1654.

Can you help us???

The PSO is looking for used TVs for some of the classrooms. If you have a TV that is in good working order and are willing to donate it to the school, call Karen Devine 383-1929.

Deer Hill concert

A concert will be held at the Deer Hill School Friday, June 10.

The Story of Cory

Cory Kent was telling the fourth grade classes about his life being mentally challenged (some people say retarded). Cory told us he was 53. He said we should do our homework if we want to get ahead. He said he liked the Celtics and the Bruins, the Patriots and the Red Sox, and watches them on cable TV. He lives with three other men in his home. They take turns making dinner and Cory loves cooking. When people start saying bad things to him, Cory Kent has learned to let it go "in one ear and out the other." Cory Kent is a nice guy. You would appreciate his company, too.

There will be a dance Friday, June 10 for Grades 7, 8 and 9 in the courtyard from 7:30 to 10 p.m.; and Grade 9 pizza party in the senior study from 10 to 11 p.m.

Retirement party

There will be a party for Patricia Chase, Grade 4 teacher at Deer Hill for 23 years, Thursday, June 9 from 3 - 5 p.m., in the courtyard at Deer Hill. Parents and former student are invited.

Choral group honors

Cohasset choral groups received the following honors: Show Choir - First place with a superior rating (the highest possible rating category); Swing Choir - Third place with an excellent rating (the second highest category); Madrigal Choir - received an excellent rating, missing third place by only two points.

Overall it was an excellent showing that keeps the CHS tradition of success at Heritage Festival.

Bryan Marks wishes to thank the parents for their outstanding support and cooperation with this year's choral endeavors.

Truck donation

The automotive department of South Shore Vocational Technical High School recently received a 1988 Chevrolet 4x4 Cheyenne truck from Spensley Chevrolet.

The slightly-damaged truck will be used by the automotive students to further their knowledge of automotive mechanics.

Richard E. Lanen, Chevrolet's Sales Manager said, "We started this program in 1972 because we found schools could use the cars and trucks that would normally be placed into the scrap crusher."

Spensley Chevrolet of Cohasset presented keys to a truck to S.S. Vo-Tech officials for use by the school's automotive students.

Historical museums to open June 18

Open House Day at the Cohasset Historical Society's Capt. John Wilson House and Maritime Museum will mark the beginning of the summer museum season Saturday June 18, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

These two historical museums are located on Elm Street in Cohasset Center. The Capt. Wilson House is an 1810 Sea Captain's home featuring an extensive collection of artifacts, paintings, furniture, furnishings, toys and memorabilia from the old homes of the town. The Wilson House once was the home of Capt. John Wilson and his family; and remained in the Wilson family for more than a century.

There are antique collections in a setting much like that of an early 19th century home because the Wilson House never has been modernized. Its ambience is that of early Cohasset when it was a seafaring village.

Next door on Elm Street, separated from the early home by a finely tended and authentic old New England garden, (itself carefully tended by the Cohasset Garden Club), rests the Society's Maritime Museum.

This fine early building originally was Samuel Bates' ship chandlery and counting house located on Border Street across the street from the ancient fishing wharf bearing the name of its builder, Samuel Bates. Dating from the mid or latter 1700's the Maritime Museum is the sole remaining unreconstructed building dating from Cohasset's early years as a maritime and mercantile town.

Four generations of the seafaring and ship-owning Bates family worked in the old chandlery while their mackerel schooners and square-riggers plied the Atlantic in search of fish and trade. Moved from Border Street in the mid-1950's, the old chandlery today contains a building-full of memorabilia from the town's Age of Sail, the century and a half in which Cohasset's eyes, and its people turned to the sea for sustenance and livelihood. 19th century ship models made by sailors, decorative carvings from the mackerel schooners, fishing gear, shipwrights' tools used in Cohasset's small shipyards, lifesaving equipment and medals earned by its volunteer lifesavers, relics of shipwrecks, and the story of the first and second Minot's Ledge Lighthouse just off Cohasset's shores, all these and other maritime-related bits of Cohasset's past can be seen preserved at the Maritime Museum.

Artworks, prints and maps also are featured as the museum seeks to tell the fascinating story of this small New England seacoast town. The second floor of this unusual museum holds extensive collections of general historical nature, from stone tools of the Indians to a cordwainer's bench of a century ago, early housewright's equipment, and relics of the original railroad in Cohasset. Samples of an apothecary's wares can be found on display, as well as old school desks (one dating from the 1600's), examples of colonial money, even a "fisherman's country store" of a century ago are there. Again, pictures, prints, maps and documents assist in telling the story of Cohasset.

As a special feature of the Saturday, June 18 Open House day at the Society's museums, members of the 47th Regiment of Foot, British Army unit of Revolutionary time, wil be present in full uniform. Commanded by Col. Bruce Collins of Cohasset, this unusual contingent recreates an authentic Royal Regiment which fought in the American Revolution, serving at Concord, Boston, Bunker Hill and Saratoga.

The Historical Society's two museums at Cohasset center will be open through the summer each afternoon through September 30 from 1:30 to 4:30, except Mondays, with admission for adults at $1.50 per building.

During the season, pre-arranged group tours will receive special lower rates. Call the Society at 383-6930 for details. David H. Wadsworth, Senior Curator.

Children's summer art classes

There are openings available in the Children's Summer Creativity Workshops. These specialized classes offer unique creative experiences for young artists in a relaxed and stimulating environment.

The session for 9 to 12-year-olds will be held five Wednesday evenings in August from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. There will be a different theme and new media from nature drawing, clay, collage printmaking and painting. This 'older' group will be given individual instruction to develop a better concept of good design.

Other sessions are available for children 5 through 8. Prepaid registration is due June 10 to insure placement in the workshops.

Call instructor Lynn Rizzotto for more information at 749-2453.

The Mariner Congratulates the 1988 Graduating Class of Cohasset High School

Spensley Chevrolet donates truck to Vo-tech

The automotive department of South Shore Vocational Technical High School recently received a 1988 Chevrolet 4x4 Cheyenne truck from Spencely Chevrolet of Cohasset.

The truck, with slight body damage, will be used by the automotive students to further their studies of the rapidly changing field of automotive mechanics. Automotive Department Head Essio Grassi said, "The truck will give our students the opportunity to work on up-to-date engines and systems that, in turn, will mean better employment opportunities upon graduation."

To date nearly 6,000 brand-new passenger cars and trucks, damaged by accidents, floods or other mishaps on their way to dealer showrooms, have been donated to schools for use in automotive mechanics classes.

Richard E. Lannen, Chevrolet's sales manager-service and customer satisfaction said that in the past 15 years most of the 50 states have received these free vehicles for their vocational education programs. "We started this program in 1972 because we found schools could use the cars and trucks that would normally be placed into the scrap crusher," he said.

Electricity increase

Eastern Edison Co. customers in the Brockton area used 473 million kilowatt-hours (kWh) of electricity in the first three months of 1988, the company reported.

This represents an increase of 8.3 percent over electricity use for the same period last year.

Use of electricity by commercial customers alone accounted for growth of 11.5 percent in the January-March period.

Sales of electricity to residential customers increased 6.5 percent; to industrial customers, 4.3 percent.

Shine news

Here's good news for Medex subscribers whose doctors do not contract (participate) with Blue Cross/Blue Shield for services they render.

A new state law, with protection against balance billing, permits Blue Cross/Blue Shield to reimburse non-participating physicians who treat BC/BS Medex subscribers. It took effect April 27, 1988 and applies to services provided on or after that date.

Formerly, BC/BS was prohibited from reimbursing physicians who did not contract with BC/BS. The new law, Chapter 21, was developed with the strong support of BC/BS. It preserves Medex coverage (Medicare Supplemental benefits) when the physician does not participate with BC/BS.

If Medex subscribers continue to receive care from physicians who do not contract with BC/BS, Medex will provide benefits for those covered services. Chapter 21 preserves Chapter 475, the current ban on balance billing, which prohibits physicians from seeking additional payments from their patients in excess of the Medicare allowed charge. John Larkin Thompson, president of BC/BS, said "We are pleased to be able to provide continuous health care coverage for senior citizens. Our Medex subscribers can continue to see the doctor of their choice and rest assured that their health care benefits will be provided."

Health board adopts new rules

The Board of Health adopted additional regulations pertaining to underground storage tanks (UST's).

Specific wording of the new law is as follows: "Effective July 1, 1988, in accordance with the authority of Chapter 111, Section 31, pertaining to groundwater protection, upon sale of any property within the Town of Cohasset having an underground storage tank on the premises, the seller, at the execution of the purchase and sale agreement or within a reasonable time thereafter, but prior to the closing shall: 1. St. Stephen's Church

Church school summer session — The church School ended another eventful year on Trinity Sunday last week. Congratulations to students and teachers all. A picnic for the church school will take place after church on Sunday, June 12 in the courtyard of the church. There will be games and good food!

Sunday, June 12, and throughout July and August, children may worship with their parents or attend a special class for all ages in the Watermelon Room at 10 a.m. In these classes they will study the same lessons to be read in church complete with games and crafts. Parents will be asked to lead one of these classes during the summer.

Rev. Edson to meet committee — The Rev. Diane Edson, priest in charge of St. Nicholas' Episcopal Church in Hull, will meet with the Outreach Committee at its regular meeting after fellowship time Sunday, June 19. St. Stephen's has supported this new congregation in Hull since its beginning. Rev. Edson will report on the significant progress this congregation has made.

Children's choir party — All members of the beginner and junior choirs are invited to the Whiteleys' (35 Pond Street) Thursday, June 9 from 4 to 5 p.m. for games and refreshments. Moms and/or dads are encouraged to stay. Call 383-9310.

Daughter of former rector married — Martha Thornton Richards, daughter of Lee and Harriet Richards, was married to Stanley Valciukas at Christ Church in Philadelphia on May 21. The Rev. Lee Richards was rector of St. Stephen's from 1960 to 1970.

Care for the care givers — Are you providing care for an elderly parent or for a friend with chronic physical or mental illness? Do you anticipate this possibility?

The challenge of care giving can be considerable. Emotions such as guilt, grief, anger, feeling inadequate or overwhelmed are commonplace. Decisions about what limits to establish or where a person might reside can be difficult to make and even tougher to carry out.

In this two evening series on care giving, we will explore key issues facing care givers, reflect on Christian teachings for handling emotions and learn practical techniques for managing tough situations.

Tuesday evenings 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.: June 21: Elizabeth Killian, R.N., M.S., C.S.; June 28: The Rev. E. Clifford Cutler.

Ms Killian is the co-founder of Mental Health Care at Home, Inc., a psychiatric home-care agency. Newcomers as well as those who attended her superb presentation last fall are encouraged to participate in this spring series.

If you have any questions about the course please call John Smott at 393-1195, or Ed Hoyt at 964-1100, ext. 287 (work) or 327-8210 (home).

Gospel study course

Throughout high school, 14 members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints have met to discuss Old Testament, New Testament, Book of Mormon and Church history.

Fourteen youths have been enrolled in Mormon "seminary" since last September and recently graduated. The students attend a 45-minute class in scripture study each day, before regular school begins, five days a week, throughout the school year.

The seniors who graduated this year are: Ken Sheldon and Wade Garrison, both of Hingham, Jennifer Dresser and Bob Burnham of Duxbury. Eighty percent attendance is required for graduation. Rini Edmunds of Duxbury, Aimee Arkell of Hingham and Tammy Clary of Weymouth deserve special recognition for perfect attendance.

Gerda Edmunds, teacher of one of the groups, commented that each student learned to practice self discipline.

Mrs. Carolyn Nielson was teacher for the second group.

Wood addresses conference

Robert S. Wood, President of the Hingham Mass. Stake (like a diocese) spoke before some 1200 members Sunday at the semi-annual Stake Conference, held at the LDS chapel, 379 Gardner St., Hingham. Wood who is spiritual and administrative head of the lay church, is a dean in his professional life of the Naval War College, Newport, R.I.

"In an age of increasing anxiety and complexity," Wood said, "we need to follow simple truths that are found in the Book of Mormon and in the teachings of our church."

We are here on earth, he added, not by chance, as Satan would have us believe, but by the design of God. In order to fulfill our potential, as God would have us, we must perfect our minds; keep our bodies clean and pure; and, use properly the gift of free agency which will bring us peace of mind and happiness now, and eternal life to come.

Wood told the audience who come from SE Mass. and parts of R.I., to "ponder the Scriptures" and "listen to a living oracle". He referred to Ezra Taft Benson, 88, president and prophet of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and its 6-5 million members world-wide.

One team remains in contention for league title

Cohasset's youth soccer teams finished the tenth week of Coastal League play with a flourish, recording impressive wins over Duxbury, Plymouth and — in a record 13 goal outburst — Scituate.

The biggest victory was chalked up by coach Steve Endris' under 12-1 boys. In knocking off Plymouth 5-1, Team 12-1 remained in contention for the Coastal Division One title, pending the outcome of Halifax - Hingham. With an 8-1-1 season record, 12-1 led all Cohasset squads in victories.

Against Plymouth, five players — Chris Kondrat, Jeremiah Stevenson, stopper Chris Rolandelli, Wes DeSantis and Tim Brister — scored. "Charlie Endris had four assists," said coach Endris, "and Brian Duffy was superb on defense."

Under 10-1 girls set a town scoring record for the 1988 season, beating Scituate 13-1 for their third victory. "That's our best season in three years," said coach Sandy Theriault. Jennifer Cullivan led Cohasset with four goals, and Danielle Nohe, Megan Fahey and Tammy Maitland each had a pair. Nicole Peterson, Jennifer Ripley and Chloe Chittick rounded out the scoring.

Under 14-1 boys played their strongest game of the season, shutting out Duxbury 5-0. Coach John Kinchla's hard-luck squad was led by Don DeMichele's two goals, and single tallies from Pat Suhrbier, Joe Andrade and Brooks Doten. "Mac Campbell, John Brister and Chip Anderson all had good games," reported Kinchla.

In other boys' play, Under 10-1 fell from the ranks of the unbeaten, losing to undefeated Duxbury 4-0. Excelling for 10-1, which carries a 6-1-2 record into its final game agaianst Carver, were Joe Magner, Jamey Kondrat and Robby Buckley.

Under 10-2 ended its season with a 4-1 loss to Pembroke. Forward Burke Davis scored for Paul Cotter's team, and Nate Cotter, Kevin Duffy and Bobby Meehan all played well. "My assistant, Roy Davis, deserves praise," said Cotter, "and the team really improved this year."

Under 14-2 were edged by Sacred Heart 4-3 despite taking an early lead. "They were a rough-and-tumble opponent," said coach Ed Gromada. "It was'nt much fun." Billy Jordan scored twice, his first goals of the season, and Willie Adams added his fifth in just two games. Full-back Mark Sechen turned in a good job on defense.

Under 16 trounced an undermanned Kingston squad 5-1. Coach Bob Shultz's team was led by Doug Drysdale's pair of goals, and single scores from Travis Coley, Bart Weisenfluh and Linc Marsac. "The whole team played well," said Shultz.

Members of the 12 and Under Team I.

Under 19 boys, still in the hunt for their division title, finish their season this weekend. They did not play the past weekend.

In other girls' play, Jack O'Brien's 14-2 team played Hanover to a surprising 0-0 tie. "Both teams' goalies were outstanding," said O'Brien, who saw numerous scoring chances thwarted. "We only won one game," he added, "but nearly every loss was a one-goal decision." Jennifer Knowles guarded the nets for Cohasset.

Under 10-2 and Under 14-1 lost by identical 4-0 scores to Hanover and Sacred Heart respectively. In the 10-2 contest, goalies Andrea Grew and Katie Anderson, and Andrea Freeman, Megan Connolly and Jessie Sandell led coach Kevin O'Donnell's team. For Jim Gallant's 14-1 squad, standing out were Michelle Woodland, Tracey Reardon, Jennifer Reidy, Tanya Peterson and Kathleen Conroy.

"Next week is our final one, except for the handful of Under 16 and Under 18 players who've made the district and state teams," said league coordinator Larry Shultz.

Those players, said Shultz, will be announced in the Mariner next week.

The home schedule this weekend:

Saturday at Milliken — Girls Under 10-2 vs. Kingston, 11:30 a.m.; Boys Under 10-1 vs. Carver, 1 p.m.

Sunday at Milliken — Girls Under 16 vs. Norwell, 1 p.m.; Boys Under 16 vs. Pembroke, 2:30.

Recreation programs for the summer

The Cohasset Recreation Department will present the first summer common concert Saturday, June 25 at 7:30 p.m. at the Town Common.

The 30-piece South Shore Concert band, directed by Richard Whitmarsh will perform. This concert will coincide with the summer art's festival on the common in June. Concerts are free and the general public is invited to attend. The second concert will be Tuesday, July 19.

It's a good idea to bring either blankets or lawn chairs and insect repellent.

The performance dates and their designated registration dates are as follows:

Programs are subject to change by theatre management.

Youth Tennis will begin Tuesday, July 5, and continue for seven weeks through August 19. Youth tennis registrations will be during the week of June 20.

Various other program registrations will be held throughout the summer as sessions end, and new sessions begin.

SUMMER SOCCER CAMP

The 1988 North American Soccer Camp will be held during the week of August 15. Registration must begin now because the final number of participants has to be reported to NASC next week. There are various levels of instruction, and the program is ideal for children aged 6 through 18. Each participant will be provided a ball and camp shirt as part of the tuition fee.

There will be further details forthcoming on a coaches clinic to be offered to adults on two evenings during that week. There may be a $10 per person fee for the coaches clinic. When two sessions have been completed, a coaching certificate will be awarded.

Hospital discharge plan required for seniors

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray recently sponsored legislation to correct "the deplorable ways senior citizens are discharged from hospitals," she said.

The Act Relative To Discharge Planning went into effect April 13.

Now that the Senior Citizen Hospital Discharge Planning Law is in effect, all hospitals must prepare a discharge plan for senior citizens. This law, which was sponsored by the Massachusetts Senior Action Council, was strongly supported by most legislators.

Under the law, all hospitals are required to prepare a written discharge plan for all Medicare patients discharged from the hospital, but who need assistance after leaving the hospital. This plan must be given to the patient at least 24 hours before being discharged from the hospital.

No hospital may discharge a Medicare patient without the patient having received, read, and signed the discharge plan. A signed copy of the plan must be retained in the patient's file. If the elderly does not agree to the plan, he or she can appeal.

If the Advocacy Office does not approve the discharge plan, the office will state the problems needing correction, and the hospital will not charge the Medicare patient for inpatient hospital services until an acceptable plan to correct the problem is approved by the Advocacy Office.

It requires that any Medicare patient treated in the emergency room and requiring care after leaving the hospital must be provided with a discharge plan.

Graduation ends with tearful embraces . . .

memories of school days in Cohasset.

Letter-by-letter, from A to Z, the valedictorian recalled certain teachers, events and feelings that affected this graduating class. Starting with A, he remembered the number of applications sent to colleges by the senior class, adding that this class will be noted for receiving the most rejections and waiting list responses of any previous class. His friends, dressed in their formal graduation gowns and caps, laughed at the once-painful comment.

B is for the championship basketball teams, this class produced. And I, he said, is for the ice cream truck he and classmate Bob Pattison will be driving through Cohasset this summer in search of college tuition.

And S is for the SAT's and SRA exams "that we will all miss," he chuckled, and V stands for the variety show, where the seniors who never knew how to act or sing, proved that to their family and friends.

Finding X a difficult letter to match to their memories, Shultz said it stood for the many "exams" they took throughout the years.

And he bid his classmates farewell.

The members of the graduating class were presented by Supt. Stephen Hart. After requesting teachers and parents in the audience to stand for an ovation, Supt. Hart noted the next message they will receive "is a tuition bill."

He hoped the graduates would contribute to society in the future, and highlighted teaching as an "extraordinarily rewarding profession, especially if you work with students as bright and motivated as the students of Cohasset High School."

He urged the students to use their own natural abilities in seeking future happiness as a contributing member of society.

And the last speaker of the day was school committee chairman Diana Kornet. She extended her appreciation to the community for showing its support of public education during the recent special election, and hoped that Cohasset schools "planted the seed of the love of learning." She noted that when their formal education is completed, new found knowledge will always remain a joy.

Each graduate was called to the stage of the Music Circus to receive a diploma and a handshake. And when it was completed, the tassles were joyously tossed to the right of the mortarboard.

The ceremony was over, and it was time for embraces and tears.

Town official to leave - says he is 'unhappy' in job

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

He is leaving without bitterness, yet the executive secretary to the board of selectmen has some harsh words about the position he intends to leave in six months.

Donald Andrew, 37, was hired by selectmen three years ago to serve as executive secretary/ town accountant. After a year in that position, Andrew was the first to acknowledge a mistake had been made, and the two jobs should be separated.

He was offered more money to stay on as executive secretary, forgoing his first love as a municipal accountant.

In a brief two-sentence letter to selectmen written late last week, Andrew said in accordance with his contract, which expires Dec. 31, 1988, he notified selectmen "It is not in my interest to renew my contract. It is my desire to return to municipal accounting."

Andrew, who was attending a conference of the Massachusetts Municipal Association of Auditors and Accountants this week, said he does not have a job at this time, although he is currently searching for one.

He thought it best, Andrew said, to give selectmen proper notice of his intentions to leave, and to be "up front" about his plans as he continues to job hunt.

"I more or less made up my mind by the end of February or early March that I was going to be

Court action ends with CHL loss

The owners of Cohasset Heights Ltd. have accepted their latest legal defeat, and will honor a ruling that limits their landfill to a demolition dump.

The attorney for the privately-owned landfill believes the operation will continue as a financially-successful venture, noting that this latest setback may even further the life of the commercial dump.

A temporary restraining order was granted by the land court late Monday, which allows the town to legally prohibit the dumping of any commercial waste, except for demolition debris, into the landfill. A cease and desist order was delivered Tuesday morning by the building inspector.

The court ruling, which supports a decision last week by the state Supreme Judicial Court, legally binds the landfill owners to accept only tree stumps, rocks, brick and general demolition debris. The land court also rejected a move by the landfill owners for a temporary injunction which would prohibit enforcement of the Supreme Court decision.

In the past, Cohasset Heights Ltd. has accepted commercial, industrial and residential refuse. The town has argued for more than two years that the permit obtained in 1976 by the original landfill owner, James Tyeryar, allowed

Mixed reaction to well testing

Toluene is a flammable liquid used in the manufacture of TNT, according to the dictionary.

And it has been detected in increasing amounts in two monitoring wells and the leachate collection tank around the Cohasset Heights landfill, according to recent studies.

"The levels have reached a critical stage," said Ronald Goodwin, chairman of the board of water commissioners.

"The board of health should take action."

But Sharon Becker, board of health chairman, said, "We're concerned for sure, but we're not alarmed.

"We feel that action is not warranted at this time."

According to the latest quarterly report by GHR Analytical, the toluene levels in monitoring wells 9 and 9A have increased to levels of 270 and 470 parts per billion, respectively.

"This rise in toluene levels corresponds to a rise in toluene levels in the leachate collection tank which increased from less than 10 parts per billion in November, 1987, to 1500 parts per billion during the current sampling survey," stated the report.

This is the second time this has happened since 1986, according to Becker.

She noted, however, that the drinking standards for toluene are 2,000 parts per billion, and that no one drinks from the monitoring wells.

In addition, the contents of the leachate collection tank are trucked away every day, she said.

However, some groups have been concerned about the possibility that the landfill could endanger the town's water supply at nearby Lily Pond.

According to Joe Hamilton, lab director at the Water Department, there is no toluene in the water that people drink in Cohasset.

Samples of the water at Lily Pond are sent to the state periodically for analysis, he said.

The last analysis was done in March and no toluene was detected, Hamilton said.

"It wasn't there (in Lily Pond)," he said. "And it's not

Selectmen stand firm - 18 mooring holders lose

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"It's a black day in Cohasset," Thomas Burke of Elm St. told the Board of Selectmen Monday night after learning that he and a total of 75 other residents would lose their coveted moorings in Cohasset Harbor or their place on the waiting list for missing a deadline.

Burke was among 58 residents who did not reaffirm their interest in a mooring by June 1, and lost their place on the waiting list.

In addition, some 18 residents lost their mooring when they did not pay the fee on time.

Selectmen acted after receiving a legal opinion on the situation from Town Counsel Richard Henderson.

Henderson's opinion, read in part by chairman Burt Pratt at the meeting, stated, "Based upon my review of the law and based upon the facts provided to me it is my opinion that the harbormaster has the right to order those individuals who had not paid their mooring fee by June 1, 1988 to remove their mooring tackle from Cohasset Harbor and has the right to reassign those locations to individuals who are on the waiting list.

"While such result may seem harsh, the harbormaster is bound to follow the law and current Cohasset bylaw leaves the harbormaster no discretion.

". . . With regard to the issue of reaffirmation, there seems to be no justification for allowing those people to reaffirm after the due date.

"Subsection IV of the bylaw is clear that each individual must reaffirm by June 1. The bylaw has been in its present form for several years and nothing contained in the harbormaster's letter or in my publication could lead any individual to believe that his rights in any way had been extended.

"Accordingly, it is my opinion that the harbormaster has the right to remove from the waiting list the names of any individual who did not reaffirm by the close of

Hazardous collection

For the second time this year, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Scituate residents can literally move the issue of hazardous waste out of their homes. This special collection is provided for citizens who may have missed the May collection or who were not served.

Thursday, June 30, residents of these towns will have the opportunity to bring their hazardous household products — unwanted pesticides, solvents, oils, oil- and lead- based paints, cleaners, batteries, and acrosol cans — to Scituate High School on Route 3A (near the tennis courts) for proper disposal.

Between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m., Northeast Solvents, a professional waste handling company, will be on hand to safely receive and transport this material to licensed out-of-state facilities for environmentally sound disposal.

This collection is funded by the towns of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Scituate and open only to residents of these towns. Only household wastes will be accepted. Businesses are excluded from participating in this collection.

Residents wishing more information may call the Board of Health in their community.

Selectmen vote appointments

Cohasset Selectmen voted Monday night to reappoint 16 town officials to one year terms.

All of the reappointments were unanimous, with the exception of Town Counsel, Richard A. Henderson.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby voted against Henderson's reappointment. She gave no reason.

Others reappointed were William Quigley, Dog Officer; Arthur L. Lehr, Jr., Director of Civil Defense and Emergency Preparedness; Donald G. Robbins, Building Inspector/Zoning Officer; Lot E. Bates, Jr., Sealer of Weights and Measures; Noel A. Ripley, Keeper of Town Clock.

Also, Lot E. Bates, Jr., Measurer of Wood and Bark; Noel A. Ripley, Director of Veterans' Affairs; Grace A Donohue, Kearin A. Dunn, Fence Viewers; Clifford J. Dickson, William G. Stone, David Marks, Assistant Harbormaster; Steven E. Osborne, Thomas Wigmore, Assistant Shellfish Constable; and David H. Wadsworth, Town Archivist.

Landfill area walk

The Concerned Citizens for Cohasset will be leading a walk through the Whitney Woods area; adjacent to the Cohasset Heights landfill on Sunday, June 19 at 1 p.m. Interested residents are asked to meet at Whitney Woods, Rte. 3A at 1 p.m. for an overall view and the effects of the landfill. Please no children or animals. Sturdy shoes or boots advised.

MBTA special service extended

The Ride Program, the MBTA's lift-equipped van service for persons with special needs, will be expanded to include the communities of Cohasset and Hingham.

Highlights of the new and expanded ride service in the nine South Shore communities include: extension of the days of service to include Saturday and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; extension of service to include service on all holidays from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The new contract will increase the number of trips provided each year in the South Shore from 6,000 to a projected 23,000.

To use The Ride in the South Shore, qualified registered residents must request a trip 24-hours ahead of time. One way fare is 75 cents.

Information on registration for the Ride program is available from the MBTA Office for Special Needs, 722-5123 (TDD 722-5415), or 1-800-533-MBTA.

- Voted to write to the Animal Shelter Committee of Hingham that it is still "very much interested in a regional animal shelter."
- Voted to have Selectman Martha Gjesteby act as liasion between the board and the Fair Housing Partnership Committee.
- Voted to recommend to the Board of Health that it pay any overtime funds for the chipping of brush proposed for every other Saturday and one day a week every other week at the municipal landfill.

Andrew says he will leave...

leaving," Andrew stated this week. "That was while I was on vacation. But when I got back, we were right in the middle of that Prop. 2 1/2 hornet's nest, and I thought it would look like I was running away from the issue. It would have lent credibility to the accusation that I was the one responsible for what happened. As if I was the one responsible for cutting state aid and new construction. That doesn't make much sense."

Andrew's decision was prompted by his "unhappiness" with the job. The youngest man ever to serve as a town accountant in Massachusetts at the age of 22, Andrew said working with a five-member board of selectmen is a more difficult task than working with a three-member board.

"It's much easier to know the tone of the board with three members," he stated. "There's alot less discussion about every issues, and it's much easier working with fewer members. Other people working in this field agree with me. It's more difficult and time consuming working with a five-member board."

Andrew also noted that while he was working with the town accountant and the treasurer-collector, he would find himself envious of their jobs. "That's what I really like to do," he commented.

"I'm very glad I took this job," Andrew noted. "professionally I am better off having come to Cohasset, although I continue to be unhappy.

"I'm not unhappy with the work," he continued. "And I don't know how much this has to do with local, small-town politics. I was dealing with a lot of personalities. In this job, you have to stay on top and meet many demands which is difficult. You tend to run your course in these jobs."

Andrew said he had heard on different occasions that he was being blamed for the town's budgetary problems. It was while Andrew was on vacation in February that town accountant Mary Matthews and the advisory committee discovered the town could not meet its budget appropriations without an override of Proposition 2 1/2.

"Although I had made up my mind before then that I was going to leave, I decided it wasn't the right time to say anything. Then came the override; it was successful. I decided to look at the job field, and announce my intentions to leave."

Municipal accounting and administration is the only profession Andrew has followed since he left the military in 1974. After that, he was named town accountant and clerk to selectmen in Oak Bluffs on Martha's Vineyard. He was later named senior accountant and federal grants administrator for the town of Brookline, and was eventually named temporary comptroller there.

He applied for the position of town accountant in Cohasset, but the executive secretary's job had also opened up. The board saw Andrew's experience in both positions, and offered a combined position to him. "They saw that as an experiment, and I was the first to say it had failed," Andrew recalled. Although Andrew opted for the position of town accountant, selectmen offered him more money to accept the executive secretary job.

"If I had'nt been offered more money, I would have chosen the town accountant's position," he stated.

Now, with about six months to search for a new job, Andrew said he would prefer to stay in the field of municipal accounting. "But I'm not ruling out the municipal management field," he said. "That's something I won't rule out."

Although he will stay in government, state or local, Andrew said he prefers to stay clear of another small town.

"I'm not leaving bitterly," he noted. "It's a professional decision. In good conscience, I could not look for another job while I was pretending that

Selectmen will reconsider King Street signs

The Cohasset Board of Selectmen's meeting Monday, June 27, will include reconsideration of approval for three no parking signs on the Lily St. side of King St. between 362-388.

The board voted 3 to 2 June 6, to approve the signs.

Selectmen James Gallagher and Rocco Laugelle were opposed.

At this week's meeting, Gallagher said he has received a number of complaints from people who fish at Lily Pond. He asked for reconsideration at the next meeting.

"I go along with that," said Laugelle.

"The Water Department complained about oil from cars, but it's not endangering the water supply."

Laugelle also said that he goes to the area often and 95 percent of those he sees there are Cohasset residents.

Selectmen also received a letter of complaint from Edward J. Sweeney of James Lane.

"You have taken away the last access area for residents who don't own property around the pond," wrote Sweeney in the June 9 letter.

"In other words, the pond is now a private playground for abutters.

"I have taken nature hikes with my dog and occasionally fished Lily Pond since I was a kid and it's one of my favorite places.

"If parking is a problem, I recommend residents only parking, utilizing the 'Dump and Beach' stickers.

"I appeal to you please don't take this lovely area away from us and reward abutters only."

going out of here."

Hamilton said that if toluene, a carcinogen, were found in the water, technology exists to remove it, though the Water Department does not currently have it.

"It is an air stripper," explained Hamilton. "It exposes the water to air."

Toluene is a volatile organic compound, he noted, which is more likely found in wells than in surface water.

"Any time anything goes up for unexplained reasons, we're concerned about it," commented Dr. Joseph Godzik, Cohasset health agent.

"But as low as it is..."

"I feel we have a pretty good handle on this," said Becker.

"We'll continue to monitor the situation."

Selectmen say no to boaters

business on June 1, 1988."

Selectmen voted unanimously that "the harbormaster be provided a copy of the opinion and be instructed to carry out his duty."

Paul Sheering of King St., who has had a mooring for 15 years, said that "Henderson's opinion has changed 180 degrees from last week."

At last week's meeting, Henderson had said he thought that because of conflicting regulations and bylaws, the situation should be construed in favor of the private citizen. However, he said he would look into the matter further.

During that meeting, a number of residents, including Sheerin, asked selectmen for help with the situation.

The residents said that taking away a mooring was a harsh penalty for missing a deadline. They also noted a discrepancy between the June 1 deadline and the usual April 1 due date.

However, in his legal opinion, Henderson said that discrepancy was no help to the mooring owners.

"In essence, all mooring holders were given a 60-day grace period and the town accepted mooring fees paid between April 2 and June 1."

At this week's meeting, Al Moore of Fair Oaks Lane told the board they were making "very strict rules."

"There should be notification by mail of a change in policy," said Moore who has been on the waiting list for eight years.

"We're not all drooling buffoons too lazy to do it (pay the fee on time)," he said.

"This doesn't serve any purpose other than to make citizens jump through hoops.

". . . I take great offense."

Moore noted that in past years, the town was more lax.

"You have a right to do what you want," said Moore angrily. "But I think it stinks."

Another resident said, "If you want to change regulations, I'll go along. But people should be informed."

Pratt replied, "We're making an attempt to tighten up loose regulations of the past in the harbor.,

"I think the board is bound by the legal opinion."

"I was one of the people stricken from the waiting list after 12 years," said Burke.

"When that many people are stricken from the list it indicates that something is wrong with the carrying out of the office of harbormaster.

"Obviously, something happened this year above and beyond the realm of good Cohasset government.

"God Love Harry Ritter (former harbormaster). Harry would have people call you (about the deadline).

"I've gone to the office four times and not found the harbormaster present.

"Should selectmen not waive the law, it would be catastrophic and unbecoming to the government of the town."

"What about the people who are behind you on the waiting list?" asked Selectman Rocco Laugelle.

"Do you think most people want a mooring by error?" asked Sheerin.

Burke added, "There isn't any other law in town as stringent . . . people should have notice."

"Those are the rules," said Ed Brennick of Elm St.

"I sympathize with you. But I have a boat in town and it would be nice to put it in the harbor.

"You chose not to follow the rules."

When the hearing was over, Moore said angrily, "The board should be ashamed." Then he walked out.

Concerned Citizens applaud court decision

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"It's a victory in one sense, but it isn't all over."

Addressing a public meeting last week, Water Commission Chairman Ronald Goodwin noted the State Supreme Judicial Court turned away a bid by Cohasset Heights Ltd. to stay in the trash-dumping business.

That court action later prompted Cohasset Selectmen to issue against the landfill a cease and desist order June 10, for the dump's commercial rubbish operation.

Landfill owners may continue to use the dump for demolition debris.

Goodwin was among four speakers at the two and a half hour meeting held by Concerned Citizens of Cohasset in the conference room at the Super Stop & Shop.

Many of the 35 residents who attended expressed concerns about the possibility that the landfill could endanger the water supply in Cohasset.

Also among those attending was Paul Barry, who along with his brother, John, owns the landfill.

"I saw the advertisement in the paper for the meeting," said Barry. "Being the subject, I decided to attend the meeting and see what happened."

One of the outcomes of the meeting was to plan landfill area walks Sunday June 12 and 19.

Weather permitting, the group will lead a walk through the Whitney Woods area, adjacent to the landfill, at 1 p.m. Interested residents are asked to meet at Whitney Woods, Rte. 3A.

Children and animals are not advised to attend.

The meeting's first speaker was Peter Pratt, who served as a Cohasset water commissioner from 1983 to 1986. He outlined the history of the landfill which he said started on Scituate Hill in the early 1970s as a demolition dump owned by James Tyeryar.

Pratt noted that that owner petitioned both the zoning board of appeals and health board for a demolition dump, but petitioned only the board of health for a commercial landfill.

"That's been appealed and litigated by the town to the Supreme Court," he said.

The current owners, the Barrys, who had run a trucking firm in Auburndale, purchased the property in the early 1980s, Pratt said.

In early 1983, they sold the trucks to Browning Ferris Industries, he said.

Pratt said that the Cohasset Board of Water Commissioners expressed initial concern about the landfill situation in 1982-1983, and joined with the board of health in litigation for greater control.

A 100-page draft engineering study done for the town in 1985 stated that trace elements of leachate were detectable in a stream which runs into Lily Pond, Cohasset's main water supply, according to Pratt.

However, the final report stated that the leachate would be diluted by the time it reached Lily Pond, he said.

"A public water supply is not something you can take even a prudent chance with," said Pratt.

"Its value is in the tens of millions of dollars."

Bill Hodgkins showed slides of the landfill and the surrounding woods and wetlands.

"This is totally unbelieveable," commented Charles Gainor of Sohier St. He said testing should be conducted on organisms living in the water around the area.

Helene Lieb of Jerusalem Road asked, "What can citizens of Cohasset do?"

"We have a political problem," answered Goodwin. "The only way to change this is political pressure."

Goodwin commented that the conference room where the meeting was being held should have been filled with residents.

"People are so busy," he said. "They don't realize the problem until they turn on the faucet.

"DEQE has said Cohasset Heights Landfill is one of the finest-run landfills in the community.

"But it is in our watershed."

Pratt criticized the town's legal advice.

"The attorneys representing the town have gotten rich by skirting around the issue," said Pratt.

Goodwin showed a video tape on the landfill and on protests which citizens held there last year.

"We have political pressure as a group, not as individuals," he said.

"We can call our representatives and tell them how we feel."

One resident asked Barry how much it would cost to install a leachate treatment plant.

"About $2 to $3 million," said Barry.

Hull Selectman John Silva, who is running for state representative, said, "We're very interested in what goes on here.

"Whatever happens will reach Hingham residents."

Other officials at the meeting included Cohasset selectman Martha Gjesteby.

"I hope from tonight," said one resident, "that we will schedule another meeting or form a network to get more people involved."

"Everyone is individually responsible to be as active as they can," agreed Goodwin.

"But together is right."

Gail Collins of South Main St. said that she doesn't drink the water in Cohasset.

"I make ice cubes from the water that I buy," she said.

A show of hands indicated that many at the meeting agreed with her.

"Are the town boards aware that the people are against a landfill in the watershed?" asked another resident.

"We have to tell our neighbors and friends to get involved one way or another," said Goodwin.

Wearing a Greenpeace hat, David Bigley, the last speaker, said, "Some people think this is an isolated event, but the EPA is swamped with case after case of landfills that are leaking.

"All landfills leak. The EPA admitted it."

Bigley, who was among those arrested last year at the protest at the landfill, said that "landfills are silly in the first place. To bury unknown quantities, unknown items...

"Years ago some mistakes were made on both sides.

"We have to get together to remedy those mistakes.

"The least effective way is to rely on engineering studies.

"The most effective way has been applying political pressure on the local level.

"Everyone should commit themselves to calling the board of health, health inspector and board of selectmen.

"Talk it up with your friends. Those kind of things are what is going to work.

"We have to respond to protect the town and resources of the town.

"Everyone has got to feel that it's not hopeless," said Bigley, founder of Greenpeace in the New England area.

"Little things make a difference."

Court decision stands

only demolition debris. Although that owner later received demolition permits from the state and local health board, the Cohasset zoning board never granted approval for a change in the landfill's site assignment.

That oversight was uncovered in 1976 by former Building Inspector Edward Poskus. Although his determination was appealed by the landfill owners to the local zoning board, the violation was upheld.

Although disappointed in their latest legal setbacks, Atty. Antone Moehrke said landfill owners Paul and John Barry are far from defeat.

"We're now looking at whether, in fact, this decision may actually prolong this operation - whether the disposal of regular demolition materials may prolong the life of this operation," Cohasset Heights Ltd. attorney Antone Moehrke stated this week.

Landfill owner Paul Barry agreed, noting that he and his brother will be sitting down with their attorneys to discuss the future of the business.

"The landfill will continue," he said this week. The landfill honored the cease and desist order Tuesday monring, and will no longer accept general refuse, he noted.

"It will remain a viable business. It is a drastic change for us because when we purchased this landfill six years ago, we purchased a refuse permit along with it," Barry continued. "It took almost three years of court battles after Poskus was pressured to find something. We tried hard to win this case.

"This will hinder our operation. But the landfill will continue. There is a product for a demolition landfill, and we're going to find what's out there.," he added.

Barry, who with his brother john purchased the commercial landfill seven years ago, said they have accepted the defeat. "But we are not out of business," he added. "The gates are still open and we're doing business.

"We spent a lot of money fighting this and there's been a lot of stress. It's something Cohasset doesn't want and they feel they made a mistake in allowing it here.. But you can't put people out of business from gut feelings," he noted.

Several months ago, Barry offered to accept the town's refuse at the landfill in return for and end to all court litigation against Cohasset Heights Ltd. Barry said that offer has been "pulled back."

He explained, "the town is totally in control of this latest court decision. It's up to the town to decide whether they will enforce this decision. They could still join us with their refuse - we could all work together along with engineers and our attorneys to make sure this is a clean operation. But we're not going to make an issue out of it."

Atty. Moehrke noted that when all the smoke is cleared, "this may just be a tempest in a teapot."

He stated, "it's something the landfill owners did not want, but when forced to confront reality, it may be for the best. It may well be that with a few operational changes, this is the kind of landfill that may be best for the town and the landfill owners. Upon further examination, this may well be the kind of operation we want. We will continue to operate in substantially similar form. We may be able to accomodate this without adversity."

Within a 24-hour period of the land court decision, Atty. Moehrke said the decision appeared not to be as bleak as they originally thought. "It forces us to look into the latest technology. There are massive procedures being useed now in demolition sites, and this is something we have to look into.

"By examining our alternatives now - we may actually be able to extend the site life of this landfill."

75th ANNIVERSARY

Sidney Gates, Founding Father of Gates, was like a lot of dads. He made good decisions and not-so-good decisions. The whole Gates family remembers Ida Gates' tale of lighting the coal stove to warm up their new apartment, and unbeknownst to her, burning up the couple's savings. Sidney blamed Ida, of course. Fathers have a way of turning things around, don't they?

It's that time again. Father's Day is Sunday. Our full service men's department is prepared to help you make selections for that "Toughest Guy" on your list.

Continue forward

It seems a compromise may have finally been reached.

The town has won the right to restrict the dumping of general refuse and industrial waste into Cohasset Heights Ltd., the commercial landfill located on Crocker Lane.

Faced with defeat, the landfill owners and their attorney feel this may not be the worse thing that could have happened. They will be forced to change their operation, and to find a consumer for their product.

They will obey the town's decision to enforce the court ruling, but they are determined to remain open for business.

People in the town, particularly a small group of activists whose sole concern has been to close down the landfill, should be content with this latest decision. Their goal, to clean up what they consider a potentially dangerous situation, has been acomplished. No longer will industrial waste and general refuse be accepted into the landfill which borders the town's watershed.

The landfill owners relcutantly agree this is a decision they can live with. Although they are not ecstatic about changing their operation, they will comply with the law. And in the end, according to their attorney, the town and the landfill may be happier.

The town will have a landfill they can live with - without industrial waste running into the groundwater. Their fears that contamination will result from the landfill's leachate will be allayed. Demolition debris would appear to be a far cleaner operation than industrial and commercial waste.

The landfill owners will have to adjust accordingly, but they are optimistic they can continue their business. As Paul Barry has stated many times, the contention that Cohasset Heights is or may one day pollute Cohasset's drinking water is made from gut feelings, not scientific evidence.

Not once has it been found that Cohasset Heights is polluting our water. Yet that is the fear of many people in this town, primarily a small group of concerned residents who dislike the idea of having a landfill within the watershed.

We should all be concerned about the future of our water supply. That includes town officials who originally approved the site assignment for this commercial landfill in 1976. It includes the group of residents who have legally and illegally protested the continuation of this landfill. And the owners should be concerned about our drinking water.

We believe all sides in this confrontation are genuinely concerned, although we do not agree with the tactics used by some. This is, afterall, a landfill approved by the proper town officials. It has been classified as one of the best-run commercial landfills in the country - one which other landfill owners and state agencies look to as a standard-bearer. It is only proper that this landfill is well-run.

We hope both sides can see the compromise made here, and continue forward. There should be no halt to the continual monitoring of the landfill. And there should be no attempt made to arouse the public regarding a situation that has never been scientifically proven dangerous or potentialy dangerous.

Taxpayers should reject wage law

Letters

To the Editor:

As a resident taxpayer and an officer of a major local construction company, it was with great pleasure that I read your recent cover story entitled "Union Pay Scale Inflates Costs."

It's about time that the media begin to bring the issue of the Davis-Bacon prevailing wage laws to the taxpayer.

The average taxpayer does not realize that the same tradesman or laborer who is willing to work at a market driven pay scale on a private sector building project must be temporarily paid at the inflated union pay scale on a government construction project.

The local Cohasset Town Hall addition project really brings this issue into perspective. The same project that is costing us $1.1 million would cost an estimated $800,000 without the prevailing wage law.

The construction quality issue that is raised by the pro-union side is also misunderstood. Quality is the responsibility of the architects and engineers who design the work, draw each detail, specify each component, certify compliance and authorize payment. Quality is not a union/non-union issue.

Someday taxpayers will wake up and pressure Senator Kennedy and our state and local legislators to eliminate the Davis-Bacon Act and encourage free market competition in the construction of government building and infra-structure projects.

A Father's Day tribute to Mr. Barry

To the people of Cohasset,

To those of you who have been fortunate enough to have known Paul S. Barry Jr. for the past four years, we would like to take this opportunity to let you know how fortunate we feel to have known him all our lives.

Paul Barry started with a wife, four children and a small, self-incorporated disposal business. His goals were to become successful by working hard, doing what was right and providing everything he could for his family.

Paul Barry accomplished these goals through his dedication, long hours of labor, and honest care for all those people with whom he came into contact.

After eleven years of building operation and being a strong role model for his children, Paul Barry sold his business in Newton, Ma. and moved his family to Cohasset in order to concentrate on operating his Cohasset landfill to the best of his ability. This landfill has been quoted by the DEQE as one the most efficient and well-run landfills in the state.

Recently, the license for refuse, which was granted by the Town of Cohasset before Paul's proprietorship, has been revoked. The grounds for this repudiation are that the landfill assumedly might someday endanger the town's water supply, Lily Pond.

Although some people ignorantly see Paul Barry as a man in search of his own great wealth, we, as well as many others, know that individual, material gain is far from his main concern in life. If he had any doubt that Cohasset Heights Landfill is now, or ever will, contaminate Lily Pond, Paul Barry would rectify the situation, even if it entailed terminating the intake of rubbish (which, by the way, every single one of us generates in our daily routines).

Paul Barry has strived to lead an honest, reputable life and nodoby knows that better than us. Although living with his high morals was sometimes difficult, at some point we finally realized that he really cared about us and how we should lead our lives.

What we can't understad, now, is how, after spending so many years doing what's right; testing above and beyond what the town requires at Cohasset Heights, granting every request (no matter how rediculous) that the town and its residents voiced in regards to the landfill,not to mention the everyday things that he did for us and the community, someone like Paul Barry could be slandered and mentally abused to the extent in which he has been here in this town.

Nobody deserves the kind of treatment that Paul Barry has suffered. We find it ironic that someone can base his life of values such as honesty, hard work and dedication only, in return, to be treated like a felon.

We are sure that almost everyone can relate to the feeling of knowing that what he/she is doing is totally right, but repeatedly being told that he/she is totally wrong. It's frustrating. It's even more frustrating to observe this process being done against our father. Such a process can take its toll on a person both mentally and physically and it hurts us to witness such a reflection of this process in our father.

We have learned a precious lesson over the past four years. Hopefully the values which our father has worked so hard to instill in us will remain with us, regardless of what we have seen our father put through while upholding these same principles.

Our father is a good man and, regardless of what he has been subject to by the opposition, we will always respect what he has done and we feel he can always hold his head high.

Coalition grant to change image of affordable housing

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

The South Shore Coalition has received a $21,420 state grant to help them try to change stereotypes about affordable housing.

The regional organization with representatives from 10 South Shore towns will use the money to produce a videotape aimed at changing negative attitudes about affordable housing.

Project manager Jean Christensen, executive director of the coalition, taped the June 1 meeting of the Marshfield Housing Partnership for the program just a few days after the grant was announced.

The group also will produce a manual for local officials to help them deal with the comprehensive permit process for affordable housing projects. The manual will show local boards how to negotiate with developers, rather than respond with regulation.

The coalition is made up of representatives from Marshfield, Weymouth, Hanover, Hingham, Cohasset, Norwell, Hull, Rockland, Scituate and Duxbury.

The coalition grant is one of 25 distributed throughout Massachusetts from the state Executive Office of Communities and Development.

The state grant to all 25 organizations totalled $799,420, Secretary Amy Anthony said. The EOCD selected each project based on its potential to be replicated throughout the state.

Several months ago, the coalition formed a housing task force composed of locally appointed representatives. They will work with professional housing consultants to develop the project.

First, the task force will generate a "commercial quality video program designed to directly confront the breakdown of stereotypes generated in people's minds by the discussion of affordable housing," explained Hull selectman John Silva, chairman of the coalition.

In the coalition's grant application to the state, project manager Jean Christensen, executive director of the coalition, said that through public education the organization hopes to address and change the "prevailing negative attitudes" about affordable housing.

The video program will address the question "Who is affordable housing for?," Christensen said. The common fear is that affordable housing is occupied by the poor and minorities who are unemployed and a burden to taxpayers.

What to do if lead is found in your water

You probably know that lead can be a threat to your health. How much of a threat depends on how much lead gets into your body and how much your body retains.

Sources of lead in the environment include old paint, contaminated soil, leaded gasoline and, to a lesser yet significant degree, drinking water.

Knowing how lead gets into your tap water and what you can do to avoid it will minimize your risk.

Harmful levels of lead in drinking water are almost never found at the water source. Whether you drink water that comes from a reservoir, lake, river, or well, the amount of naturally occuring lead seldom poses a problem. But in between the source of your water and your faucet is a series of pipes and connections, including the plumbing in your home, and it is here that you could find a problem.

The age of your home will tell you a lot. Homes built before 1940 may have lead pipes. Lead pipes in service connections and in plumbing were last used in the 1930s. So if your home is more than 50 years old, there's a good chance there are lead pipes within the building. If you aren't sure, have a plumber inspect it.

Lead solder was also used to joint pipes, until it was banned in Massachusetts in 1986. Soft water and acidic water are especially corrosive. The more corrosive the water, the more lead it can dissolve as it passes through the pipes.

Part of the purpose of this notice is to inform you of the current standard.

The Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and others are concerned about lead in drinking water. Too much lead in the human body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidney, nervous system, and red blood cells. The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure, is to young children and pregnant women.

Lead levels in your drinking water are likely to be highest:

- If your home or water system has lead pipes, or
- If your home has copper pipes with lead solder, and — If the home is less than five years old, or — if you have soft, corrosive or acidic water, or — if water sits in the pipes for several hours.

Some good news is that after five years or so lead from solder no longer poses a risk of contamination to standing water. In now common copper pipes, not only is most lead solder dissolved out within about five years, but also a coating of lime builds up inside the pipe and seals in some of the lead in these joints; the older the plumbing, the lower the probability of excessive lead from solder. So, as a general rule, original plumbing more than five and less than 50 years old poses a lower risk.

If you have high-risk plumbing, whether or not you have had your water tested for lead, you can make a few simple changes in your habits at home to reduce lead-related risk to your health.

Draw drinking water in the morning (including the water for juices, coffee, and so on) only after using water for other things, such as a shower.

If water has been sitting in your pipes for six hours or more, use that water for things other than drinking.

Do not use hot tap water for cooking, drinking and preparing baby formula or foods.

Beware of commercially available devices for the home whose manufacturers claim they purify water. None of the following are effective against lead.

- Carbon filters, sand filters, cartridge filters: While these products do filter out certain contaminants, they do not remove lead nor reduce corrosivity.
- Water softeners, iron removal systems, and iron exchange units all soften water, and soft water usually increases corrosion.

Certain highly technical treatment processes can be used to reduce lead, but because of their sophistication the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering recommends their use only with the services of state-certified drinking water facility operator.

The drinking water delivered to your home's service connection by the Cohasset Water Department consistently meets existing and proposed EPA standards for lead and the Cohasset Water Department has been treating water delivered to consumers to control corrosivity since May 1978.

Historical museums to open

Cohasset Center will be the site of the Cohasset Historical Society's Open House Saturday, June 18, as the Society's Capt. John Wilson House and Maritime Museum begin their summer season.

These two historical buildings are opening their doors for the beginning of the Society's 60th season at 1:30 p.m. and will remain open with no admission cost until 4:30 p.m.

The Capt. Wilson House is an 1810 sea captain's home replete with furnishings from Cohasset of the early 19th century. The Maritime Museum next door, (both are on Elm Street), is an old ship chandlery and holds extensive historical collections relating to Cohasset's seafaring history, particularly during the town's illustrious and long "Age Of Sail."

Special attraction will be some of the Royal 47th Regiment of Foot, in uniform. This recreated British regiment, originally of the latter 18th century, fought at Concord, Bunker Hill and Saratoga. Its modern counterpart is authentically uniformed and trained by Cohasset's Col. Bruce Collins. Members of the 47th Regiment will be present during the Open House at Society museums this Saturday.

The Historical Society's regular museum season this summer will run through Sept. 30; each afternoon except Mondays, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Admission to each of the two buildings will be $1.50, except for the Open House this Saturday.

Light refreshments will be served at Saturday's Open House.

Plan to visit the Historical Society's historical museums this coming Saturday to see authentically uniformed "Redcoasts" fo the 47th Regiment of Foot, and to get a unique look at the history of this New England seafaring village.

Japanese exchange

Cultural Homestay Institute (CHI), a non-profit educational exchange program, which has brought Japanese student groups to the South Shore for the past eight years, is offering families the chance to participate in a three or four week program.

Japanese students attend English conversation classes each day, visit local historic and cultural sites, and enjoy parties and sports events planned for all host family members and their Japanese "sons and daughters."

Margot Cheel, Boston area administrator, noted that friendships continue over the years — with students calling back to their families to announce their marriage engagement, or the birth of their first child, or even choosing to return here on their honeymoon.

For those families wishing to further their understanding and friendships with a Japanese son or daughter, CHI offers the Academic High School Program. This year students are participating in a four-month Intensive English Program prior to coming to the Boston area in late August.

For further information on this summer's programs (in Hanson, Mashfield, Hanover, Holliston, Gardner and Wellfleet) and for details on the Academic High School Program, telephone Margot Cheel at 383-9184.

Three athletes named to Mass. all-star team

Cohasset youth soccer

Three Cohasset youth soccer players have made the Massachusetts Under 19 Select team, town coordinator Larry Shultz announced this week. The Select team, a 20-player all-star squad that will play throughout New England and the Northeast this summer, picked Cohasset High School stars Ned Chase, and Joel and Jim Reidy for its 1988 contests.

"To have three players on this team really reflects well on our program," Shultz said. "Our showing for the District teams, though, may have been even better."

For the Southeast District select teams, Cohasset placed an additional 17 players on seven different squads. The Southeast District — one of the eight regions the state is divided into — stretches from Hingham to Fall River, including Cape Cod.

Eleven Cohasset girls made district all-star teams, including seven who were named to the Southeast Under 19 squad. The Under 19 players are Katie Lord, Katie Murphy, Katie Ryan, Cindy Dormer, Kerry Kirkendall and Jen Coley.

Named to the Under 16 teams were Amy Crafts, Sophie Redfield and Cory DeSantis. And picked for the Under 12 squad were Kate Carroll and Emily Spencer.

Named to the boys' select teams for the Southeast District were Robby Lawrence (Under 14), Bill Baird (Under 15), Dan Bliss and Jay Staunton (Under 16), and David Shultz, Todd Fitzpatrick, and the Reidy brothers (Under 19). Chase, the state all-star, didn't try out for the district squad.

Coastal League play concluded for Cohasset teams this week with some good results, but no league titles. Under 12-1 boys, which finished a week ago with an 8-1-1 record, were eliminated when Hingham won their final game. Under 19 boys fell to Duxbury in a terrific contest, losing 2-1 while playing the entire game without substitutes. David Shultz, on a cross from Todd Fitzpatrick, scored his seventh goal of the season in the loss.

Under 10-1 boys, down 1-0 to Carver with less than two minutes to play, salvaged a remarkable season when defender Matt Belson, on a daring play, scored the tying goal on a left-footed shot into the corner of the net.

Ned Chase (center) and Joel (l) and Jim Reidy were named this week to the Mass. Under 19 Select Soccer team. (Chris Edwards)

It was Belson's second goal of the season for 10-1, which finished among the league leaders with a 6-1-3 record. "Sean Norris, Matt Rossi, Matt O'Connor and Jon Crafts all had fine games too," coach Terry Kahn reported.

Under 16 boys fell to Pembroke 4-1, despite Doug Drysdale's goal. Bill Baird played well for the losers, too.

In girls' play, Under 10-2 lost a tight one to Kingston, 2-0. Defender Jesse Sandell, midfielders Ashley Brister and Kelly Marie O'Donnell, goalies Emily Henderson and Laura Slotnick, and forward Megan Connolly all stood out, reported coach Kevin O'Donnell.

Under 12-1 girls fell 6-1 to Pembroke. Emily Spencer scored for Cohasset, and got good support from Bonnie Krueger, Anne Lindgren and Renee Prisble. Under 16 girls were edged by Norwell 2-1, and coach Steve Hague had praise for Nicole Barry, Melissa Rousseau and Amy Crafts.

We've had a good season," said coordinator Shultz, "and with earlier registration and better planning, we hope to improve on this next year."

Cohasset Little League results

Monday night the Mets and the Braves hooked up in the type of game that gives one manager heartburn and leaves the other manager with ulcers. At the outcome of this suspenseful, see-saw battle, Braves' manager, Mark Batts had a roll of Tums and Met's manager, John Rolandelli, was searching for a bottle of Maalox.

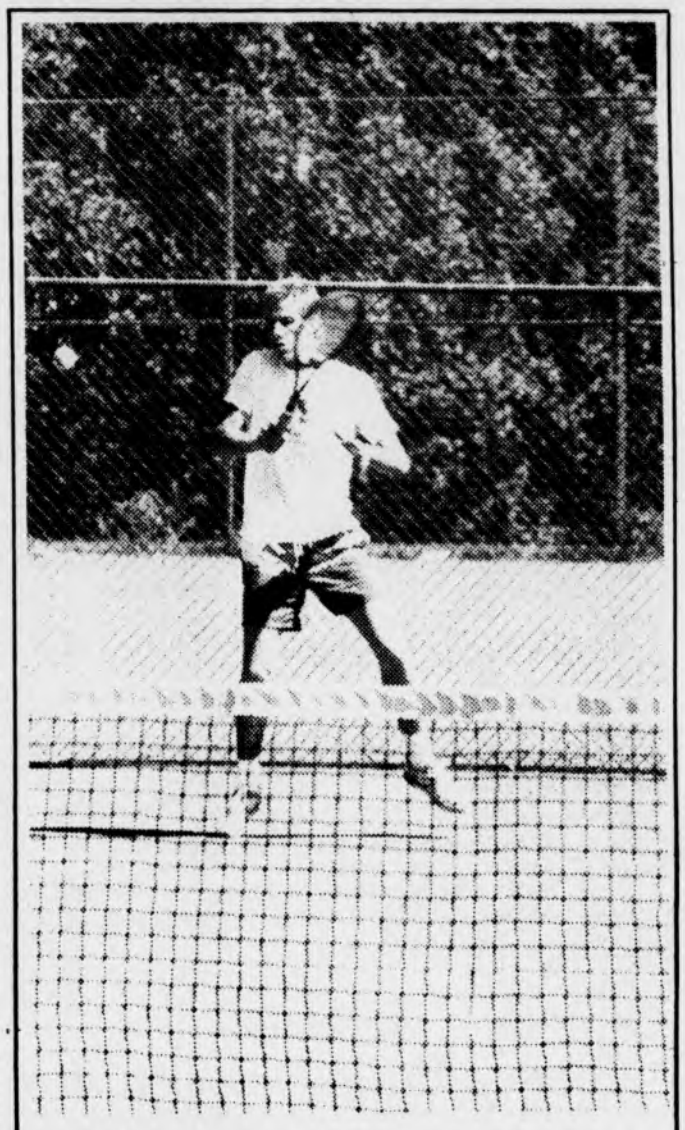
The Braves rallied in the bottom of the sixth to erase a 5-2 deficit and leave the field with a 6-5 win. The highlight of the rally was "Bucket" Higgins' liner to right to drive in two runs and tie up the game. Subsequently, he reached home on a passed ball with the "astute supervision of the third base coach" who happened to be his dad, Bill Higgins, the generous sponsor of the Braves (Harbor Mechanical Contractors.)

In other action this week the Sox faced the Yankees twice. On second thought. . .make that three times. Prior to Tuesday night's scheduled game, the teams completed their suspended contest. Just two pitches and the results were in. On the first pitch, Kevin McKenna was hit by a pitch to load the bases. On the next offering, the fleet Jeff Littlehale came all the way from second on a wild pitch to score the winning and make winners of the Sox 14-13 and officially conclude the first half of the season.

In the following game the Yankees bested the Sox 7-6 in a superbly played contest. The Yankees utilized five hits, good baserunning, and opportune defense to pick up a win for pitcher Mike Reynolds. The Sox got seven hits including career games from Jim Magner and Greg Stevens, but had a three-run rally in their sixth fall a run shy. Magner had two hits and 3 RBIs (including a two run double to fuel that late rally) and Greg reached base three times on two hits and an error in addition to pitching a magnificent game and fielding his position superbly.

Friday night, these same two teams played and again the Yanks came away victorious. Behind the lively arm and bat of Tim Brister and a defensive display down at third by Pat Reynolds who reminded me of Brooks Robinson, the Yanks emerged on top 14-8.

The Yankees had 11 hits all told. Included were three by Brister, three by Mike Reynolds, two by defensive standout Pat Reynolds, two doubles by Chris Goodman, two sharp singles by Tom Greco, and a double by Nate Caldwell. The Sox could muster only four hits including two by Chris Stevens, a single by Jim Magner and a bases-clearing triple by Kevin McKenna to cap a seven run sox rally in the third. Brister and his mates closed the door defensively after that, and well they did because only 4 Red Sox struck out all evening, a very impressive statistic as well as a credit to that Yankee defense.



Cohasset's Rich Reddich participated in last week's tennis tourney at CHS. (Dave Sullivan)

A great CHS season closes with a loss

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

A successful 1988 campaign ended in inglorious fashion for the Cohasset boys' tennis team, a 3-2 loss to Silver Lake in the preliminaries on June 8.

Silver Lake did it the hard way on Cohasset's home turf, winning all three singles matches in three sets and finishing the season for the Skippers at 16-3.

"This was a match we could have won easily. Our first and second doubles teams came through, but we lost all of our three singles matches, said the head coach Ed Amaral, who just completed his third season at the helm, and during those years, he has taken Cohasset to the playoffs each time.

"It was a great match. The excitement of being a part of it was unbelievable. Of course, I was disappointed that we did not win, but we realized it was a one-game elimination. We happened to lose so we are out of it."

Silver Lake's first singles player Dan Rakauskas bounced back from a 1-5 deficit to win the first set in a tie-breaker, 7-6 (7-3), then won the third set, 6-3, against highly-regarded Rich Redick.

"Rich had his chances to win. He was just simply over hitting the ball. However, that loss does not tarnish a successful career Rick has had at Cohasset," said Amaral.

Second singles Bob Harrington of Silver Lake had difficulty getting his serve in early, and lost his first set. He opted for a little less pace and a little more slice on his serve the rest of the way to edge Fred Willshire, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3.

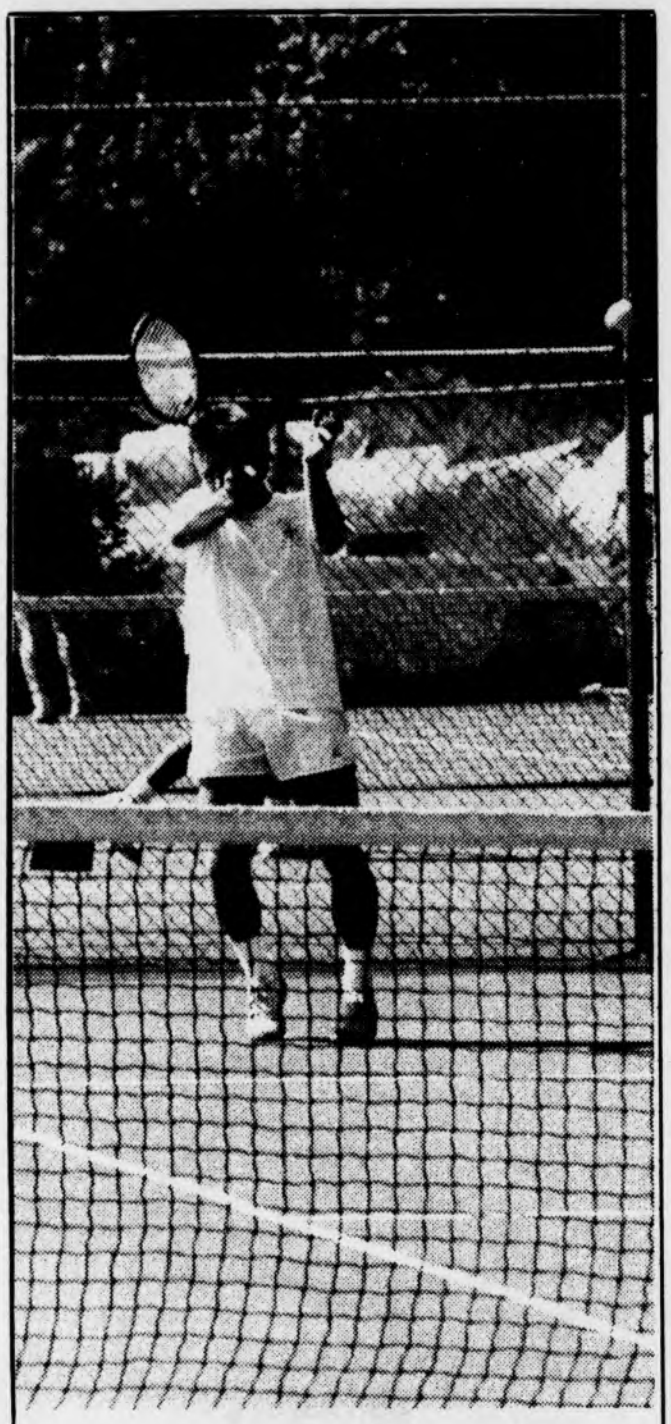
Third singles player Deane Lawrence also lost his opening set in a tie-breaker, 7-5 (6-7), but came back to earn the deciding point over Derek Lacks.

Cohasset swept doubles behind Steve Myers and Jason Marsac, 6-4, 6-3, and Joel Reidy and Frank Willshire, who were extended to a third-set tie-breaker, 4-6, 6-2, 7-6 (9-7).

"Steve and Jason played a solid match. They were able to use all assortment of shots (volley, baseline, net and serve.) They just went out to play some good tennis. They were calm, loose and aggressive. They hit all of their shots."

Amaral also praised the performance of Reidy and Willshire.

"They did a nice job of hanging in there. Frank played the best tennis of his life. Joel is always a tough competitor. Their victory is a big step for next year. Those two players will battle for the number one singles spot next season. It was a very enjoyable and rewarding season for me. I am going to miss the seniors. For three years, they were the nucleus of the club. We have to do the best we can next year.



Fred Willshire was another standout during last week's CHS tennis tourney.

Recycling plan praised

Jean Christensen, executive director of the South Shore Coalition, lauded Gov. Michael Dukakis' plan to ban the state purchase of non-recycled disposable polystyrene products by 1989.

"I think it's great," she said. "He's providing leadership that had not been provided before at the state level on this. I hope local leaders will follow suit."

By mandating the purchase of recycled materials, the governor's program is expected to create a market that will foster growth of the recycling industry in Massachusetts.

Regionally, the coalition will kick off its "Reduce, Replace, Recycle" campaign June 27, asking businesses what they could do to take non-recyclable products out of the waste stream.

Christensen and Hanover selectman Janet O'Brien, former chairman of the 10-town organization, recently returned from the New England Resource Recovery Conference and Exposition in Portland, Maine.

Christensen said more than 700 participated in workshops and toured resource recovery facilities in Portland and Biddeford.

"Westinghouse and other businesses in the resource recovery industry were pushing recycling," she noted.

Nationally, changes in policy toward recycling have taken place on a state by state basis. "That's why the governor's statement was so important," she said. "Our state needs recycling."

At the conference, Christensen said, she learned that the industry that produces packaging is working on techniques to make it less toxic and easier to recycle.

Glasfeld named ship's captain

Michael Glasfeld

Michael Glasfeld of Cohasset was recently named the Operations Manager (senior captain) on board the Boston entertainment vessel, "Spirit of Boston."

Glasfeld spent much time on boats as a child. He used to sail around Minot's Light House in his 12-foot Dory, with the hope of someday becoming a captain.

A graduate of Cohasset High School, Glasfeld graduated from Hampshire College where he majored in the Sciences. He is the son of Rolf Dieter Glasfeld, a native of Germany and a naval architect, and Elizabeth, a guide at Mystic Seaport. Michael's past experience includes working for the Cohasset's harbor master while he was in school. He became a deckhand on the "Spirit of Boston," a position he held for one year. He was then promoted to First Mate on board the vessel, which he also kept for one year. At this point, Glasfeld obtained his license to be a captain. His experience includes delivering yachts back and forth between Florida and Boston, including the "Spirit of Boston." The "Spirit of Boston" is a 145-foot twin engine vessel. The ship sails nightly on dinner cruises and daily on clambake cruises and features a crew of waiters and waitresses.

First Parish

Parish Committee Notes:

Our new Parish Committee met for the first time this past Thursday. Polly Blanchard, Shelly Weier, and Colin Studds were welcomed to the Committee. Retiring members Mille Mitman and Carol Martin offered parting words of counsel and then Deborah Eaton was elected chairperson, Sumner Smith was elected clerk and Colin Studds was appointed to replace Deborah Eaton as Religious Education Committee liaison. The Committee then voted to engage Nancy Connoly as Director of Religious Education for the coming year and appointed Bryan Bruce Chairperson of the Religious Education Committee. Also appointed to the Religious Education Committee were JoAnn Chittick, Jill Crafts and Roella Hobbs for one year and Garry Gardner, Stephanie Thieleman and Madeline Olney for two years.

During July the Parish Committee will be making appointments to all of the various committees of our parish. An interest survey form has been included with the newsletter seeking your assistance in finding people who would enjoy helping us develop and implement our programs and activities next year.

NEW MEMBER

We extend a warm welcome to Norma Telesco who signed the membership book last Sunday.

MUSIC NOTES:

Our Choir Sunday, June 19, is a tribute to Hollis Gleason, donor of the Gleason Fund. I only knew Hollis the last couple of years of his life for he stopped singing with the Choir at the age of about 92, the year I came to First Parish. I am told that he sang with the Choir for 50 years and rarely missed a Sunday. The Choir used to go to his home to serenade him, and he would greet us from where he sat ramrod straight and dressed for church even though he rarely went out at the time. He was one of a class of people not often found today, whose presence and support of the church were quietly guaranteed with a loyalty not threatened by road races or soccer games. When he died he left the church a fund, the proceeds of which were reported for the Choir to have fun with. Although it is tempting to throw one terrific party each year, we have spent these funds to hire instrumentalists and buy music for special services.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

New 'Fat-Magnet' Diet Pill Gives You Steady Fat Loss

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" to help you steadily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods as long as you don't increase your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire."

It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough for weight loss (worldwide patents pending).

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles from food that you have just eaten. Then, the trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Pills Go To Work"

The fat-magnet pills alone, "automatically" help reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat, with no exercising. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals. However, you can lose weight "faster" if you choose to follow the fat-magnet diet plan along with the pills.

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with record sales and glowing reports of weight loss. It's a "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating.

Now Available to Public

If you need to lose a large or small amount of weight, you can order your supply of these new highly successful fat-magnet pills and diet plan (now available from the doctor's exclusive manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$2 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), cash, check or money order to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. WR48, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) A report on the school libraries

We are happy to announce that the Cohasset Schools Libraries have enjoyed a most productive and exciting year.

At Osgood School, Lorene Miller has done an outstanding job with the children in grades 1-3, sharing books and helping to impart library skills. With the first graders, Caldecott Award Winners have been emphasized, and each child will have a chance to read and tell the others about the award winning book he/she has been reading. Additionally, in June the children will each receive a bookmark listing all the Caldecott winners over the last 50 years. First graders also delighted in the Teddy Bear Picnic theme Mrs. Miller introduced in the form of books and stories about bears. The children then decorated their own Teddy Bears in styles of "punk" to formal wear. The bears may now be seen frolicking along the library walls.

The second graders have been working with Mrs. Miller along with Mrs. Batts and Mrs. McFadd, from the High School Library, on their class books. Each class has written and illustrated an original collaborative story. Presentations of the books will be made by author illustrator, Sue Dreamer, at an author party at Osgood on Friday, May 27. Punch and cookies will be served.

The class which has excelled in library book returns over the year is Mrs. Montuori's third grade. They will be honored at an award ceremony in June.

On a weekly basis throughout the year, Marilyn Pope has visited Osgood and told stories in all grades. Our thanks to Mrs. Pope for this wonderful bonus of library service extending beyond the walls of the public library and out into the schools. Other Paul Pratt librarians, who have been of tremendous help on the Jr/Sr High School level as well as providing extra help to the 6th graders on their School Fair Projects at Deer Hill, are Sue Wattress, Sue Pope, and Sue Terry. We are very fortunate in Cohasset to have such a dedicated and service oriented library staff in the public library. This cooperation is not as common as one might think betwen a school system aend the public library. The schools' library staffs wish to thank those who have made our task that much easier.

At Deer Hill, Marge Murphy has once more gone above and beyond what one individual might be expected to accomplish in a school library. It has truly become a resource center the whole school has come to depend on.

In all three grades (4-6) the RIF (Reading is Fundamental) Program has been an unqualified success Marge says, although there was more work than she'd anticipated, the results have been well worth the effort. Thanks go to Ed Leary at the high school for having found the grant and alerting the administration; also to the PSO for having provided the necessary funds required to match the federal grant.

Book fairs have been, or will be, run by the PSO at Deer Hill and Osgood with the school libraries benefiting from the book sales. On June 6th there will be a spring Book Fair held at Deer Hill for all three grades — your support is welcomed.

Mrs. Murphy notes that Book Sharing in the 6th grade has been an exciting, dynamic, enthusiastic and expressive experience.

For those of you wondering about the new computer in the Deer Hill Library, the report from Mrs. Murphy is that progress is slow but steady, thanks to volunteer assistance. More adult volunteers are needed however, and Mrs. Murphy will be on hand herself as a volunteer to get the data into the computer this summer. She would be glad to provide training for any adults who would care to offer some time (No typing or computer experience necessary!!). She would especially welcome Senior Citizen help. . . .

Each of the three school libraries has received a $200 grant from METCO to purchase books which should be on the shelves by September; and Deer Hill Library has also received another grant of money to be put towards materials on disabilities and special needs.

And finally, at the Jr/Sr High School Library, in the fall the 7th graders were given an orientation to the library, as well as an orientation to see which library skills had been mastered at Deer Hill and which ones needed more reinforcing. Every week (and sometimes more often) these same students have been in and out of the library to choose new books for Mr. Kite's free reading period. It's been exciting to watch them "discover" books and to find out their favorites. Soon we'll all learn which ones are the favorite Top Ten once the poll is completed next week. Plans call for the addition of these "must reads" to the Jr/Sr High Summer Reading list which will be forthcoming later in June. The Library and English Department will be working together to eliminate those books no longer in print, to add on the young people's favorites as well as to include the classics and more recently published "good reads" . . . We hope that the suggested summer reading list for all three schools will reflect what is currently in print and will provide literature which will enrich and expand a young persons horizons. . . .

Our Jr. High students have found on the "newbook" shelves that the "Enchantment of the World" series of books on countries (among other sources) have provided them with useful source material for their cultural history project with Mr. Kelly.

Other Social Studies classes have discovered we've tried to be responsive to their needs and have added new materials to help students better understand this rapidly changing world we live in. As part of a project Mr. Newkirk embarked on earlier in the year on countries of Asia, Mrs. McFadd shared some of her experiences with students through a slide/talk of a recent trip through China . . .

Hobbs wins Bausch & Lomb science award

Amy Elizabeth Hobbs was named winner of the annual Bausch & Lomb Science Award at Cohasset High School's Class Night which was held Thursday, June 2. The Science Award, a bronze medal is presented each year to winners at approximately 4,800 participating schools throughout the United States and Canada. More than 350,000 medals have been awarded to outstanding science students since the program began in 1933.

"THE BAUSCH & LOMB SCIENCE AWARD is especially significant," according to Mary Ellen Gallagher, Principal, who made the presentation, "because it recognizes the junior student at our school who has attained the highest scholastic standing in science subjects."

As winner of the Award, Amy is eligible for one of several four-year Bausch & Lomb Science Scholarships at the University of Rochester in Rochester, New York. Scholarship winners are selected of merit, with stipends based on financial need. Surveys indicate that the Bausch & Lomb Science Award and Scholarship Program has encouraged more than thirty percent (30 percent) of the winners to follow scientific careers.

Summer session features new art center courses

The South Shore Art Center's education department has added several new courses to its summer sessions. Summer at the Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, will include two four-week terms, July 5-July 31 and August 1-31, with certain classes meeting twice a week for four weeks and others meeting once a week but spanning both sessions. Advanced registration is required for all courses and workshops at the Center.

A unique opportunity to tour the Museum of Science's Ramses Exhibit will be offered during "Hands on Egypt," a new course taught by artist and teacher Elizabeth Gemperlein. The course meets Mondays and Fridays from 7:30-9:30 p.m. starting July 6. Through slide presentations and studio projects students will learn about the mysteries and magic of the afterlife and create their own "mummies."

Develop painting skills by copying the old masters in Michael Phillipps' course, "Old Masters In Detail," meeting Mondays and Wednesdays 1 to 3:30 p.m. starting July 6. "Copying from the past masters," as he explained, "has been a learning tool that has been employed by artists from Titian to Cezanne." His course benefits both the beginning artist and those more advanced by dispelling some of the fear students face when confronting the task of painting. By the end of the course, Phillipps hopes to have instilled in his students a sense of self-confidence in their works.

Judy Rossman, noted for bringing a successful art department to Rockland High School, will teach a four-week course, Modeling the Figure in Terra Cotta. The class will meet Tuesdays and Thursdays, 9 a.m. to noon, beginning July 5. With her students, Rossman will explore the tactile nature of clay using both subtractive and additive techniques to recreate human form. Finished pieces will be fired, stained and attached to wooden bases.

The July session also offers several previous courses: Virginia Avery's Outdoor Watercolor, Wednesdays and Fridays, 9:30-12:30 p.m.; Berj Kallian's Monotype/Collage, Fridays, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.; and both David Tandy's Introductory Drawing and Introductory Painting, Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7:15 p.m.-10:15 p.m.

Spanning two sessions and meeting once a week are Albert Abany's Drawing From Nature, Tuesdays, from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.; and Clement Micarelli's Portraiture, Tuesdays, from 7:30-10:00 p.m. Both courses begin July 5.

The photography department offers Beginning Photography, Intermediate Photography and Masters of Photography, all meeting once a week for eight weeks. A darkroom course taught by Hingham photographer Amy Whorf will be offered during the August session and will meet Tuesdays and Thursdays starting August 2.

Beginning Photography, taught by Tom Hannon, will meet Mondays from 7:30-9:30 p.m. starting July 11. He will cover the basic components of good photography including camera mechanics, lenses, accessories, films, composition and lighting.

Paul Fortin will teach the other two photography courses. His Masters of Photography, meeting on Mondays from 7:30-9:30 p.m., emphasizes the visual influence of photographers Edward Weston, Eugene Atget, Paul Strand, Henri Cartier-Bresson and Walker Evans. Subject matter will include documentary, landscape and portraits. His intermediate photography course, meeting on Wednesdays from 7:30-9:30 p.m., will explore portraits, people and landscapes.

For a complete class schedule including August courses, intensive workshops and children's programs, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Programs of the Center are supported in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Talking head

WRKO talk show host Jerry Williams has something to say to everybody

By Thelma O'Brien
South Look staff

Down deep, Jerry Williams' anger is pretty shallow.

But the WRKO radio talk show personality can be nasty — like the time he told a caller who was prattling on about Afghanistan that he was tired of old women like herself whining about the communists.

Stories about him in the papers carry such headlines as, "The mouth that roared," or "You either love him or you hate him" or "Born to yell."

Privately, though, Mr. Williams warms up, takes an interest, acts normal.

He's vague about his personal life, won't volunteer his age, is married, but lives in Marshfield and his wife, Teri, in Palm Beach. They have three grown daughters.

Publicly, he's a sort of do-gooder, not self-righteous, but indignant.

Also, he's not patronizing but only because he's too irritable.

This combination of personality traits has proved successful. He makes about $200,000 a year, according to a published report, for his daily 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. radio talk show. His weekly Channel 25 television show, formerly taped, went live this week.

Hope for the first-time buyer

The Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency is offering $48 million in below-market mortgage funds —at an interest rate of 8.5 percent — to help first-time homebuyers.

Half of this money is reserved for lower-income households.

Under the MHFA guidelines, a one-person household qualifies as lower-income if he has an annual gross income of under $28,000.

A household with two or more persons would qualify as lower-income if the gross annual income totals less than $31,000.

Lower income is considered 80 percent of the state's median income which in 1987 was $34,500, according to MHFA statistics.

" Though interest rates have dropped substantially since the early 1980s, rising home costs and tougher downpayment and underwriting standards are making it very difficult for our younger families to buy homes of their own," said MHFA Executive Director Marvin Siflinger.

This program is one of the few vehicles available to help these families, he said, and it is vital that this program be continued.

The federal program which authorizes MHFA and other similar agencies throughout the country to issue tax-exempt bonds to finance these low-cost home mortgages is due to expire at the end of this year, he said.

U.S. Rep. Brian Donnelly, D-Dorchester, has filed legislation (H.R. 2640) to extend the program through 1992, and a comparable bill has been filed by U.S. Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Michigan.

Since 1979, MHFA has financed mortgages for more than 18,000 low- and moderate-income families under this program, according to Mr. Siflinger.

More than 800 households are expected to benefit from the latest MHFA mortgage program, he said.

In addition to lower-income families, others who will be given priority to borrow these funds are minority households — Blacks, Hispanics, Asians, Cape Verdeans or Native American Indians — physically handicapped borrowers or co-borrowers and qualified Vietnam-era veterans.

Other first-time homebuyers may apply for the low interest rate mortgages providing they fall within another guideline — $38,000 for a one-person household and $43,000 for a household of two or more persons.

The income limits vary according to the geographic area within the state.

All prospective borrowers must have a good credit

(See page 12)

And even more help for the handy

The Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency has reserved an additional $12 million for low interest rate mortgages in its neighborhood rehabilitation program.

These funds are available to first-time homebuyers who decide to buy and fix up a home.

The home must require at least $3,000 worth of rehabilitation work or more if the house is a two-, three- or four-family residence.

This program was designed to revitalize older neighborhoods in communities throughout the state, according to Kelley Chunn, an MHFA spokeswoman.

To apply for a mortgage under this program, residents should contact a community development agency or a non-profit certifying agency in participating communities.

The appropriate agencies locally include the Plymouth Redevelopment Authority and the planning and community development office in Weymouth.

As in the past, borrowers who buy homes in certain federally targeted areas need not be first-time homebuyers.

Those areas include Boston, Chelsea, Everett, Fall River, Lawrence, Lynn, North Adams and Somerville.

Income limits and acquisition limits are similar to MHFA's general lending program.

To apply for funds, prospective borrowers must have an accepted offer to purchase or an executed purchase and sale agreement.

Under the neighborhood rehabilitation program, limited funds also are available to owner-occupants of one- to four-family homes which are in need of "substantial rehabilitation."

Through refinancing of an existing mortgage, rehabilitation funds are made available to pay for major repair work.

MHFA, Lorraine Wherty of the Plymouth redevelopment authority or John Parnaby of the Weymouth community development office can provide copies of the guidelines for this program which will specify what kind of work may be done.

MHFA will make another $10 million available through its new construction program to specific builders and developers to provide mortgages on homes they will build and sell to eligible borrowers.

The purpose of this program is to stimulate the construction of moderately priced single-family homes.

All loans must be closed by March 2, 1989, including those homes which are built under this program.

These homes will be marketed by participating builders, a list of whom is available from MHFA by calling the agency's consumer hotline at 451-2766.

Schools grapple with dropout rate

By Laurie Kaiser
South Look staff

The school dropout rate in southeastern Massachusetts is 5 percent, slightly below the state average.

Last year, 14,350 students, 5.3 percent of the total number enrolled in grades 9 through 12 in the state's public schools, dropped out, according to a a study released recently by the state Department of Education.

"Fourteen thousand a year is a significant number of people in my book," says Jeff Nellhaus, an analyst in the education department's planning office, "especially if it's your kid."

According to the department's projections, 13,400 students who began grade 9 in 1986 won't complete high school if the dropout rates remain constant.

Southeastern Massachusetts "is not any worse or better off than the rest of the state," says Mr. Nellhaus.

According to the state report, dropout rates in suburban areas tend to be lower then in urban areas, where there is generally a larger minority population.

"Statistics show that minority students drop out at a higher rate," says Mr. Nellhaus.

Fifty percent of the student population in Chelsea, for example, which has the highest dropout rate in the state at 17.1 percent, is Hispanic, and Hispanics drop out of school at a rate three times the state average. Leaders in the Hispanic community say this is because bilingual education is lacking.

Statistics show that unemployment rates are twice as high for dropouts as for their graduated peers. Education generally leads to higher wages and significantly higher lifetime earnings, the report states.

The state survey points to grades 10 and 11 as having the highest dropout rates; grade 12, the lowest. A total of 7,845 males dropped out of school last year, 5.8 percent of the male population. The dropout rate for females was 4.8 percent.

Dropout rates vary significantly by kind of community, the study shows. Nearly two-thirds of the total number of dropouts statewide left urban school districts.

In this region, Holbrook had the highest dropout rate at 5 percent. Scituate had the lowest with nine-tenths of a percent.

In Scituate, only nine students in grades 9 through 12 dropped out of school last year. The school system has a support program for students who are at risk of dropping out, but it only began this year.

Called Excel, the program is for students in grades 9 and 10 who are struggling in school. The program cannot take credit for the school's low dropout rate noted in the report, says Scituate High School Principal Allan Alson. The program simply exemplifies the school's educational philosophy.

"In truth," says Mr. Alson, "it is the guidance staff, the special services staff and the administration, as well as the teachers. Everyone gets some credit, plays a significant role. We try to identify as early as

By Darrell Berger

Respecting differences

When I was a freshman I pledged a fraternity with 12 or so other boys. We were an unremarkable crew except for Tom, who was tall and blond and graceful, extremely witty and the only one among us who already had a business card. It had his name and phone number and in the middle in large letters it had the words "SING-DANCE-ACT."

Tom had appeared in several dinner-theatre productions while still in high school. We worked together on the first college production of the season and, since we lived in the same dormitory, spent a lot of time together and became friends.

As college boys do, we stayed up late telling stories and working on our philosophies of life. We laughed a lot, drank too much and hung out at the fraternity house.

After a reasonable length of time we began to confide in each other, sharing our hopes and loves, our triumphs and rejections.

Then one day Tom told me he had had some homosexual experiences. He also told me he was trying to quit. That's partly why he had gone away to school. He wanted to leave behind his homosexual contacts and start over. He had made a good start. An incredible dancer, he was becoming very popular with the females on campus.

I had never talked with anyone with this kind of experience. But I liked Tom, he never came on to me, and I saw no reason to quit being his friend. But I remember wondering whether this was the sort of thing one quit, like cigarettes or nail biting. Tom didn't know either, and I understood that his search for his true self was going to be rockier than most.

Then one day, I heard Tom had been black-balled from the fraternity. They had heard he was homosexual, though the source was never revealed. No trial, no evidence. All that was required were for three brothers to cast negative notes.

Tom was destitute. Not only did this deprive him of a social outlet, the whole campus soon discovered why. I considered quitting, but Tom said that wouldn't help him and people would think I had been black-balled, too.

He quit coming to see me. He drank too much and cut classes. He transferred to his local college at semester break. I never saw him again.

I don't think he ever "quit." I hope he is doing well, singing and dancing and acting. I wish I had known how to help him then. I wish I had known how to tell the fraternity not to be afraid.

June is Gay Pride month, so chosen because in June of 1969 the patrons of a gay bar called Stonewall in New York's Greenwich Village began to fight back against routine police harassment. They fought not only for themselves, but for Tom and for all of us. America will not have true "family values" until we value gays and lesbians as part of the family.

David Mittell is on vacation. His column will return in two weeks.

MMWEC pulls out

The Massachusetts Municipal Wholesale Electric Co. has announced that it will no longer pay its debt for Seabrook nuclear power station. MMWEC, an organization of 33 municipal power companies, including Hingham Municipal Light, owns more than 11.5 percent of the Seabrook plant. Caroline Stouffer of Hingham, a member of the MMWEC board of directors, says the board believes further investment in the Seabrook project is unwise because the controversial plant may not come on line.

Braintree

The Phoenix

The Central Junior High School condominium complex in Braintree, gutted by fire April 23, will rise from the ashes. Developer Frank Messina announced last week that he will rebuild the structure exactly the way it was before the fire, right down to the four white pillars and the emerald green cupola. Mr. Messina expects to begin work as soon as all the charred debris is cleared. The project, expected to cost $1 million, is expected to be completed by the summer of next year. The 56-unit condo building was originally scheduled to open last May. The possibility of arson is being investigated.

Canton

Business v. homes

Developer John Marini has been working on plans since December to develop a 42-acre parcel of industrial land between Bolivar Street and the dump in Canton. However, he cannot decide whether his development will be industrial or residential. Mr. Marini has filed definitive plans with the town planning board for a 10-lot industrial park. However, he said, "I still have the intent to pursue zoning changes for residential development."

Carver

Growth all wrong

Carver is growing, but the town's chief assessor says it's the wrong kind of growth. "It's not the right kind of growth," assessor Charles Hamilton told officials last week, "The kind of growth we're getting is putting us deeper and deeper in the hole." The town's growth has been predominantly residential, putting the population at 10,000. Mr. Hamilton says the town's 1 percent industrial base must be increased to broaden the tax base.

Cohasset

Sewer grant in trouble

Cohasset is one of six towns in the state that can't receive state money because town officials have no approved plan for low- and moderate-income housing. The town could lose a $2.6 million sewer grant if it fails to develop a plan that meets state requirements. The state office of Communities and Development recently rejected the town's latest proposal on housing policies.

Duxbury

Nuke restart opposed

Duxbury selectmen have written to Gov. Michael Dukakis opposing Boston Edison's plans to restart Pilgrim nuclear power plant in Plymouth. At their June 6 meeting, selectmen voted unanimously to oppose the refueling of the power plant until the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission has held an adjudicatory hearing "to answer the serious questions raised about plant safety" and until approved emergency response plans are in place.

Hanover

No money for Rte. 53

Hanover will not be getting state funds for the reconstruction of Route 53, it was announced last week. The state Department of Public Works notified Hanover selectmen that it received more requests for money than it could handle. Planning for the road reconstruction is already under way. Selectmen Chairman Janet O'Brien says it is urgent that selectmen ask their state legislator to lobby for construction funds.

Hingham

Fees for tee time

South Shore Country Club in Hingham is expected to be open later this summer. The country club has proposed a fee structure that will generate about $250,000 annual profit for the facility. Under the proposed fee schedule, an individual membership for a Hingham resident is $750 and $1,000 for a non-resident. Family memberships cost $1,100 per year for residents and $1,450 for non-residents. Senior citizens and youths get a discount.

Holbrook

School plan under fire

A plan to reorganize Hingham's two elementary schools has drawn sharp criticism from parents and teachers. But despite the opposition, school committee members will stick by the plan. Beginning in September, the Kennedy School will house students in kindergarten through grade 3 and the South School will house students in grades 4 through 6. Parents want to retain the neighborhood schools, but the school committee says the plan is educationally sound.

Kingston

Carnival relocates

Abutting businesses object to a church carnival in their neighborhood, but the show will go on. The annual St. Joseph's Church carnival will be held from June 15 to 19 at a new location: the corner of routes 3A and 53. Despite opposition from local businesses, Kingston selectmen approved the Catholic church's request to change the location from Route 27 and Brookdale Street to a site adjacent to the former Caper's restaurant and the South Shore Medical Center.

Mount Rushmore flag unfurled in Norwell.

Marshfield

River to be tested

Once identified by the federal government as the cleanest river in New England, the North River will now be tested for pollution. The environmental engineering firm of GHR Associates will conduct tests at four specific sites along the 13-mile waterway in an effort to identify pollution sources. The $35,000 study will be funded by the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering. A recently released report by two engineering firms, the BSC Group and Normandeau Associates, states that failed septic systems, illegal dumping and the wastewater treatment plants in Rockland and Scituate are polluting the North River.

Norwell

Centennial celebration

The Mount rushmore flag was unfurled and raised on the green in front of Sparrell School in Norwell as part of the town's centennial celebration June 4. The 300-pound flag flew throughout the ceremony and then was taken down by dozens of helpers. Part of the celebration was a 2,000-pound birthday cake, baked by Montillo's Bakery and donated by The Patriot Ledger newspaper. Prior to 1888, Norwell was part of Scituate.

Pembroke

Grant in jeopardy?

A request for a state grant to build a new $2.6 million library in Pembroke may be in jeopardy, according to the town planner.

Planner Patrick Donovan told selectmen last week that the town may not get the grant because voters committed too much money to the project.

Plymouth

Bus turnaround

Plymouth selectmen have put their tour bus parking plans in reverse. The board recently overturned a previous decision to ban tour bus parking on State Pier because a group of local businessmen objected to the alternative plan of parking the buses in front of McGrath's restaurant on Water Street. The merchants said they fear loss of business because of the loss of parking under the new plan. Selectmen had originally banned parking on State Pier for the safety of pedestrian tourists.

Randolph

A charge out of liquor

Rowdiness at liquor establishments in Randolph may soon cost the owners more than a phone call to the police. Selectman Joseph Semensi has proposed a set of fees for excessive police calls to bars and restaurants that serve liquor. The proposal, which calls for an amendment to a town bylaw, would allow two "free" calls per month. A third monthly call, however, would cost the owner $30; a fourth, $45, and a fifth call or more, $60. The police department would bill establishments monthly for these calls.

Scituate

Schools scrunched

Scituate public schools face a shortage of classroom space as the trend of declining enrollment reverses itself. The three elementary schools in Scituate are now at capacity, and enrollment is expected to continue to increase. According to the school committee, space needs are "critical." And the committee announced last week that it intends to re-activate the space needs study committee during the next academic year.

Weymouth

Minorities need apply

Weymouth selectmen have asked for Civil Service lists so they can appoint two minorities, two women and three others to the police force. This would bring the number of officers to 107. Police Chief Thomas Higgins is urging selectmen to hire minorities and women. He says recent articles in Boston area newspapers have promoted the perception that the South Shore is racist.

"We have to make strides forward," the chief said. "We have one minority and four women in the police department. It is clear that this community should be making strides."

Sawing off Cape Cod

Friends who live on the Cape tell me they expect all kinds of trouble down there this summer, what with all those summer people crawling through the antique shops and new antique shops going up among the dunes.

Someday, probably in late July when the tourist and development seasons are both at their height, the whole damned thing, from P'town to the Canal, will be so weighted down with people and antiques that it's going to sink right into the sea.

Then, no doubt, some alert entrepreneur is going to propose to do for the Cape what was done for Manhattan Island, the heart of New York City, more than a century and a half ago.

I first heard the story many years ago from a researcher friend who had stumbled across it while browsing through a volume called "The Market Book, containing a historical account of the public markets in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Brooklyn, etc."

In the summer of 1824, the story goes, the place to while away the time if you were a New Yorker with nothing better to do was the Centre Market on Grand Street where you could sit on a bench in the sun and cuss President James Monroe to your heart's content.

The elder statesmen of the Centre Market that year were Uncle John DeVoe, who had been a butcher in his working days, and a retired carpenter named Lozier, whose first name has been lost to history, even in "The Market Book, etc."

The folks who hung around the market were so dependent on the two friends for information and advice that, when Lozier failed to take his customary spot on the bench for several days, his absence was noted with some concern.

When he came back he refused to say where he had been and it was a couple of days before he finally leaked the information that he had been to City Hall, closeted with Mayor Stephen Allen over a weighty problem.

It seemed that the lower end of Manhattan was sinking under the weight of all those tall buildings and Lozier and the mayor agreed the thing to do was saw the island off at the Harlem end, tow it out to sea, turn it around and replace it with the heavy end anchored to the mainland.

The mayor, Lozier confided to his listeners, had named him to superintend the job.

First, he had to hire workers, laborers and tradesmen, hundreds of them, and the best paying jobs of all were reserved those who could stay underwater longest while wielding the giant saw.

For the better part of a week, unemployed laborers stepped up in front of Lozier and held their breath while Uncle John DeVoe duly noted their times in a big ledger.

Of course, the workers had to be fed, too, so Lozier signed up the market men to supply 500 head of cattle, 500 hogs and 3,000 chickens, for the workers were promised chicken dinners twice a week.

At last, the great day arrived. Somewhere between 500 and 1,000 people with the tools of their trades showed up at the appointed rendezvous. There was also a herd of cows, hogs by the dozens and carts with loaded crates of chickens.

In fact, everyone was there except Lozier and Uncle John. As the day wore on, it became apparent that they were not planning to show up. It also became clear that no one was going to saw off Manhattan Island, either.

For a while there was talk of having Lozier and Uncle John lynched or, at very least, arrested but, in order to do that, someone would have to stand up and admit that he had been suckered.

It was months before Lozier and Uncle John were permitted to resume their places on the bench at Centre Market and it was longer than that before anyone took their advice seriously again.

Let's see, now, we could saw the Cape off at the elbow, right through Chatham and Brewster. And, you there . . . ! Take a deep breath . . .

'Avoiding battle does not avoid battle'

To the Editor:

In Musings by John H. Cutler page 32, South Look May 31-June 2, one item was a comment on "Wouldn't it be wonderful if there was a war and nobody came". Similar to Bertolt Brecht's famous line. A Radio Free Europe researcher wondered about this and checked. What he found was in the March 9, 1984 National Review, page 16 translated as

"What if they gave a war and no one came
Then the war will come to you!
He who stays home when the fight begins
And lets others fight for his cause
Should take care: He who does not take part
In the battle will share in the defeat
Even avoiding battle does not avoid Battle, since not to fight for your own cause
Really means
Fighting on behalf of your enemy's cause."

How different the whole truth is when compared with out of context.

Food for father

Being a father is fun, if kids happen to be your favorite kind of people. Whether walking the floor at 3 a.m. or taking junior to his first Red Sox game, that's what life is all about; learning to function without sleep and special times such as Father's Day that make it all worth while. June 19 is party time, with Dad as guest of honor. To start this or any other festivity, this hors d'oeuvre will add to the enjoyment. It is shared wth us by the Gourmet Group that met at Ginny and Peter Palmieri's home and called

RUMAKI

1 pound thin bacon
2 cans water chestnuts (5 ounces)
1 cup soy sauce
1/2 cup brown sugar

Cut bacon slices in half, also chestnuts if too large. Wrap piece of bacon around chestnut, fastening with toothpick. Marinate in mixture of sauce and sugar for 2 hours, no longer, or chestnuts will be soggy.

Drain and broil 3 to 4 minutes on each side, until bacon is not quite crisp.

When ready to serve, bring to room temperature and reheat in 400 degree oven until bacon is really crisp.

Just as the Water Rat said to the Mole in "Wind in the Willows," "there's nothing — absolutely nothing half so much worth doing as messing around in boats." Many dads would heartily agree. Father's Day afloat on the briny deep, the skipper at the helm, his crew toting the oars and gear, is everything he could ask for, while down in the galley the chef is preparing food to satisfy appetites stirred by the salt air. When chilly guests come on board this warm-up welcome may be served in mugs. Charles Masson says, "Not only will it make you tingle inside, it will warm your hands as you sip."

MAGIC BREW

Combine in a deep pot, burgundy, or any good red wine, with cloves, cinnamon stick broken to bits, lemon slices and sugar to taste. Bring to a boil and then continue the bubbling for about five to 15 seconds or long enough to allow the spices to permeate the wine.

your picnic cooler can double as a mini-refrigerator while grocery-shopping. Carry it in your car and when you've finished marketing put the perishables and frozen foods in it. The cooler won't keep food frozen for an extended period, but you can rely on it to slow down the thawing process — allowing you time to take care of other errands." Easy recipes for everyday cooking

By Merilyn de Vos
South Look staff

I thought I'd share a few recipes that I make so often, and have made for so long, that I have nothing written down as to their measurements or origins. But they are quick, easy and invariably provoke favorable comments from samplers, so here goes.

First is a basic bread recipe. Inspired by Irish-style soda bread, it has no yeast and therefore can be prepared before the oven is preheated. Honest.

With a dense crumb and flavorful, this kind of bread has a rather chewy crust that can be reduced by spreading the top of the unbaked loaf with milk or butter. Or, you can eliminate the firm crust altogether by inverting an ovenproof bowl over the loaf as it bakes (for all but the last 5 to 10 minutes.) But, if you are like me, you will bake it "nude" and relish the chance to chew a bit.

Try to use naturally soured milk. It gives a better flavor. I have no problem accumulating old milk, but a good substitute is Saco's Buttermilk Powder, available in the baking sections of most supermarkets.

BASIC BREAD

1 cup whole wheat flour
1 cup plain flour
one-half teas. EACH baking soda and baking powder
one-fourth teas. salt
1 cup liquid (sour milk, OR 3 tbs. Saco Buttermilk Powder and 1 cup water)

To the above, add one set of the flavorings below, or, use your imagination. That's how I came up with these.

VARIATION #1
one-half tsp. EACH caraway and cumin seeds and coarse black pepper

VARIATION #2
one-fourth cup finely chopped dry apricot and 1 scant tsp. crushed coriander seed

VARIATION #3
2 tbs. sugar, one-third cup EACH white raisins and walnuts

Mix dry ingredients well. Using a fork, moisten dry mix with the liquid added all at once. It should just bind together, but add a few drops of liquid more if you need to. Sprinkle the mass lightly with flour and knead it 10 or 12 times right in the bowl, until it holds its form well.

Shape it into a ball or a loaf and place it on a lightly greased baking sheet.

Cut a one-half inch deep slit across the length and breadth of the loaf with a sharp knife.

Place baking sheet in a 375 degree oven for about 30 minutes, until loaf is nicely browned and sounds hollow when you rap it.

This looks and tastes excellent warm, or later, toasted. In either case, slice very thinly and butter lightly.

Another set of long-cherished recipes is for potato salad, recipes that cringe at the thought of mayonnaise.

The first uses roasted peppers (red or yellow.) You can buy the red ones in a can or jar but they are very easy to make and taste so superior to the bought ones that you should give them a try.

Cut firm peppers in half only, lengthwise. Seed them, cut out stem and place them skin-side up on a baking sheet lined with lightly greased tin foil.

Place about 4 inches from broiler and roast until they are charred black, 10 minutes or so. Leave to cool and the skin will peel off easily.

Put peppers in a ceramic bowl, drizzle with olive oil, slice in 2 to 3 cloves garlic (for 6 to 8 peppers) and leave in the fridge for a day or two for flavors to blend.

You can wrap a piece of the marinated pepper around a water chestnut, stab it with a toothpick, and serve it as a quick hors d'oeuvre, or, use the peppers as follows.

POTATO SALAD #1

1 lb. small red potatoes, boiled and left unpeeled
4 to 6 oz. garlic marinated, roasted pepper strips additional (olive) oil to moisten salt and pepper

Just cut coarsely through potatoes right in their serving bowl, toss with peppers, oil and seasoning to taste. Serve while still warm but it tastes good as it cools to room temperature.

You can remove the garlic slices from the peppers before mixing them with the potatoes, of course. Lovers of this most pungent member of the lily family, however, wouldn't consider such precautionary action necessary or desirable.

The next recipe, I've been told, is an Italian one. I can't substantiate that, although I did first eat it as the child of an Italian household.

Well, it is delicious, and is always reached for first at the table or barbecue.

POTATO SALAD #2

1 to 2 pounds firm white potato (Idaho by choice, but don't overcook) boiled whole, then peeled and thickly sliced the leaves from a head of celery and a bit of the very heart only of the celery, thinly sliced sliced Bermuda onion (only this kind, the red one, no substitutes allowed) freshly grated black pepper salt
olive oil to moisten (do NOT substitute with another bland kind of oil)

You have to work quickly, mixing and gently tossing, so the flavors are absorbed into the cooling potatoes. You will use quite a bit of oil but don't make it greasy.

Talking head: Jerry Williams

He's about 65 and a Brooklyn native (Flatbush – Church and Nostrand avenues), whose parents were in the children's clothing business. He graduated from Erasmus Hall, a public high school, and went from high school into the Army Air Corps, serving in the Far East from 1942 until 1946.

For the past four years he's lived in Marshfield in a large 18th-century house. Before that he lived in Milton. He says his favorite entertainment is antiquing, that he'd like to travel more and that if someone gave him a chunk of money he'd buy a Porsche. Now he drives a 1979 Cadillac Seville. He also has his eye on a grand old house in Duxbury.

In Talk Radio and the American Dream, author Murray Levin, a Boston University political scientist, says "Jerry Williams, the liberal host (as contrasted with Avi Nelson, whom Mr. Levin calls neoconservative), is a committed New Dealer, a muckraker in the classic tradition... (His) views may be related to the fact that he grew up in the unique Jewish culture of New York City, where Talmudic righteousness and European socialism flourished... Williams' political scenario remains basically an expression of that Jewish ghetto outlook: good constantly overwhelmed by evil, labor constantly abused by capitalism, the citizen constantly debased by the state. This scenario is a natural for talk radio. Listeners are excited by the controversy and anger, the confrontation of good and evil, the vindication of the alienated voter."

Mr. Williams says all that's hogwash, that the only thing he cared about in school was girls, that his family never talked politics and he took no interest in current events until after he got out of the army.

Nevertheless, he does have a rabbinical air about him, deep voiced and pontifical, always on the verge of unleashing a plague of invective.

He likes most of the rest of what Mr. Levin says in his book about talk radio, mostly that it's a phenomenon worth considering.

"The liturgy (of the callers)," Mr. Levin writes, "is not unusual; but the presentation by the abused on radio, heard by tens of thousands, is unusual. No mass medium in America is as available to the disenchanted as talk radio, none is so prone to undermine the legitimacy of America or so eager to transmit the pathos of powerlessness."

There's a contradiction here, since the very people whose pathos gains expression on talk radio are the people Mr. Williams excoriates for their ignorance.

He says, though, that there really is no contradiction. People still get a chance to express themselves and it's important to listen to them.

The daily show is a peculiar amalgam of spontaneity and calculation, ideas and commercials. One minute the host is calling someone a dummy and the next he's asking his audience to buy something.

Issues, Mr. Williams says, do not boost his ratings.

"If you're involved in controversy, if you take sides, you alienate half your audience. I run those campaigns (seat belts, road blocks, the New Braintree prison) because I believe in them."

He's frosted, though, by being ignored, most notably during his campaign to repeal the mandatory seat belt law.

"They've (print and television news people) always looked at me as some illegitimate son. TV ignored me like the plague during the seat belt campaign. It was amazing election night. There we were at the Westin. We had just won the most significant referendum on the ballot and absolutely no one from TV came to talk to us."

Right now Mr. Williams is concentrating on Governor Michael Dukakis, whom he rates with Richard Nixon on the integrity scale.

"He lies all the time. Look what he did about his wife's problem. Years ago she went to Minneapolis for treatment. He said she had hepatitis. Then, years later, her drug dependence was made public. That was all calculated. He said he never knew about her addiction. I think it was Mike Barnicle (the Boston Globe columnist) who said Dukakis must be the world's most unobservant man and maybe he just thought his wife was always cranky.

"Dukakis has never said an important thing in his whole life. He's a walking cliche. He's successful because he understands process."

Mr. Williams doesn't have much use either for the governor's associates. Of Philip Johnston, state Secretary of Human Services, a long-time associate of the governor's and Mr. Williams' neighbor in Marshfield, he says, "He's lost his way, too. He used to be a man of principle, but he's on the train now to Washington – they all are. Nothing could improve this group. They are without passion, ideas. It's all pollsters and consultants. It's scary."

Mr. Williams likes to imitate the governor, which he does by stabbing the air, either with a bent knuckle or with the the backs of his hands towards his audience.

He also likes to imitate Jesse Jackson and his musical English.

"Can't any of these people speak human, speak regular English?" Mr. Williams asks.

People send him things. On his desk were letters about Gov. Dukakis with such choice phrases as: "Don't let up on that lying sleaze bag." "Washington, Lincoln, Roosevelt, Truman, Dukakis...don't make me sick." There was also a bumper sticker, "The Duke Makes Me Puke."

Mr. Williams gets about seven calls an hour, and they're pretty much what you'd expect.

Mr. Williams opened the program the day of this interview with remarks about the governor and then read two columns, one from the Globe and the other from the Herald, by Art Buchwald and Charlie Pierce, respectively, both critical of Mr. Dukakis. The callers were mostly in support of Mr. Williams, although one woman said she thought "Dukakis was a step in the right direction. I don't believe in Republicanism." These were not analytical conversations.

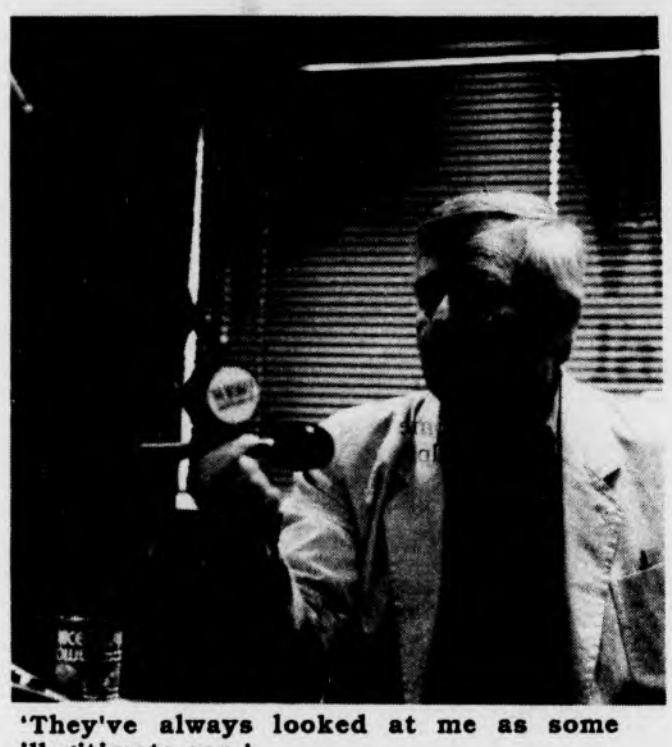
Another caller said voters better watch out because the governor was soft on crime and that he'd pardoned at least 800 criminals since he'd been in the state house. Mr. Williams tried to disabuse her of that.

Someone else called about mothers who take their children underground.

Another caller wanted to know why "we have to keep paying him (the governor) while he's running around the country."

Mr. Williams has something to say to everyone, just as he has for the past 41 years, when he began his radio days for small stations up and down the East Coast.

He's had long stints at stations in Philadelphia, Chicago, Miami and in Boston where he's worked for WMEX, WBZ and at WRKO since 1981. He says he'll go on doing this forever.



'They've always looked at me as some illegitimate son.'

He considers himself a pioneer in the business, pointing out his willingness years ago to confront the political establishment, the church and other institutions. His ratings remain high as he plugs into the trends of the day.

Besides the presidential race, Mr. Williams says he will concentrate on having legislative pay raises repealed.

Jim Halpin buys big for BJ's

By Thelma O'Brien
South Look staff

"They don't come to shop, they come to buy."

That's Jim Halpin for you.

As the vice president and general merchandise manager of BJ's members-only Wholesale Club outlets, Mr. Halpin is a booster of the 20 Zayre's-owned stores, the newest one of which in Massachusetts opened in Weymouth last October.

Mr. Halpin loves the 2 1/2-acre warehouse store in Weymouth, which he says has the fastest growing membership in the chain. He loves to watch customers go through the checkout lines, their carts filled with, let's say, one tire, a 2 1/2-pound bag of carrot sticks, 10 dish towels, an air conditioner and a cheesecake; or four number 10 cans of Heinz tomato sauce, a tire, the world's biggest box of Philadelphia cream cheese, a bag of boneless chicken breasts and a container of pool chemical, all, he says, at prices you can't beat.

BJ's sells just about everything. Here are some prices for you to compare for June 9:

- three pounds of bananas, $1.37
- six pints of strawberries, $5.98
- two pounds of carrot sticks, $1.52
- three pounds of string beans, $2.24
- a box of a dozen garlic heads, $1.98
- three pounds of cooked jumbo shrimp with tail on, $38.99
- 25 pounds of vidalia onions, $6.16
- 10 terry cloth dish towels, $9.99
- carton of cigarettes, $10.98
- a Janeil 2210 satellite dish, $879.96
- a Hot Point 5200 BTU air-conditioner, $189
- a Coleman 15-foot canoe, $259.97 ($25 rebate)

The trick is process, according to Mr. Halpin.

BJ's has done away with the plain pipe rack and more or less thrown everything on the floor.

"The traditional department store markup is 50 percent," Mr. Halpin said. "The traditional discount markup is 33 percent. This industry — not necessarily BJ's, but the industry as a whole — has a 10 percent markup. We can do that because we're very creative about our operating costs. For example, there are no bags. Customers load what they buy into boxes that our merchandise has come out of. Look at the way we display. Stuff comes off the trucks on pallets and it's brought like that right onto the floor.

"It costs us three cents to ticket any item. We put things together so you have to buy three items instead of one. Let's say a bottle of deodorant costs $1.20. Three cents is 2 1/2 percent of the gross. If you buy three together we leverage our operating costs."

Also, BJ's doesn't do anything but pre-opening advertising. The chain does do direct mailing and some newspaper inserts but that's it.

There is also a sales force selling memberships.

Not everyone can join BJ's.

Two kinds of memberships are sold, a business membership for $30 and one card, and up to four supplemental cards at $10 apiece. Business members pay the posted price.

The other is free group membership, open to organizations such as credit unions, hospitals, teachers, etc. Group members pay five percent above the posted price.

Mr. Halpin would not say how many people have signed up as members, just that there were a lot more group customers than business customers.

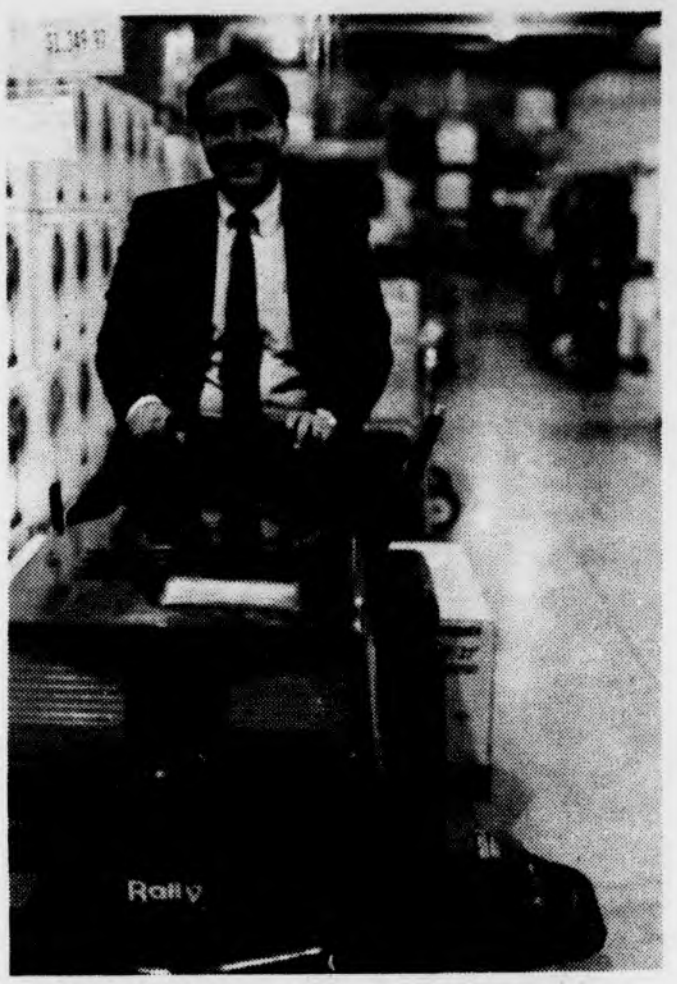
"But," he said, "we do more business member sales and, as our volume grows, it remains to be seen how long we will continue both types of membership. The question is, who would you rather give your parking spot to business or group members.

"I can look up your number and tell you exactly what you've bought over a year or for any period. Once in our Hialeah, Florida, store we found out we were selling only five cheesecakes a week so we discontinued cheesecakes. A guy called up and wanted to know where the cheesecakes were, that he bought five every week. We looked him up and, sure enough, he bought the five cheesecakes every week for his restaurant. So we started the cheesecakes again.

"I'm not allowed to say what the average customer spends but I can tell you the typical customer owns his own business and is therefore more upscale than you would expect."

Mr. Halpin, 38, is a Chicago native who has worked on and off for Zayre's for most of his professional life, starting off as a forklift operator. He is married to Joanne and has three children. He commutes to Natick, where BJ's is based, from Sherborn, where he lives. The family also has a summer condominium in Newport, Rhode Island.

He thinks his job "is a merchant's dream. You buy in big,big quantities and you sell cheaply. I love to see the movement. In retailing it's traditional to see how you sell for more. I try to see how to sell for less. Furthermore, we've created a store here for men and women. Men like to shop here because it's a like a Toys R Us for them."



Mr. Halpin, BJ's vp, in the warehouse.

Among the pricey items you an buy at BJ's are hot tubs for $2,200, four karat tennis bracelets for $1,999, riding lawn mowers for $1,367 and big screen TVs for about $1,700.

Among the popular items are eggs. BJ"s won some kind of egg producers' award for selling a million dozen in a year. Several weeks ago the store sold 4,000 disposable helium tanks at $16.77.

The occasional dud turns up too, like the fish finder that never sold and the denim sleeper sofa, which the store bought for $130 and ended up selling for $79.

"It was ugly," Mr. Halpin explained, "and the customers didn't like it."

The Dragon's Dungeon

By Claire McDonough

Good-byes are hard

"Did you ever entice the purple gallinule to our feeder?" the Dragon asked. "So your friend Fauna can see it before she moves out of town?"

I sighed. "No," I told him. "I'm afraid she'll have to hope the purple gallinule will follow her to Dover.

"And I almost hope he doesn't. It would be practically like having a little bit of Fauna left behind if the purple gallinule stays here. I'm really going to miss her. A lot."

Skip looked up from the book he was reading. "I don't see why. You never get to see her now. You're always at work, or playing with grandkids, or campaigning for someone, or watching the Celtics. What difference does it make whether you're not seeing her here or not seeing her in Dover?"

"You don't understand," I told him. "You're too young. If she's right here in town I know that if I really need her I can get to her. You've never learned how much it means to have a friend who understands you so well she knows what you're going to say before you say it; who shares your hopes, your dreams, your candidates; who knows all your faults and likes you anyway; who laughs at your jokes even if they aren't funny; whose Sun Sign is compatible with your Ascendant; who can always remember whether it's 'I before E' or the other way around; who always has an extra can of cream of mushroom soup in her pantry. These are the attributes that are beyond price. This is the stuff that friendships are made of."

Breida patted my hand. "I understand. I used to feel that way about my hamster, Messy Marvin. But it isn't too bad. Dover isn't that far away."

I moaned. "She's moving to Dover, Delaware, for heaven's sake."

"Oh. Well, it still isn't too bad."

She looked around to see if the Dragon was paying attention. "You can always," she whispered, "phone. You know, reach out and touch her mushroom soup.

"When the rates are down, or course," she added virtuously.

"You still don't understand," I insisted. "When Fauna leaves town she'll take half the fun with her. I'll bet even the wetland violators won't really enjoy themselves any more. Not without here there, putting her body between the bulldozer and the marshes.

"And how about all her friends who bird? What's the point to their slogging through swamps and risking the ire of enraged householders if they can't call Fauna and say, 'Guess what? I happened across the purple gallinule today. I don't suppose you've ever seen one, have you?' I mean, what's a triumph for, if not to make a friend feel rotten?

"Come to think of it, what am I supposed to do if an unidentified warbler comes to our feeder at a time when the rates aren't down? Ask him to sign our guest book?"

"You could write down his description for future reference," Skip suggested. "Or take his picture. Or, if, heaven forbid, the worst should happen and he should prove less swift than one of the cats, you could always have him stu..."

"Bite your tongue," I snapped. "And what about the town boards? It's going to be very dull for them, planning their agendas without having to figure out which item might bring Fauna popping in to accuse them of violating the open meeting law, or being arbitrary and capricious, or denigrating the intent of the by-law, or having Silly Putty for brains. They won't even have to worry about whether she'll threaten to have their brains bronzed. Or their eyeballs frozen."

Breida and Skip looked at each other and nodded.

"It sounds," Brieda admitted, "as if life might be unbearably tame without your friend Fauna around. "Seriously, Ma, she sounds pretty intense. Aren't you looking forward to the peace and quiet? At least a bit?"

"Not for a minute. Let me try to explain.

"A woman I very much admire often says, 'If you have a good idea, act on it. It's easier to apologize than to get permission.'

"That's how Fauna is, she spends a lot of time apologizing, but she also gets more accomplished than any ten people I know. Because she cares enough to act on her ideas. She cares about the environment, she cares about animals, and she cares about people. If you're being attacked, you're better off with her at your back than with the Green Bay Packers. All of them. She'll go to bat for the town, and she'll go to bat for you, too. Keep her phone number handy, kids, because if you ever need a friend, she's one person you can reach out and touch. Even if the rates aren't down, and even if you have to call collect."

They looked at each other again and nodded. "Now that I think about it," Breida said, "since the word got out that Fauna's leaving the state, even the birds have been in a slump."

"Yeah," Skip added. "Even Larry."

A press agent's dream at the Open

The 88th U. S. Open, the most important golf tournament of them all, gets underway Thursday at The Country Club in the People's Republic of Brookline.

I know it must be important because it's not called a classic. Have you ever noticed that all the new golf tournaments are "classics," as in the first annual Tootsie Roll Classic?

The fact that the Open is being held in the People's Republic — in fact, the fact that it is being held at all — might have escaped my notice had it not been for the tournament's obviously astute press agent.

Who but a press agent would have planted in the Golf Digest an article entitled "The Role of the Irish at The Country Club" and have it written by an English golf writer named Peter Dobereiner?

Who but a press agent would have had that Englishman quote a fictitious founder of The Country Club as saying, "It's getting so you can't walk around Boston without tripping over a drunken Kerryman?"

And who but a press agent would have had the writer from Old Blighty quote the foreman as having to tell his Irish laborers to install grass "green side up?"

Some of my best friends are Irish. I've split many a pint with them, sometimes to the p'int of exhaustion. And, believe me, if there's anything a man from the Auld Sod knows it's which side of the sod is up.

Who but a press agent would have had the Digest article reprinted in the Boston Globe, where it was sure to be read by two out of every three Irishmen west of Dublin?

Now if I were a press agent for the Open I would have said that it could be read to them but then a friend who is part Irish — and has managed to overcome it — would never make green beer for me on St. Patricks Day again.

Who but a press agent would have anticipated the reaction to the Digest article?

Mayor Raymond (Easy Layup) Flynn fired off a letter to the publisher of the New York Times, owner of the Digest, demanding an apology for the "deliberately hateful" article.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians, the County Mayo Association and the Irish National Caucus dumped copies of the Digest into Boston Harbor, calling it "the Boston Tee Party."

The Boston Herald, of course, quickly grasped the opportunity to dump on the Globe for it's "great offense to the Irish-American community" by reprinting the offending article.

Good heavens, how would the press agent for the Open have made us aware of it if the Globe had not been enticed to pick it up?

The last I heard, Bernard Cardinal Law himself was suggesting that the Globe donate its ill-gotten gains from the article to aid illegal Irish immigrants who are wasting away in Boston.

So, you see, friends of the Irish — and there are still some of us left — it's all a press agent's plot to lure us out to the Open at The Country Club, or TCC, as it's known in the People's Republic.

Am I going?

Not on your life, Bridget, even if the pro at The Country Club is named Callahan.

School dropout rates possible kids who are having a rough go."

Kids are supported, cajoled and threatened to remain in school, he says. "I think overall we have a philosophy that every kid gets as full an education as he can possibly get."

In Holbrook, 19 students out of 380 enrolled in grades 9 through 12. Holbrook public schools have no dropout prevention program in place.

"I think our dropout rate is really low," says guidance counselor Don Cosgrove. "Maybe it's because we have a very small school system. The percentage looks higher."

Even if Holbrook's dropout rate is slightly below the state average, the town's superintendent of schools is still concerned.

Says Superintendent John Moran, "I'm concerned if even one kid drops out. We're concerned about any rate that's above zero."

The state provides funds for dropout prevention programs. Last year, 86 such grants were given to 52 school districts in the state. Any school district may apply for the grants, but priority is given to schools with the highest dropout rates.

Plymouth-Carver Regional School District, which has a dropout rate of 4.2 percent in grades 9-12, has had a dropout prevention program for two years. Coordinated by Paul Salamone, the program matches students at risk with a teacher who acts as mentor.

Mr. Salamone, who counsels 50 or more kids a year who are considering leaving school, believes the program has saved some students from dropping out.

"I was very happy with it this year," he says of the program. "We're not going to save everyone. Many of the students I've dealt with have repeated (grades) twice, have poor grades and family problems. We're always concerned about it. We'll always be concerned about anyone dropping out."

He says students begin to think about dropping out of school in sixth or seventh grade and then actually leave school in the ninth or 10th grade.

"It is a problem, and the problem's getting worse throughout the country," says Mr. Salamone. "I think the problem is drugs. It's easy to make money on the streets."

Book Report

Capturing the essence of Rodin

By Elizabeth Moura
South Look correspondent

Sculptor Auguste Rodin is as massive a figure in modern art as is his sculpture "Balzac." His latest biographer, Frederic Grunfeld, is his best. Mr. Grunfeld, who died late last year, captures the essential Rodin: a gifted man full of passion.

More than any modern sculptor, Rodin endowed his works with the drama of life stripped down to existence. It is a quality which Mr. Grunfeld captures in page after page of this long, articulate, and satisfying biography.

Mr. Grunfeld writes, about the sculpture "Bourgeois de Calais." "There was more tension, now, in all of the figures, whose hand gestures and body movements had been adjusted with the care of a choreographer. 'Each of these Bourgeois,' he told Jeanes, 'expresses his feelings, his torment . . . or fear.' His young admirer noted the enormous feat for which Rodin was being taken to task by his critics — 'the hands, the monstrous accents of form, the theatricality of the gestures . . . in short, all the things that bowled me over with emotion.' Many of the changes affected seemingly minor details: Jean de Fiennes, for example, is only half covered by a shirt in the second maquette, while the final version has him dressed to the neck in flowing drapery, like the rest."

Mr. Grunfeld surrounds his perceptions about Rodin's art with equally clear-sighted interpretations of his life as an artisan. Writes Mr. Grunfeld about one of Rodin's many jobs as an ornamentalist,"Perhaps it was inevitable that two artists working together so closely as patron and employee should have underestimated each other. Carrier's remark, 'Oh, he is a good workman, but he copies anything and everything he happens to see' sums up his attitude toward an assistant he regarded rather grudgingly as gifted but hopelessly unmanageable. The depth of his incomprehension is conveyed by another comment reported by Bartlett, dating from the years when Rodin was setting out on his own: 'Sacre nom de Rodin, he has worked for me for ten years, and I have not been able to print myself upon him! He will never be able to model as I want him to."

The many accounts of Rodin's work as an artisan show the depth of Mr. Grunfeld's study of both his subject and the time in which Rodin lived in France. It also shows the author's thoughtful reconstituting of the life of a man.

Mr. Grunfeld's work is so good because he balances above the biographer's abysses of sentimentalism and didacticism and never falls into either pit. (For some unanalyzed reason, the biographers of artists produce florid prose, and bizarre metaphors, two more biographers' banes which Mr. Grunfeld deftly avoids in this book.)

The only criticism of Mr. Grunfeld's presentation of Auguste Rodin is his tendency to be too sympathetic to Rodin the man. The sculptor's affairs with models and sexual domination of female pupils are airily chronicled by Mr. Grunfled as if great men should be allowed to commit great wrongs, especially if they are artists.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

New 'Fat-Magnet' Diet Pill Gives You Steady Fat Loss

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" to help you steadily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods as long as you don't increase your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire."

It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough for weight loss (worldwide patents pending).

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles from food that you have just eaten. Then, the trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Pills Go To Work"

The fat-magnet pills alone, "automatically" help reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat, with no exercising. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals. However, you can lose weight "faster" if you choose to follow the fat-magnet diet plan along with the pills.

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with record sales and glowing reports of weight loss. It's a "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating.

Now Available to Public

If you need to lose a large or small amount of weight, you can order your supply of these new highly successful fat-magnet pills and diet plan (now available from the doctor's exclusive manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$2 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), cash, check or money order to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept.WW14, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. McLaughlin doesn't mind 'Gong Show' tag

By Daniel M. Kimmell
South Look correspondent

John McLaughlin, host of "The McLaughlin Group" has had a varied career in public affairs, beginning while he was still a Jesuit. In 1970 he won the Republican nomination to the United States Senate from Rhode Island. He lost the election, but ran a sufficiently agressive campaign that incumbent John Pastore had to fight back.

McLaughlin then joined the Nixon White House where he was among the last defenders of the beleaguered President. He left both the White House and the clergy in the mid-seventies to assume the role of Washington pundit. Married to Ann McLaughlin, the current Secretary of Labor, he is also Washington editor for the conservative "National Review" and host of two weekly public affairs shows, most notably "The McLaughlin Group," one of the liveliest half hours on television.

DK: More than one commentator has referred to "The McLaughlin group" as a political version of "The Gong Show." Did you deliberately set out to create a political talk show that was that noticeably different from what was on the air?

JM: I did, but I must tell you that what had happened is not wholly calculated. First of all I wanted to cover more issues, and we do six issues in every show. The tempo of the show, therefore, is a function of the number of issues covered which of itself creates acceleration.

Number two, I also wanted a show where people would forget that there was a camera and speak in a totally unzippered fashion. And I wanted individuals who were sufficiently sure of their own opinions and data so as to justify that kind of spontaneity and lack of inhibition.

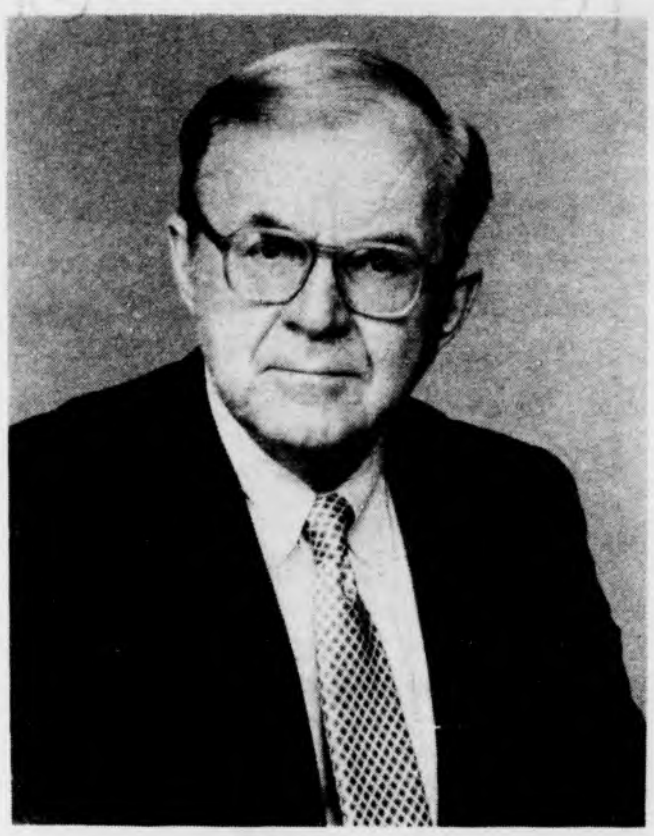
DK: Do you have a problem with mixing public affairs with entertainment?

JM: That's all a by-product of spirited discussion which, by definition, is frank, open, friendly, uninhibited and generally genial discourse. The people who are on the program are wits in their own right. They're singularly well-informed, so they can weigh in on almost any issue with a lot of data and in the process of that they feel very comfortable in needling, ragging and baiting the others.

I tell them we are not there to be five comedians. We're not five Don Rickles. If we aspire to do that then the show won't make it because people won't tune in primarily for that. They tune in because they think they're getting the straight skinny. They're getting unvarnished opinions and we are not accommodating those opinions to any constituencies the way politicans will.

When they call it a "Gong Show" it doesn't bother me at all. I don't care what they say as long as they watch.

DK: Do you see the show as having a conservative bent? If Dukakis wins will "Inside Washington" be the "in" show?



John McLaughlin

JM: The show is an issues program. If Dukakis is president of the United States the issues are going to be rich, luxuriant — I can taste them. It will be choice.

DK: What are George Bush's chief weaknesses and strengths as a presidential candidate?

JM: Bush's principal weakness is that he lacks political contour. He has to emerge from the closet and take strong positions chiefly on two areas: one, the economy — which would embrace the discussion of both the deficit and the national debt — and two, the superpower relationship and the relaxation of tensions that now exist between the two countries, the INF treaties, the prospective START treaties. Both of these he can crow about; i.e., the economy and detente or "Son of Detente." He's not doing it.

DK: Commentators are saying that the "Teflon President" seems to be followed by the "Velcro Veep." All the criticisms of Reagan are sticking to Bush.

JM: I know it, so the strategy is that you move away from Reagan, but that's a mistake. He should forget about Reagan. A little bit of that is all right, as he did with Noreiga, but too much of that is a mistake, because he's not running against Reagan, he's running against Dukakis. He ought to be exposing Dukakis's flaws, and he has serious flaws.

DK: All right, what are Dukakis's weaknesses and strengths?

JM: Dukakis is too liberal for the United States, that's the proposition that he ought to make. You can run through a whole litany of policy positions taken by Dukakis — I'm not arguing the merits of these, but I'm simply showing that they collectively establish him as a quasi-fringe liberal. Dukakis has to keep that a secret.

DK: Hasn't he been able to do that since he's been running against Jesse Jackson who is to Dukakis's left?

JM: Exactly. And also because no one knows him. They only know three things about him. They know that his name is Michael Dukakis. He's got high name recognition now, it's a household word. They know he's from Greek background and they know he's governor of Massachusetts, and that's all they know.

DK: Finally, who would you rank as President Reagan's best appointment to public office?

JM: The best appointment by far is the current Secretary of Labor. She is a person of unrivaled judgment, of unrivaled knowledge of the government bureaucracy, which is essential to getting anything done.

DK: She also is said to have a very good advisor.

JM: She will make a great Secretary of Labor. She certainly put me to work. And in addition, I would say she elevated my status by giving me membership ex officio in the Cabinet Spouses League. I am now a Cabinet spouse.

Pembroke House of the Week boasts extras

By Merilyn deVos
South Look staff

Address: 7 Hatch Mill Circle, Pembroke
Price: $339,000
Realtor: De Wolfe New England, Center Street, Pembroke
Broker: Roberta Park
Telephone: 826-3801
By appointment only

This eight-room, new house was chosen because it appears to be a good value.

As part of a new seven-house subdivision, it is at the end of a cul-de-sac, three miles from the Route 3 and 139 junction.

The captain's cape design was built by the father-son team, Donald Park Sr. and Jr., They have put a lot of extra finishing and detail into their effort.

The kitchen and family room are open to one another and share an enormous brick fireplace. There are cherry cabinets in the kitchen. Sliders from the family room take you out to a deck that overlooks the private rear yard.

French doors separate the dining and living rooms. Ceilings in both rooms are recessed with a dressy effect called crown molding. There is another fireplace in the living room.

One of the four bedrooms is on the first floor and is set up for privacy with its own bathroom and a walk-in closet big enough to become an efficiency kitchen.

A laundry room and a half bathroom complete the downstairs. There is a cement basement.

Upstairs are the other three bedrooms and two bathrooms. The master "suite" is huge with an anteroom, walk-in closets and an all-tile, Jacuzzi tub bathroom . Pull-down stairs lead to the attic.

All floors are hardwood and all lighting and faucet fixtures, of crystal and brass, are really nice.

Central vacuuming is installed, as well as the ducts needed for central air conditioning .

The lot is over an acre and abuts a retreat house's estate. Very private.

Landscaping is outstanding, over $12,000 is said to have been spent, and includes a big front lawn, flowers and shrubs. The roof is wood shingled.

A stone driveway takes you to the two-car detached garage (with a covered walkway to the house.)

(House of the week is a regular South Look feature. Please send information about your house for sale to Merilyn deVos, South Look, Box 682, Marshfield, MA 02050.)

The captain's cape at 7 Hatch Mill Circle boasts a lot of extras like the jacuzzi tub.

Everyday easy cooking

This variation is also eaten very slightly warm or room temperature.

My last recipe is one I served this past weekend to three guests happy to serve as proofers of the pudding. It looks a bit exotic but it's just a bread pudding filled with fruit.

I went on a bit too long about how in Europe desserts are only very lightly sweetened. They began to think up ways they could surreptitiously add some sugar but found it to be refreshing and perfect as served. In fact, they then went on a bit too long about how much they liked it so, here goes.

BERRY BREAD PUDDING

8 to 9 slices firm white bread, crusts trimmed, lightly buttered and sugared

1 quart strawberries, rinsed, hulled and coarsely sliced

1 pint blueberries, rinsed

one-half pint black-or raspberries (optional)

one-third cup, rounded, sugar

grated rind from 1 lemon OR 2 limes

one-half pint heavy cream, whipped at serving time, with 1 tsp. vanilla and 2 tbs. sugar

Line a one quart souffle dish, Pyrex casserole or (best looking) a charlotte mold, bottom and sides, with the bread strips, buttered and sugared side facing INWARD.

Meanwhile, in a heavy pan, bring the berries, sugar and citrus zest to a boil. Lower heat at once because this boils over easily and simmer COVERED for 7 or 8 minutes, stirring from time to time.

It seems like a travesty to boil good fresh berries but they somehow still taste really bright and berry-like when you finish.

Strain the berries and save the juice. Spoon some juice over all the bread lining the mold to color and moisten it.

Put all the berries into the juiced up bread mold. Add a few spoons more juice to moisten the berries.

Cover the top of the fruit with the rest of the bread. Cut it however you need to completely cover the fruit. Moisten this bread with some of the juice.

You'll still have about 1 cup juice left. Save it in the fridge until serving time.

At this point this concoction will look like an oozing, amateurish mess. Trust me. It will look and taste great in time.

Fit a dish inside the mold that just covers the pudding. Weight it down with a HEAVY can. Put it in the fridge and leave it for 24 hours. Don't cheat or it won't be "set."

Loosen the sides of the pudding with a knife. Invert it over a serving dish and, voila!, out slides a firm and colorful cone.

When ready to serve pour some of the reserved juice over top and sides of pudding so that it rests as a blue island in a deeper blue sea. Decorate the top with reserved berries and/or some cream if you like.

Offer the rest of the juice on the side with the whipped cream when you serve the pudding. Serves 6

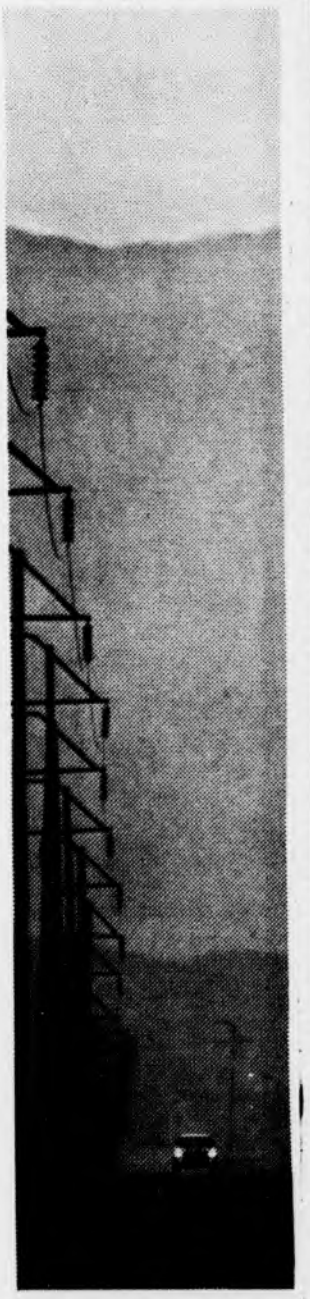
□ Art Buchwald's Rule: "The first two times you use a joke, give your source credit. From then on, to hell with it! Be shameless — claim it as your own. After all, your source undoubtedly stole it from somebody else." I stole this from Buchwald.



There is a road.

Many cancer patients need transportation to and from treatments. That's why we ask for volunteers who can give some time each month to drive them. A cancer patient's road to recovery can be a long one, but it's made much easier when there's a friend who can help along the way.

Calculated thriller

By Daniel M. Kimmell
South Look correspondent

THE PRESIDIO, directed by Peter Hyams, written by Larry Ferguson. With Sean Connery, Mark Harmon, Meg Ryan, Jack Warden. Rated R. At area theaters.

"The Presidio" works with all the precision and predictability of a quadratic equation, which is good if you appreciate the logic of high school algebra, but not so good if you don't enjoy formula films. This highly calculated thriller leaves virtually nothing to chance and, nine times out of ten, is right on target.

A murder is committed at the Presidio, the historic U.S. Army base in San Francisco. A military police officer investigating a break-in at the officer's club is gunned down by two men who escape. Investigating the murder are civilian police detectives Jay Austin (Mark Harmon) and Lt. Colonel Caldwell (Sean Connery), who is in charge of the military police.

Their rivalry goes beyond the usual civilian vs. military sniping: Austin used to serve under Caldwell but resigned after a confrontation with him. Screenwriter Larry Ferguson then tightens the screws still further. Caldwell's daughter Donna (Meg Ryan) has her sights on Austin from the moment they meet.

This odd triangle is set in motion around the mystery of the murder, but it would be a mistake to focus on the story. What has gotten everyone chasing everyone else proves to be interesting, but it is no more than that. Instead, it's simply an excuse for a number of scenes that alternate between allowing the stars some time to show off, and dazzling us with some slam bang action.

In the end, all the elements of "The Presidio" fall into place. The acting, the chases, the shootout in a water bottling plant — none of them achieve high art, but that was never the intention. "The Presidio" is simply a summer thriller that wants the audience to have some fun and get their money's worth. Only those who have seen so many movies that any formula films they see seems too predictable are likely to have cause for complaint.

ALSO PLAYING

CROCODILE DUNDEE II () — The charm is gone in this mildly amusing sequel to the blockbuster original. This time Dundee (Paul Hogan) is chased by Colombian drug smugglers back to his native Australia. It's fine for a rainy afternoon, but wouldn't you rather see the original again?

DA () — Barnard Hughes recreates his Tony award winning role as the late father of an Irish-American playwright (Martin Sheen). This is obviously a personal story for writer Hugh Leonard, and it often seems as if it means more to him than to the audience. Hughes is wonderful but the film doesn't really go anywhere.

WILLOW (*½) — This George Lucas fantasy (directed by Ron Howard) is largely inert. Instead of creating a complete world as the original "Star Wars" did, the filmmakers seem content to show off not particularly interesting special effects. Alas, without an entertaining story and believable characters, the film is like its two headed dragon: full of sound and fury, but significantly nothing.

Video Spotlight

Before we let movies like "Rambo III," "Police Academy 5" and "Friday the 13th, Part VII" completely destroy the good name of sequels, there used to be a time when sequels and movie series meant good news rather than bad. Two great film series have recently become available on video which means several interesting titles to look for.

One is the "The Thin Man" series, which is comprised of six films made for 1934 to 1947. William Powell and Myrna Loy starred as Nick and Nora Charles, an ex-detective and a socialite who solved tricky murders when not flitting from party to party. Their happy banter help set the standard for romantic comedies of the period, with the added attraction that this loving couple was a married one.

For mystery buffs who like things a little more serious, the Sherlock Holmes films provided classic portrayals of Holmes and his sidekick Dr. Watson by Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce. Only "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (both 1939) attempted to capture the period of the original stories, but, like "The Thin Man" series, the characterizations were rich enough to make the later films enjoyable.

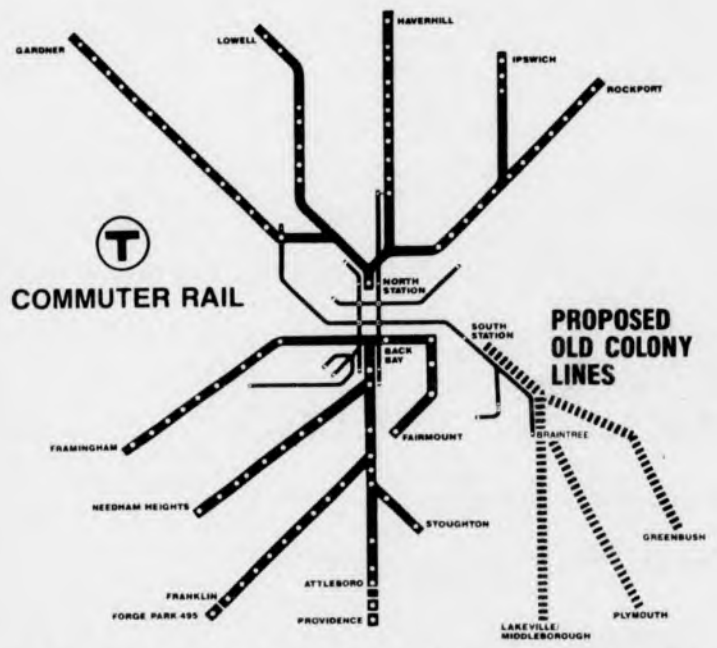
COME RIDE...ON US!



The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) is studying the restoration of commuter rail service on the three-branch Old Colony Railroad between Boston's South Station and Scituate, Plymouth and Middleboro/Lakeville. Service between Braintree and portions of the Plymouth and Middleboro lines could begin as early as 1991; operation on all three lines to South Station could begin as early as 1993.

As part of this study, an Environmental Impact Statement is being prepared in accordance with state and federal law. The publication of a draft of this report is scheduled for completion in 1988 and will be distributed throughout the communities of the Old Colony region for public review and comment.

Below are commonly asked questions about MBTA commuter rail service and the Old Colony Line.

Q What is commuter rail?

A The MBTA commuter rail system is an 11-line network stretching from Providence to the New Hampshire border and as far west as Fitchburg. The only area not served by commuter rail is the rapidly-growing South Shore and Southeastern part of the state.

Commuter rail service is provided in 120-seat coaches powered by state-of-the-art diesel locomotives. Unlike their noisy predecessors, the new locomotives are quiet and clean; the track is "continuous weld", eliminating the clickty-clack often associated with train travel.

In sparsely populated areas, with straight running track, the trains can travel up to 50-60 miles per hour. In more densely populated areas, the travel speed would be much slower, approximately 10-20 miles per hour.

On the three branches, trains would run every half hour during rush hours and approximately one every two hours during off-peak hours. This is the same as other MBTA commuter rail lines into Boston.

In recent years, the MBTA commuter rail system has achieved an on-time arrival record of 98 percent.

Q What do the stations look like?

A Commuter rail stations feature canopy-type shelters, platforms with ramps for access by people with special needs, a paved parking area, lighting, drainage and landscaping. The stations are designed to be as unobtrusive, clean and simple as possible.

Q What about safety?

A The MBTA operates over 360 train trips daily in metropolitan Boston. Grade crossings are protected by automatic gate, light and bell systems. Where appropriate, the right-of-way is protected by fencing. Commuter rail accidents are very rare.

Q Why is the MBTA talking about commuter rail on the South Shore?

A The South Shore and southeastern part of Massachusetts is the most rapidly growing area of the state, with many people traveling to downtown Boston to work.

The roads serving the area are not adequate to meet the region's growing transportation needs. Commuter boats are a help, but are not convenient from much of the region. The Old Colony Railroad is in place on all but 15 percent of the 80 miles of track included in the MBTA's study. Almost all of this track is used by freight and some passenger trains. No homes would have to be taken to complete the Old Colony project.

The proposed MBTA commuter rail service would carry approximately 15,000 people each way and would take roughly 10,000 cars from area roadways.

Q Do commuter trains cause traffic problems?

A Minor delays can occur. However, because commuter rail trains take only 45 seconds to cross a street, automobiles are stopped about the same length of an average traffic light cycle.

Q Will the new line change the value of my property?

A Because commuter rail service means greatly improved access to Boston, property values in communities with access to commuter rail service generally increases.

Q What is this about a field trip?

A The MBTA is providing a free commuter rail trip between Boston's North Station and Rockport to give the South Shore residents the opportunity to experience what commuter rail is like. The trip is on Saturday, June 25, 1988, leaving Boston at 10:20 a.m. and returning to Boston's North Station at 1:40 p.m. Each person or group must bring with them the coupon located at the bottom of this page.

Q How can I let you know what I think about the Old Colony study?

Tuition policy change as Hull expresses interest

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The school committee tightened up its tuition policy this week after several Hull residents inquired about sending their children to the Cohasset schools next year.

About six inquiries have been received thus far, according to Supt. Stephen Hart. That is a significant increase, he noted, caused primarily by their concern that a pending vote to override Proposition 2 1/2 may not be approved.

According to Pamela Wolfe, a member of "Citizens for Hull," nearly $1 million will be taken out of a $5 million school budget if that override question is defeated.

There are 13 override questions on Monday's ballot, she said, including one for $900,000 specifically earmarked for the schools. If the question is defeated "there will be no sports, no drama, no extracurricular activities, no Hull High School band, no honors program, and a decrease in staff, maintenance, transportation and equipment."

She said many residents are considering private schools or transferring their children to schools in other communities if the override fails. "There's a lot of talk about it, but we don't really like to discuss it," she said. "Right now, our focus is to get the right information out about the override and to get answers for people.

"The school budget has been cut every year. Right now we're just trying to protect basic educational services in this town," she added.

The annual tuition rate at Cohasset schools is between $3,500 and $3,700 per year. As committee member Chris Ford noted, "I've always said we give private school education here at public school prices.

"Could we see people pounding down our doors if this situation continues?" he asked.

"It could give us mountains of problems and responsibilities," committee chairman Diana Kornet added.

A 'kid at heart' leaves local practice

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Dr. David Maltz is a Cohasset pediatrician who is a kid at heart.

And when he leaves his practice June 28, after 14 years to work for Blue Cross/Blue Shield, he'll be missed not only by the children he has treated and befriended, but also the parents he has reassured over the years.

For Dr. Maltz, 44, is not the kind of doctor who stands formally behind his title.

By his own admission, his practice is light and joking while still getting the job done.

"Children know me for my marbles and donuts," he said with a smile.

The marbles are in games in the waiting room, he explained.

And the donuts are offered to the young patients.

"It's something that they like," he explained of the sweet treat. "Maybe it's a bribe.

"Some parents ask, 'Why don't you offer them raisins and carrot sticks?'

"I answer, 'Do you think they'd want to come back if I offered them carrot sticks and raisins?

"It would be a problem if they were eating junk food all day long.

"But life is made up of occasional treats and standard fare."

Maltz, an engaging man with a firm handshake, is also known for his "baby hats," a practice of holding babies on his head.

"It calms them down," he explained. "they like that.

"It's also a lesson for the parents that the babies are not delicate china."

His style, he said is the opposite of doctors he visited while growing up.

"I realized I could be successful in conducting examinations and having fun.

"I'm still a little child at heart," he said with a smile.

"Some people leave because of my nonchalance, but not very many."

Summer festival begins June 23

The 33rd annual South Shore Arts Festival begins Thursday, June 23 with the President's Choice Exhibit. That event, to be held at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, will begin a weekend of activities as the center observes its summertime celebration of the arts.

Thursday, June 23 marks the opening of the President's Choice Exhibit. Art center preisdent Shirley Neer has selected the works of painter Dorothy Arnold and local sculptor Richardson White.

Neer stated, "The combination of White's bronzes and Arnold's oil and acrylic works will make for a very diverse and exciting exhibit."

The exhibit opening will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. at the art center. At that time, awards will be given to artists for the juried art and members show which will be exhibited at the art center throughout the festival.

Arnold's work is included in art collections owned by large corporations, private companies and private collectors across the country and throughout Europe.

White, a Harvard College graduate and a lifelong resident of Cohasset, specializes in scupltures and portraits of horses. He has won many awards for his work which is featured in several Boston-area galleries. White has also done commisssioned work for the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

The festival continues Friday, June 24 at 10 a.m. when the tents on Cohasset Common open for the juried art, photography and Patriot Ledger children's art exhibit begins. Visitors are encouraged to browse through the huge tents which will be set up across from town hall through Sunday.

From 5:30 until 7:30 that night, there will be a special Festival benefit party at the art center. There will be a dinner which will be attended by singer Tom Rush. There will be a benefit concert featuring Rush and Friends at the South Shore Music Circus at 8 p.m. Tickets for the dinner are:

St. Anthony's volunteers honored by Pine Street Inn

While many people give money to charity, not as many are willing to give their time to charitable causes.

But that's not the case with 45 volunteers from St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset.

For the past six years, the volunteers have served dinner one Tuesday a month to women at the Pine Street Inn, Harrison Ave., Boston.

As a result, St. Anthony's was recently presented a Pine Street Humanitarian Award for its dedicated service at the first annual volunteer awards recognition day.

The award was also given to 49 other "food groups" who have served the inn for five years or more, and to 51 outstanding individual volunteers.

"It's a wonderful feeling to know that you are helping someone." said Nancy Anderson of Marion Rd. Extension, Scituate, who started the local effort. She had lived in Cohasset all her life before moving a month ago.

"You see people who don't have as much as you do, and it makes you feel very fortunate," she said.

Anderson, the wife of Thomas Anderson, said she became interested in volunteering at the Pine Street Inn after talking with Pat Pattison of Scituate who has been involved in many such efforts.

"She came to my home and showed films," said Anderson, and the effort got off the ground.

"When I first started, we had so many people volunteering that we separated them into two groups and gave one to Eileen Norris.

"It's a lot of people working together. Everyone pitches in."

One month, Anderson's group provided the Tuesday evening meal; the next month it is Norris' volunteers.

With the help of Kathy Becker and Anna Abbruzzese, Anderson delivers 150 sandwiches ranging from meatloaf to roast beef to peanut butter and jelly, made by 10 volunteers.

In addition, 10 people make desserts, five are respon-

Overdue taxes must be paid

The demands on the unpaid Fiscal 1988 Real Estate and Personal Property taxes were mailed Thursday, June 16.

The taxes along with the $5.00 demand fee and interest at 14 percent is due and payable at the office of the Collector of Taxes, 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset on or before June 30.

Failure to receive a bill does not waive payment of the tax and fees. If you have any questions please call our office at 383-0611.

Hazardous waste collection

A second household hazardous waste collection will be conducted by the towns of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, and Scituate.

It will be held Thursday, June 30 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Scituate High School near the tennis courts. Scituate High School is located on Route 3A.

For information on the kinds of hazardous materials being accepted, please call the Health Department.

Recycling begins July 1

Friday, July 1 mandatory recycling of all newspapers, metal and yard wastes at the Cohasset Cedar Street Municipal Landfill will begin. NO resident or any trash hauler will be allowed to dispose of those items at the landfill when mixed with household or commercial trash.

Specific locations have been set up at the landfill to accept all of these items. Newspaper will be received at the paper bins; the metal pile is located to the right and rear of the equipment shed, and yard waste can be disposed in the compost (leaf) pile adjacent to the roadway left of the paper bins.

Special arrangements will be made for receiving and chipping brush from homeowners. An announcement will be made as to the specific days it can be delivered to the landfill. Recycling monitors will be on the site if you need assistance or directions.

This is the first phase of gradual implementation of Cohasset's major recycling project. Other items which are expected to be mandatory in the near future are glass, tires and aluminum. Arrangements have been made for voluntary recycling of glass and aluminum now. Tires are not accepted.

In addition, "re-useables", such as books, can be set aside at the left of the recyclers' space with permission of the monitor. A location has also been designated for returnable bottles adjacent to the recyclers' area.

By reducing the volume of waste that must be landfilled or transported from the upcoming transfer station, space can be saved at the landfill. A reduction in the amount of cover material saves money. Projected savings on the volume of out of town disposal are astonishing. A town in New Hampshire has reduced its waste stream by 50 percent according to Health Agent Joseph Godzik. Also, recyclable products produce revenue for the town.

With limited amount of planning, every household and business can easily set aside its newspapers and store them in a brown paper bag. Yard waste can be easily transported in bags or barrels, but plastic bags are not allowed in the compost pile. All metal items are easily identified.

If you have any questions as to a particular item, call the Board of health offices at 383-1664 or simply speak to the landfill supervisor or recycling monitors on site.

Sandy Beach opened

In preparation for the summer season, Sandy Beach has been cleaned of winter debris and the beach house has been repaired. It officially opened June 17.

Many residents have contributed to the Sandy Beach Association, but more contributions are needed to maintain the property.

According to David Chittim, a trustee of the Sandy Beach Association, the beach receives no money from the town parking stickers, and therefore depends on contributions to meet the payroll and to pay for beach safety and maintenance.

The staff of guards and maintenance workers has been hired and began work this month. The beach house has been repaired and updated inside, and new equipment has been ordered. The Cohasset VFW has designed, built and installed warning markers to keep boaters at a proper distance from the beach.

Donations to the association are still needed. They may be mailed to Sandy Beach Association, Cohasset, 02025.

Teachers' contract ratified

The Cohasset Teachers Association unanimously ratified a three-year contract Tuesday which begins Sept. 1, 1988 and concludes Aug. 31, 1991.

The year-long negotiation between the Cohasset school committee and the teachers' association ended with an approximate five percent pay raise for the first year of the contract. During the two remaining years, teachers will receive six percent raises each year.

Supt. Stephen Hart said the minimum teachers' salary in the new contract will now be about $19,000. The maximum step for a teacher with a doctorate degree and 12 years experience is about $38,500 per year.

"We feel the salary rate at least helps us to remain in a competitive situation with other towns," he said.

There were just minor changes in the contract language, he noted, including a $400 bonus to teachers in the Cohasset school system for 15 years or longer. In the second and third years of the contract, those teachers will receive a $450 bonus each year.

Residents praise store, but question more traffic

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Residents attending the June 15 planning board meeting tempered praise for Donald Staszko's new Super Stop & Shop on Rte. 3A with concerns about traffic, drainage and lighting at his proposed 12-shop plaza next door.

The hearing was continued to Wednesday, July 6, at 8:30 p.m. to allow board members as well as the public time to review a new set of drawings submitted at the meeting.

The drawings contain additional information as well as changes, according to board chairman Robert Sturdy.

We're continuing the public hearing to allow public comment on the new set of drawings," Sturdy said after the meeting.

"I intend to be a real stickler on the right of the public to participate.

"I feel the new information should come into the public hearing portion of the meeting," he said.

"The public will have three weeks to review it at the planning board office.

"They will also have the chance to hear the planning board comments," Sturdy said.

The matter was also continued to obtain a legal opinion from town counsel on whether a 100-foot or 50-foot setback is required, according to the town bylaws.

According to Staszko it is 50 feet; Sturdy, 100 feet.

The seven residents who attended the hearing were shown blueprints of the project.

Patricia Walsh of North Main St. said, "the Stop & Shop is a handsome business. All the people concerned should be very proud."

However, she noted that there is a traffic problem entering the area from the right, while traveling north on Rte. 3A.

"While turning, I've almost been rear-ended several times," said Walsh.

Staszko said the highway is owned by the state, but that he has forwarded a suggestion that another lane be established.

"I've recommended a stacking lane," he said.

Sturdy agreed that there is a problem.

"Ninety-eight percent of the drivers on the road stop for nothing," he said.

Roger Whitley, associate member of the Design Review Board, said he would back a de-acceleration lane.

Another resident said she was concerned that the extension of development might result in flooding problems at homes such as hers.

"I would like a guarantee that there will be no problem," she said.

"With the size of the development and blacktopping, where would the water go?" she asked.

Engineer Dick Fitzgerald of Flynn Engineers explained, "There will be no increase in the runoff that is there now."

Fitzgerald explained that the drainage of water will be collected on the property and the flow of water north on Sohier St. will be controlled.

"The rate of the runoff will not exceed what is there today," added Staszko.

"What about the water table when you put the structure on the property?" asked Ann Mitchell of North Main St.

"We don't anticipate a change in the water table," answered Fitzgerald.

"There is a nice design of the building," said Kevin O'Donnell of Fair Oaks Lane.

"But I don't understand why now they are requesting relief from an earlier agreement well known to all parties," said O'Donnell, referring to an agreement not to share the Stop & Shop parking lot.

"The board has to look at the issue and take a stand on the agreement," said Sturdy, "and combine the parking lots or put a new entrance on Rte. 3A and Sohier St.

"Public safety would be better served by using the existing entrance.

"That will be part of the planning board's deliberations. We'll look to our consultant.

"It's not a foregone conclusion that we are going to reverse our decision.

"But it might be in the public interest to do so.

"... A driveway on Rte. 3A every 300 feet is not in the best interest of the public."

O'Donnell commented that "a smaller development with access to Sohier St. might be safer."

Another resident said that the "lighting is very effective on the present site."

Tuition policy change . . .

The policy currently states that if a class is overcrowded, the committee has a right to refuse tuition students, the superintendent explained.

The committee decided to adopt the wording of the state tuition policy which forfeits tuition payments only if the student lives in the same town on a 24-hour basis. Prior to the change, the Cohasset tuition policy allowed a student into the school at no cost if they lived in the community on a 24-hour basis during the school week.

The loose wording, according to Supt. Hart, allowed students to attend Cohasset schools free, although they actually lived in another town and could return there on weekends.

The proposed change, supported unanimously by the school committee, will now be posted throughout the town for public comment. The policy change will not be established until a public hearing is held and another vote to accept the change is taken by the committee.

Supt. Hart told the committee Monday night that about six Hull parents have contacted himself and high school prinicipal Mary Ellen Gallagher about the possibility of transferring their children into the Cohasset schools if a pending override of Proposition 2 1/2 fails.

"I thought it would be appropriate at this time to review the tuition policy, since we may be faced with a number of requests," he told the committee.

After looking over the policy, the superintendent suggested that one section be changed to conform with the state tuition policy. Essentially that policy states that if a student attends a school other than the community where the parent or legal guardian lives, that individual must pay tuition.

"So I am suggesting that the (non-tuition) student resides in the home on a 24-hour basis," he said, explaining that a phrase "during the school week" should be removed from the Cohasset policy.

The school committee will vote on the policy proposal at their July 11 meeting.

sible for fresh fruit, and five prepare such things as deviled eggs.

The three women set up and serve the food from about 4:30 to 6:30 p.m.

At Christmas time, the volunteers also bring gifts, according to Anderson, the mother of five and grandmother of two.

"One year, one of the guests gave me a present," remembered Anderson of the touching experience.

"She was about 75 years old and homeless.

"She died right after that.

"The guests are usually very grateful," she said.

Norris, a resident of King St., Cohasset, and her 10 to 15 volunteers serve a spaghetti dinner on their volunteer night.

She and Missy Deveney of Pleasant St. transport two 15-quart pots of meat sauce to the Pine Street Inn where they cook 10 to 12 pounds of spaghetti.

They also typically bring eight loaves of French or Italian bread, salad, as well as desserts such as brownies, cakes and jello, and fresh fruit, prepared or gathered by volunteers.

"Occasionally, we sit down at the table with the women," said Norris.

"They're usually quiet, and skeptical of people because they have been hurt.

"Some are very appreciative. They can't thank you enough.

"You meet all kinds," she said.

Married to John Norris, she is the mother of three children, Matthew, 15; Sean, 9, and Katie, 12.

But she still finds time to volunteer.

"It makes me feel good," she said.

"Sometimes when it is a hectic week, I think, it's something else that I have to do.

"But after I come home, I really feel good.

"You become aware of what you have and it makes you grateful.

"It's easy to get on the roller coaster of wants, but with this you come back to feeling down to earth."

Both women noted that more volunteers are always welcome, as are donations of food, clothes or money.

'It would be nice to have more volunteers," said Anderson.

"Maybe we could get a third group going. It's very rewarding."

Committee votes half-year paid sabbaticals

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Dismayed at the school comittee's refusal to approve her request for a year's paid sabbatical, Osgood teacher Faith Bowker said she will now decide whether to take an unpaid leave of absence or resign from the school system.

Bowker, a first grade teacher in Cohasset for the past 15 years, requested a paid sabbatical to pursue studies at Lesley College, and to travel throughout the country reviewing environmental science curriculums in elementary schools.

She said she was "perplexed and angered" at the school committee's pending negative vote - something she had been warned about by Supt. Stephen Hart. Bowker explained that after obtaining a master's degree at night at her own expense, she was not seeking another degree.

"I seek to improve myself and I plan to use that in the classroom I have devoted myself to for the past 15 years," she said.

She said she would travel to two or three locations in the country, reviewing their current elementary science services. Her goal would be to implement nature systems studies in grades K through 3, and to strengthen a science curriculum that has been gradually weakened, Bowker added. Her ideas would be discussed by the other elementary teachers and it would be their decision whether to implement suggested changes.

"Your original denial (when her proposal was first presented two weeks ago) was a blow to my academic record and my superior rating," Bowker said.

The school committee did not grant the request, saying she was not specific enough about her plans.

Member Chris Ford explained, "it's the looseness of this proposal - if we had something more directed. We're talking about four months you'd be paid (fulltime) for."

Ford suggested that Bowker take the first months as a unpaid leave, and return before the second semester with a more specific outline of her studies. "We'd be open to giving you a half-year's pay to fund the second half of your year if you show us what you'd be doing the second half of the year," he suggested.

Bowker refused the compromise, noting she would be forced to work for several months without salary "to prove myself to the board. I would rather have a full year's commitment," she said.

Committee members argued that Bowker did not need to prove herself to them. They praised her fifteen years of superior work in the schools, and urged her not to leave.

Despite Bowker's opposition to the compromise proposal, school committee members voted to support the half-year paid sabbatical beginning in January, if Bowker presents a written proposal outlining her studies and plans for the remaining months of 1989.

The committee granted a half-year paid sabbatical to health education director Michael Gill. The department chairman informed the committee that Carolyn Contis would head the department in his absence. Asst. Principal John DeLorenzo, who has some background in health education, will assist Contis.

Gill explained that he is under deadline pressure to submit his doctoral dissertation to Boston University. He must submit the first three chapters of the document which deals with AIDS education in the public schools, by the end of August.

The committee was satisfied with the written proposal he submitted regarding the coordination of the health education department in his absence, and they unanimously approved the paid sabbatical.

In other business, the school committee is looking for interested parents and former students to participate in a strategic planning workshop for the Cohasset schools August 29 and 30.

Participants in last year's educational forum might be interested in this session, Supt. Hart noted. The committee urged former students who are now pursuing a degree and career in education to contact a school committee member or the superintendent's office for more information. The exact location of the strategic planning workshop has not been determined.

The committee also discussed setting priority goals for the next school year. Among the subjects they discussed was the need for greater communication to all residents about the programs and activities within the schools. Programs such as peer counseling at the high school, now regarded as a model throughout the state, should be well publicizied to all taxpayers, perhaps through a school newsletter.

The committee granted a year's leave of absence to buiness education director Joan Wool in order to enter a physical rehabilitation program. They hired Patricia Murphy as a fulltime fourth-grade teacher, replacing Pat Chase who retired this month.

The committee accepted with regret the retirements of three longtime school cafeteria staff members: Jeanette McNeil, Frances Ricketts and Mildred Salyards. The committee noted they had all worked many years in the schools. They paid special tribute to Ricketts who never missed a day of work in the many years she was employed by the Cohasset schools. Salyards, head of the high school cafeteria, once commented to Supt. Hart that "there was not one morning she didn't like coming to work."

The school committee will be meeting July 11 and August 15, with a possible meeting scheduled August 29.

Plaza traffic concerns . . .

Staszko said that the front of the new building will have a protected walkway with recessed lighting.

When board members made a motion to continue the hearing to the next meeting, Staszko's attorney, Charles Humphreys, disagreed.

"I don't think it should be extended," said Humphreys. "We have nothing further to present."

But the board passed the motion unanimously.

After the meeting, Staszko said that the plaza, about half the size of the Super Stop & Shop, would take about nine months to construct once all permits are given.

He said stores will likely include a men's and women's clothing store, jewelers, bank, and possibly a full service restaurant.

The July 6 Planning Board hearing will also include at 7:30 p.m. a continued site plan review of a small plaza proposed for the property beside Jonathan Livingston Square on Rte. 3A.

It had been scheduled for the June 15 meeting, but was rescheduled at the request of the applicant.

Budget woes

As summer arrives, our thoughts turn to matters other than the daily drudgery of making lunches for students, driving children to afterschool activities, and observing the happenings within town government. It is time for a break from business.

And we certainly all need a break, from time to time.

But it would be helpful to watch, at least occasionally, events occurring in this town and in neighboring communities. It just might affect us in the fall, when we awaken from our summertime siestas.

We need only look to our neighbor, Hull, to see the crisis they are facing this moment. Not unlike our recent bout with Proposition 2 1/2, Hull is now looking at an even larger override - one that will affect their schools greatly if it does not succeed.

Nearly $1 million will be cut from the schools if one of the 13 override questions fail. No more sports or honors programs, no more band. Teachers and staff will be cut, as well as equipment purchases. Basic maintenance of the school buildings will be reduced.

Residents there fear the consequences for their children. And in preparation, many have considered sending their children to private schools, or to other public school systems as tuition students.

That is a drastic step for many families who must now decide to spend an average $5,000 per year per child for an education that would have cost them a matter of dollars in their own community.

We wish our neighbors good luck next week. We understand their predicament and share their concerns. The right to a good, basic education is the right of every child in this country. It should not be taken away by anyone, no matter what the costs.

But we are confident the residents of Hull have accepted this fact, and are willing to part with a few more dollars to retain that right.

But we mustn't think for one moment that we won't be facing this same situation once again. Everytime there is a large expenditure to finance - whether it's renovations to town buildings or necessary equipment for some town department - it may take an override of Proposition 2 1/2 to fund it.

Until the law is changed, that is the situation we will be facing on a regular basis. And if the schools will be affected in some way, it is up to the residents of this town to once again defend our educational system.

If Hull does not agree with that argument, then we will likely see a few of their students in our schools next year. Rather than walking to their neghborhood school, these kids may be unwillingly forced into other communities and private schools. It is a sacrifice many parents feel is worth the pain and inconvenience.

We wish them luck next week in the special election, while acknowledging that many more communities are facing similar scenarios. Just keep in mind that Cohasset is not exempt.

Kung Fu Academy toured China

SIFU John Loupos, owner of Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy in Cohasset and three of his students recently enjoyed an historic visit to mainland China.

Travelling with nine other Wah Lum members from schools throughout the U. S. and England, the group spent five days in Hong Kong and seven days of kung fu training at the Shaolin Temple in Dengfeng, China.

The timing of the visit enabled the Wah Lum tour to inaugurate the new Shaolin Training Complex, adjacent to the Temple grounds. This proved to be a mixed blessing as construction of the facility was slightly behind schedule. Tour members were without electricity, running water, and heat for the first several days of their stay. The group considered this only a minor inconvenience despite an off-season snow-storm.

The training itself was rigorous. Most tour members arose at five each morning to put in a couple hours of meditation, tai chi chuan, or chi king practice before breakfast. Meals were ample and varied averaging twelve to fifteen courses per sit down, which was necessary to fuel the participants through the six hours of intensive formal training that took place each day.

Aside from the excellent kungfu itself and the opportunity to train directly with the Shaolin monks and masters, the social highpoint of the visit was the final banquet. Thirty courses of exotic Chinese cuisine were offered, featuring the rare delicacy of Longgevity Soup, (tortoise in a bowl).

The group found the Chinese people were quite warm and friendly. In spite of the temporary lack of amenities at the training complex guides and interpreters, the group often went out of their way to see to the needs and comfort of their American guests. Those Chinese who had picked up scattered phrases or words in English were very anxious to engage with the Americans and learn whatever more they could.

And they were very willing to reciprocate in helping guests to learn some of their own native Mandarin dialect.

Sifu Loupos is already planning his next trip to China for 1989. In the meantime he enjoys sharing with his students those parts of his experiences that are relevant to their own kung fu studies, teaching kung fu at his facility in Cohasset in a traditional manner.

The curriculum includes programs in authentic Chinese kung fu, tai chi chuan, Taoist mediation, and chi kung practices. Separate programs are available for adults, juniors, and children.

Moving around hasn't hurt skaters

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

It's summer according to the calendar. But to eight young Cohasset residents it's winter all year long.

These young women are members of the Winterland Skate Team who practice throughout the year.

Five of them will head to Dallas August 8 to 14, for national competition. It will be the first time the local team has sent representatives to the event.

"I give them a lot of credit," said Peter Wood, father of one of the skaters.

"They haven't given up. They love to skate."

It hasn't always been easy to find rink space, Wood noted.

The girls first skated at the Winter Gardens in Cohasset which closed, he said. Then they moved to Rockland but a recent propane tank explosion closed that rink.

Now they are skating temporarily at the Pilgram Arena in Hingham until the Rockland rink reopens.

The Cohasset skaters are Michelle Ward, 9, who has been skating for four years; Jackie Hoban, 9, 3½ years; Michelle Buckley, 9, 2½ years. Kim Ward, 12, 6 years; Kara Protulis, 12, 2½ years; Lauren Wood, 15, 4½ years; Leslie O'Grady, 18, 7 years; and Marisol Perry, 12, 3 years.

"In the summertime, it's hard to get up and go to the rink from 8 a.m. to noon," said Mrs. Mardi Wood.

But to the girls, it's worth it.

"I like doing all the jumps and spins and different things, said Kara. "I like to compete."

She skates five days a week in the summer, for two to two and a half hours a day.

"If I want to do good in skating, I have to practice," she explained.

She and Michelle Buckley also take ballet lessons.

It's the discipline of skating that Leslie enjoys.

"There's a commitment," she said. "It's something that you make the time to do.

"You get out of it what you put in."

The hardest thing to learn at first is to stop, she said.

"That's the hardest thing when you first start skating," she laughed.

Now she works on figures.

"It's the whole backbone of the sport," she said.

Kim Ward skates two days a week and would like to be in an ice show some day.

Jackie Hoban skates three to four days a week.

All of the girls take figure skating lessons, and look to Olympic skaters such as Debbi Thomas as their models.

"I like her style, said Kara.

"She's very athletic." added Leslie.

Lauren feels that competitions are fun.

"We all go away as a group," she said. "You make friends."

Michelle Ward, Kim Ward, Lauren Wood, Kara Protulis and Michelle Buckley will be going to the Ice Skating Institute of America Figure Skating Competition in Dallas.

For the competitions, sometimes the girls pick out their own music.

Peter Wood praised the local girls.

"It's easy to win, but I'm impressed with how they can lose," he said.

I've seen kids from other rinks throw tantrums.

"These girls have learned how to lose well.

"Skating pays off. It does a lot for their self confidence.

Lauren Wood goes through her routine during a recent practice session.

"It teaches them discipline. It's done a lot for their personal growth."

Some of the parents of the girls are even learning to skate, noted Mrs. Wood.

"They make it look so appealing," she said. "It's really fun.

"They like to see us do it."

Another parent, Beverly Buckley noted that skating is an expensive sport.

Rink time is about $7 an hour, and lessons are $25 to $30 an hour, she said.

And it's not unusual for skates to cost $300 a pair and up.

Then there are costumes and other needs, she said.

According to Peter Wood, one show a year is presented by the skate team which includes 100 youngsters from such town as Weymouth, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Scituate, Norwell, Marshfield, Pembroke and Abington.

Katie Hayden is coach and ISIA director. Other coaches are Priscilla Petterson and Marcia Roussis.

There are also competitions at least once a month including the Bay State games at Williams College.

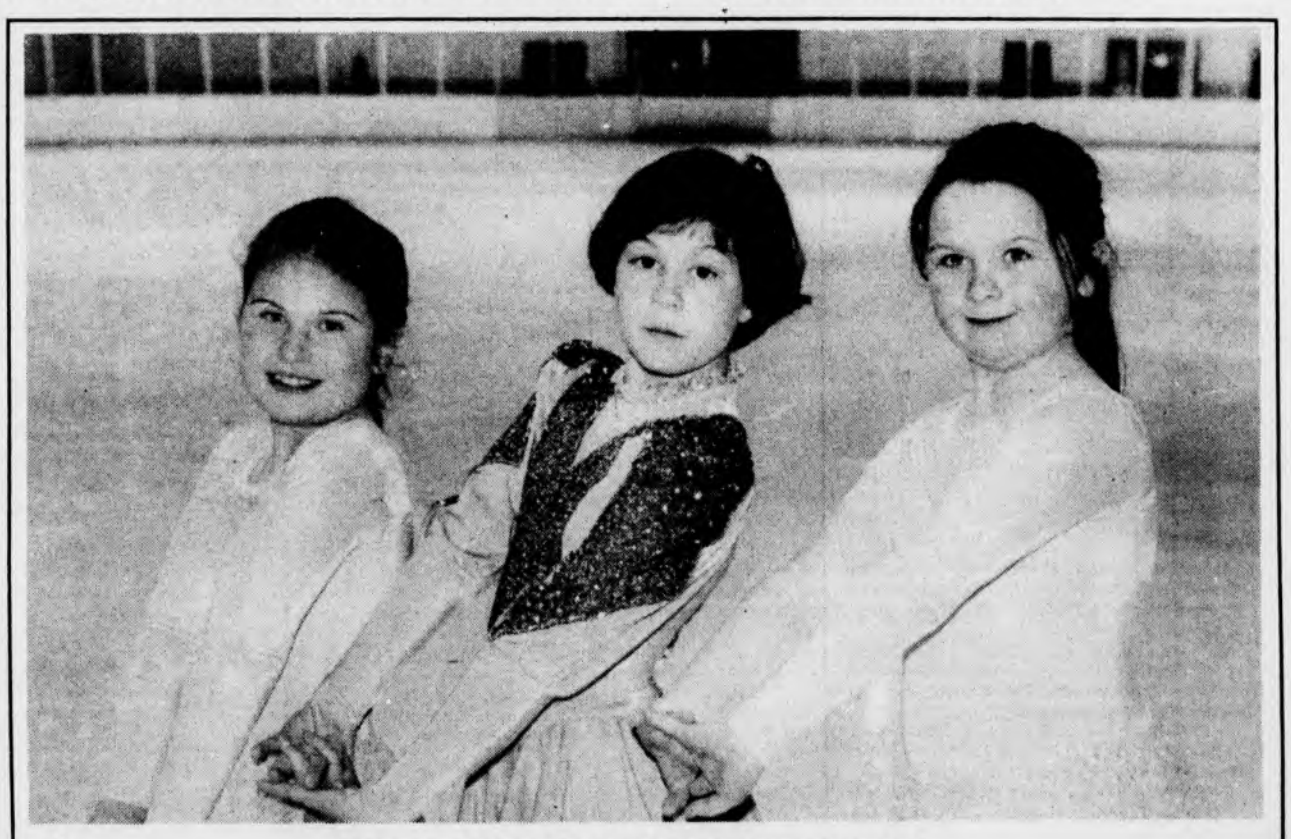
"It's Massachusetts' Winter Olympics," explained Wood.

Now there is the national competition to look forward to.

"It won't be disappointing if we don't win," said Kara.

"It's just the excitement of going."

Kim Ward displays the form that keeps Cohasset's figure skaters in the competition.



Three close friends, Michelle Buckley, Michelle Ward and Kara Protulis practice together most afternoons — now at Hingham's Pilgrim Arena.

Young scholars discover secrets of ancient Egypt

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The mysteries of ancient Egypt were uncovered this year by some unlikely scholars.

The students in Marie Price's kindergarten class, much to her surprise, became young experts on the subject of Ramses, the pyramids and pharaohs.

It all began when Price returned from her February vacation in Egypt. "I wanted to tell them everything I had learned," she said - except her bout of illness that landed her in an Egyptian hospital for two days. "I brought in photo albums and they wanted to look at everything."

She also bought each student a scarab, and told them how in ancient Egypt they were used to symbolize resurrection and immortality.

"Right away, I had some kids telling me they would live forever, as long as they wore their scarab," Price recalled. She continued to feed their interest in the country, and brought them in more photos and illustrations.

The children were taught Egyptian hieroglyphics, or cartouche. They were shown symbols for the letters in their names, and they soon began writing their names in cartouche. "Some of the children signed all their papers in hieroglyphics, the little devils," she chuckled. "I don't know how to read it, so I told them it wasn't fair."

As their interest increased, Price decided to continue their studies. They made Egyptian artwork, with the help of many mothers who volunteered to imprint cartouches on a plaster of Paris necklace mold.

It wasn't until later that Price discovered that the Ramses exhibit was arriving in the Boston Museum of Science.

One student saw an article about Ramses in the newspaper, and arrived in class shouting, "Mrs. Price, you're guy's in the paper!"

The teacher asked her students to peruse the newspapers for articles on the Ramses exhibit. Price was bombarded with articles, all of which she read. They weren't just newspapers clippings.

"Obviously, many parents got involved in this, because the kids were bringing in all sorts of articles from National Geographic and other magazines their parents were reading," Price noted.

Their interest never waned as the weeks continued. Twice, when she had to leave the classroom for brief conferences, she asked the students to scan their books for words about Egypt. When she returned minutes later, the students had placed bookmarks in an encyclopedia where they had found ten references to Egypt.

The teacher decided during spring vacation that the students deserved to see the Ramses exhibit, and she went to Boston to get tickets. Through much persistance, Price returned with about 60 tickets - enough for her two classes and chaperones.

In the remaining weeks, the teacher scoured books for references to Ramses, and shared them with the children. They couldn't understand how the king had 50 wives and 90 children.

"One child, Liam, was very agitated. Then, he finally asked me, 'How did he kiss all his wives good night?' I tried to explain that we're living in different times now. But then he asked me how he tucked all his children in at night. It's very difficult for them to relate ancient Egypt to their lives. I don't think I fully explained it to them."

In the days preceding their Boston visit, the kindergarten students reviewed workbooks specially prepared by Price for their exhibit tour. Their hard work paid off as the students enjoyed a day-long excursion at the museum.

The tour guides told the mother-chaperones they had never seen such knowledgeable students - even though they were the youngest to tour the exhibit. The mothers agreed it was an experience, as their children led them around the specimens, explaining or naming various objects.

Young scholars uncover secrets of ancient Egypt

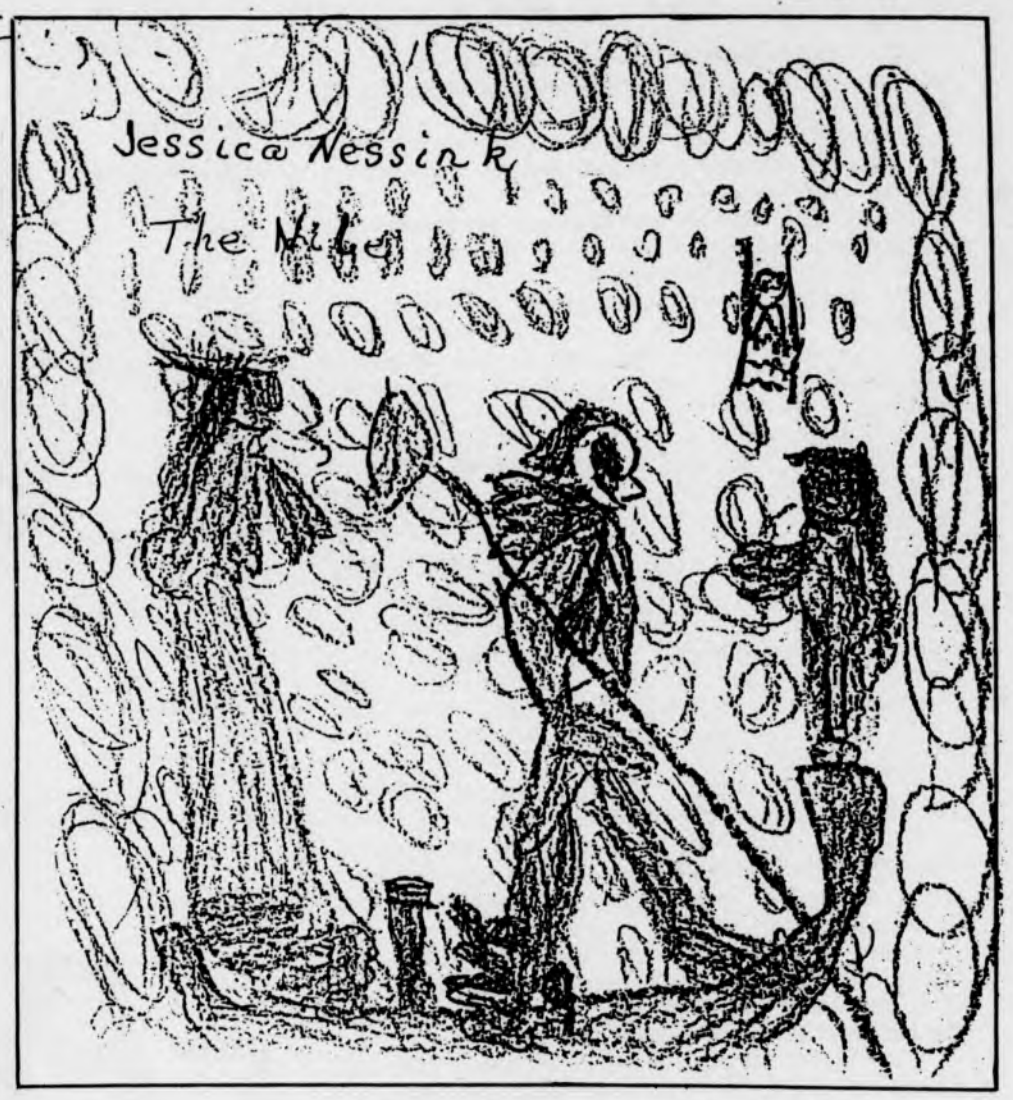
When the children returned, Price had them draw a likeness of Ramses on a 25-foot piece of paper. Various students worked on the head, others on the body, and another group completed the legs. Their version of the museum exhibit has been raised to the ceiling of the classroom.

Erica Dean heads up a line of students in Marie Price's class. The young artist drew a 25-foot replica of Ramses, an exhibit they visited last week. (Paul McDonald)



The children also drew likenesses of other objects they saw at the exhibit, including Isis, the sun god; the bird god, and the mumification god.

Although this was not a planned part of the kindergarten curriculum, Price said she would like to continue the program next year. "I enjoyed it so much, and so did the kids. I'd love to do it again," she said.

"I'm amazed at what they've learned," she said.

Even though the school year is about to close, the teacher's interest in Egypt is far from over. Price explained with uninhibited delight that she will be working as a Ramses tour guide every Wednesday afternoon through the summer. "I can't wait," she squealed. "Everyone has to come in and see me!"

Class of '89 car wash

There will be a car wash Saturday, June 25 at the Cohasset High School parking lot from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The cost is $3 and will benefit the Class of 1989.

Library report

The 9th grade Humanities Projects (both Fall and Spring) have kept all of us hopping... first the students were researching and building a project on some aspect of Greece and/or Rome... now it is the Medieval Period we are all steeped in... hats off to Mrs. Cronin and Mr. Bouchard for keeping everyone on the track whether the student is researching Mary, Queen of Scots, monasticism, or Michelangelo....

The 10th graders found themselves with research projects on topics as varied as the changes the automobile has wrought in the 20th century to Utopias to the Kent State tragedy... Students discovered they had a new tool to help them locate information on current topics — a machine called T.O.M. (Text on Microform) which provides a monthly indexing service on Microfilm (much as the Readers Guide does in print form) for over 150 periodicals as well as providing the full text of many of these publications on microfiche (our new microfiche reader has proven invaluable here). It's a subscription service that has paid for itself many times over — enabling all of us to access current information far more quickly than we were able to do last year.

A teacher will often request library time for a special short term project as Dr. Packard has done with his Mass Media Class, Mr. Thompson working with his Science class or Mrs. Burbank for a class project on Ethics, for example . . . The library has also been enriched with weekly visits from the Collaborative Group with whom we share our building. These children have touched all of us in a very special way. To see the joy on Rose's face when she proudly displayed her 2 Special Olympics' medals was something I wish everyone could have shared with us at that moment. She and the other children have come so far in their brief year here thanks to a very caring staff and perhaps just because they have become a very real part of this school. . . .

Last week the library was the scene of a special ceremony when Bryan Edwards was honored for his outstanding basketball achievement. The school libraries presented him with the gift of the book, "48 minutes" (about a professional basketball team) written by Boston Globe sportswriter, Bob Ryan. Bob took time out of a very busy schedule to come and present the autographed book to Bryan and noted that he had been watching Bryan's progress ever since Bryan had been an 8th grader . . . We have another copy of this book which both the girls' and boys' winning basketball teams have autographed. It is now out on the shelves and ready for borrowing.

Our student volunteers have been a tremendous help to us. We especially want to thank Kathy Conte, Heather Brennock, Ann-Margaret Grew, Mary Vallas, and Maura Young for their work in the library....

We are finishing up a Horace Mann Grant on Developing a Library Curriculum, K-12 which should be in place by September in all the schools....

And finally we should not forget a great big "Thank You!!" to all the townspeople who came out to vote for the Proposition 2½ Override, and to the PSO for all their efforts on behalf of quality education in Cohasset.

Move-up day procedures

All Osgood children will participate in Move-up Day Friday, June 24. New A.M. kindergarteners, together with the current A.M. and P.M. kindergarteners will be bussed to school as part of the general Osgood population. New kindergarteners will assume their kindergarten assignments while current kindergarteners will become 1st graders for a shortened session. All of these children will be dismissed to their homes at 11 a.m. This will be the last school day for all current kindergarteners. NEW AFTERNOON KINDERGARTENERS WILL BE PICKED UP BETWEEN 11:35 and 12:05 for a regular afternoon session with a 2:55 dismissal.

Current 1st, 2nd, and 3rd graders will be bussed to school as usual and will move to their new assignments for the morning session. Third graders will be transported to Deer Hill where they will become 4th graders. They return to Osgood following the luncheon period.

A Graduation Gift

There will never be a person as great as she.
She listens when I talk and tries to help.
We work together at whatever we do.
We may fight and pout, but I have no doubt.
That by morning we'll have worked things out.
Who is this person that is so great?
She is my sister, My sister Kate.

For Kate, With Love, Patty

Man has no choice

Man has no choice but to love.
For when he does not,
He finds his alternatives lie in loneliness destruction and despair.

When man has love,
He is no longer at the mercy of forces greater than himself.
For he himself becomes the powerful force.

Seascape

I can understand why the people of earlier times dared not explore the seas, that the world was believed flat, and nothing but ocean existed as far as they could see, and beyond. For, as I look out at the water on this stormy day, the ocean is very intimidating. The spraying and the crashing of water against the rocks display the ocean's strength explicitly. Even on a calm day, it is not hard to recognize the awe of the ocean, and it is understandable why medieval peoples created stories for its explanation. As I sit here, I create some stories of my own. Others may not see this, for while they spin their globe on the table top, the earth is robbed of its awe.

Cohasset worship . . .

Second Congregational Church

Minister: Gary A. Ritts, office phone: 383-0345; Secretary: Muriel Wheelwright, parsonage phone: 383-1422.
Church School — Special thanks again for a wonderful year in church school. To our dedicated and loving teachers: Rebecca McArthur, Sue Cameron, Karin Story, Lee Jenkins, Cheryl Taylor, Gay Dane and Charles Lindgren; and to our eager and energetic students. So also to C. E. Director Gail Whitehouse for her organization and detail watching. Congratulations on the completion of the Heifer Lamb project. We raised the $150 (600 cotton balls) to buy a sheep in just a month's time. Don't forget God this summer!
Townwide youth group — washed over 100 cars, raising $300+ for charity last Saturday afternoon next to the Common. A good, fun and not-so-dry-time was had by all! Their next adventure will be strictly social - a trip to a fun park in New Hamp.

A.C.S.P. (Arrostook County Service Project) volunteers will be having a couple of training/workshop sessions in preparation for our trip to Presque Isle, ME. We're getting psyched!
The 189th Massachusetts Conference Annual Meeting — is over! But the inspiration received by Chester and Eleanor Smith and Gary R. will be brought to bear in our sharing insights with the church. Sunday, June 26 has been set aside to bring our reports about what went on, while sharing some of the liturgy and music we experienced there at Mt. Holyoke College.
Quincy Crisis Center — nominating committee will be presenting our own Rev. Ritts for election to the Board of Directors at their annual meeting Sunday, June 26. It will be helpful to have a personal link and contact with them as they remain high on our list of mission priorities.
Sunday morning senior shuttle needs driver — to make one trip every eight weeks. Pick up at recreation hall of Senior Housing (60 Elm Street) at 9:10 a.m., deliver to Second Congregational Church, then to St. Anthony's. After church, pick up at St. Anthony's at 10:30 a.m., then Second Congregational at 11:00 a.m. Please call Helen Jason (383-1015), if interested.

It is, again time to prepare for the Village Fair on Dec. 3. We need people to help with a variety of jobs. Let me know if you can lend a hand with any of the following:
1. Co-chair with me.
2. Since First Parish will be responsible for the Fair next year, we should have someone who will (a) co-chair with me and other members next year, and (b) work now with another central committee member to take notes and get a general idea of what needs to be done.
3. We need a baking rep to make calls later on to ask people to do some baking.
4. We need people who can refinish small pieces of furniture.
5. We need people who are willing to chair a variety of committees, such as the Boutique, children's corner, secret room, plants, etc.
6. We always welcome people to work on any of the various committees in whatever capacity you can.

If anyone is interested please let me know. Thank you.

RELIGIOUS EDUCAITON
In my first official correspondence as the new Chairman of the Religious Education Committee, I would like to make three commitments to the members of First Parish — in particular, the parents of those children and young people who look to us for answers and examples.

A. That the Youth Group will be back next fall, stronger than ever— perhaps not in the same format or with the same frequency as in the past, but with more energy, new ideas, and ways of serving our community (whereever it may be).

B. That the overall growth and direction of the Religious Education Program will continue as in the past year; however, it will become necessary for more parents to begin to play an active role in determining that direction and in aiding in the actual instruction.

C. That the Religious Education Committee, Nancy Connolly (our R.E. Director), and all of the advisors to our Coming of Age, Human Sexuality and our Parent /Adult Group programs will always be available for comment and/or questions from you — our members and friends and the parents of our future members.

Mormons to leave

While Dr. Brent W. Lambert and his wife, Kitty, prepare to leave for a three-year period of service to their church, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, their 19 year old daughter, Kristin, will be leaving on a church calling of her own.

An eye surgeon on the South Shore, Lambert has temporarily set aside his medical practice and will devote himself full-time to a church missionary post in the Cleveland, Ohio area for the next three years.

Kristin, who is a nursing student at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, has been 'called' to serve as a Latter-day Saint missionary in Madrid, Spain, interrupting her college studies for the next 18 months. Mormon church members serve voluntarily and without remuneration.

Sunday, June 26, a missionary farewell will be held at the regular 9 a.m. service, at the LDS chapel, 379 Gardner St. in South Hingham. The Lamberts will be guest speakers. Bishop Bradley K. Johnson will conduct the meeting. The public is welcome.

Local doctor leaves practice . . .

The seeds of interest in becoming a doctor were planted when he was six years old.

"I had a badly broken arm and spent a lot of time in Children's Hospital," said Maltz.

"I received excellent care and was impressed with how they took care of me.

"In the back of my mind, I started to think about becoming a doctor."

Originally from Brookline and Newton, Maltz received his MD degree from John Hopkins University School of Medicine in 1968.

He spent his internship in pediatrics at New England Medical Center, and was a resident and fellow at Children's Hospital Medical Center.

For four years, he was a pediatrician and pediatric cardiologist at Scott Air Force Base Hospital in Belleville, Ill.

Then in July, 1974, he started his practice in Cohasset," he explained.

"We were looking to set up in the greater Boston area, and we came here."

Though he has plenty of patients now, that wasn't always the case.

"When I first started out, I used to get three calls a day," he said. "They were from my mother, mother-in-law, and wife.

"I had one patient a day.

"It was one and a half to two years until I felt I could make a go of it.

"After three years, I had 25 to 30 patients a day."

His patients range from newborn babies to 21 year-olds. He treats lacerations, broken fingers and minor abscesses, but mostly deals in growth and development.

"I have a lot of very nice patients," he said.

"One of the joys of being in practice is treating a second generation of a half dozen patients.

"That's probably one of the biggest compliments a pediatrician can receive."

"It's rewarding to see kids grow, develop, change.

"You participate in what's going on.

Sometimes, it's a shock to see how much kids grow," he added.

One boy he had treated as a toddler recently came into the office as a 6-foot 2-inch, 14 year-old, taller than Maltz.

Being a pediatrician is being part detective, he noted, because young children can't always tell you what's wrong.

One little girl had a rash around her mouth that was difficult to trace.

After playing 20 questions with the parents, Maltz learned that the family had a Polaroid camera in the house.

"It turned out that the little girl had been sucking on the back of Polaroid prints," he said.

Another time, a little boy's illness was traced to swallowing a good amount of Scope mouthwash.

Though he won't miss the 3 a.m. phone calls and being on call weekends, Maltz said he will miss most playing with the children.

"When you deal with kids, it keeps you young," he said.

"The things children tell you," added Maltz.

One little boy had a laceration in his forehead and needed stitches.

Maltz administered novacaine and began sewing up the wound.

"The boy was a peach," he said. "But he kept saying "Daddy tell him to stop putting holes in my head.

"Then he finally said, 'If he can't stop putting holes in my head, tell him we want a new doctor.' "

Then there was the time a little girl said she would like to be a doctor "just like Dr. Maltz."

"So I can have my very own marble machine," she added.

But the smiles and laughter are subdued in the case of a seriously ill child.

"It's extremely sad and difficult for the parents and the doctor when something is seriously wrong," said Maltz.

"We don't deal with that very often, thank God.

"But I come out more exhausted than with any other problem."

There has been one battered child in his 14 years of practice, but he encounters an actual or potential sexual abuse case about once a month.

Maltz said he refers the patient to South Shore Mental Health "Where they have an excellent sexual abuse team."

South Shore Mental Health also has an excellent director of Children's and Adolescent Services — his wife, Pamela, he said.

Married for 17 years, they both share a love of children, he said.

They have two children, Lyle, 6, and Lily, 5.

An amateur photographer who has taken and developed his own photos since the age of 7, Maltz is quick to pull out the latest pictures of his children. Such photos also decorate his office.

He said he is "very, very excited" about his new position as Medical Director/Vice President of Medical Affairs for BC/BS in Boston. He will start July 1.

"I've always been interested in the administrative aspect of medicine," explained Maltz. "My hands-on experience will allow me to be more efficient in an administrative role."

In his new position, he will help develop new programs to improve the quality of care.

"I feel very lucky," said Maltz. "I'll have the opportunity to do something which will have an impact on medical care in the area.

"It's not often that you get to work in both areas in one

(See page 19)

Excerpts from letters to Dr. Maltz

"I will always remember the care and attention you provided to my children. . . You have the unique ability to make your parents feels as though you really preferred to see their children on a Sunday, or speak with them at midnight regarding a "spiked temp" or a "hacking cough."

"I hope you have fun at your new job. And treat somebody as good as you treated me. I hope I will see you around town some day. P.S. Are you leaving the marble game in your office?"

"As for my husband and I, what can we say to the man who helped us through all the ear infections, scrapes, bumps, colds, chicken pox, etc.? Most especially being that reassuring voice at the other end of the telephone when a new mom just needed to hear that "Yes, Virginia, a college graduate is capable of raising a child no matter what you have heard!"

"I know you have a lot of patients, but we've only had one pediatrician and just want to let you know, we'll miss you."

You have always been prompt, kind and good-natured. I will especially miss your child rearing advice as it was always refreshingly clear and full of common sense."

"You always gave me back my smile when I was feelin' sick. Lot's of love."

"Thank you for always making me feel better when I was sick.

"You where there when I had strept throat which I had alot! You gave me my last shots. Even when I was rebel about the shots. Going to miss you and your sense of humor."

"Anytime either of them feel sick or hurt, it's always been "Call Dr. Maltz! Somehow, just talking to you on the phone made things better. . . !"

"We will always remember your reassuring way the day we brought you our six day old daughter. You said that I knew as much about being a mother as if I had given birth to her. We have a special feeling for you since you are an adoptive parent too!"

Coalition campaigns to reduce waste

The South Shore Coalition will kick off an area-wide campaign at 8 a.m. Monday, June 27, at the staff dining room of the Cardinal Cushing School, Route 53, Hanover, asking local businesses to pledge to reduce, replace and recycle solid waste.

This major effort to help solve the solid waste disposal problem is jointly sponsored by the local chambers of commerce, the League of Women Voters and South Shore Industries.

For two-and-a-half years, the coalition has been addressing the solid waste disposal problem that is approaching crisis proportions in many South South communities through a subcommittee.

Representatives from the 10-town region have met on almost a monthly basis to voice concerns and plan for future solid waste management.

A professional solid waste management planner from the Metropolitan Area Planning Council has assisted the group in its research and deliberation as well as a small technical advisory committee.

As a result of their work to create a regional approach to the issue, coupled with the support and efforts of state Sen. William Golden, D-Weymouth, the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering has awarded the coalition a $125,000 grant to develop a model regional solid waste management plan.

Work on this project is scheduled to begin soon.

However, the disposal crisis is immediate, said Jean Christensen, executive director of the coalition, and voluntary efforts must begin now in order to ease the situation.

"An important first step in this process is for businesses, governments and individuals to assess their product use and disposal practices and then plan to make changes that will result in less waste generation," she said.

This can be done in three ways:

- Reducing the amount of waste produced.
- Replacing toxic or unnecessary materials with those that are less harmful, able to be recycled or smaller in volume.
- Recycling the products that are used.

"One third of all the waste generated in the United States is composed of packaging materials," she continued, "and use and disposal of packaging products should be the focus of everyone's attention."

She said a representative from one of the South Shore's major industries will describe what practices his company adopted to reduce the waste stream.

"The solid waste disposal crisis affects everyone, economically and environmentally.

"To solve this nationwide crisis, everyone needs to be actively involved and committed," she said.

The public is invited to attend.

Pediatrician leaves lifetime."

Dr. Kevin Corbett, a pediatrician at South Shore Medical Clinic in Norwell for two years, will take over his practice. He will be part-time in July and full-time in August.

Kathy Maguire, Maltz' right hand person, will stay to help with the transition.

"Dr. Maltz is really a very caring guy," said Maguire.

The decision to make a change was not an easy one for Maltz.

"It's going to be very sad to leave," he said.

"Saying good-bye has been very difficult to do," said Maltz who has received numerous cards and letters from patients as he prepares to leave.

"I will miss all my patients," he said.

"I've had a lot of fun, and I've learned a lot from them.

"I wish them good luck in the future, and I hope to see them around Cohasset."

And yes, the marble machines are staying.

Change in concert date

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

New 'Fat-Magnet' Diet Pill Gives You Steady Fat Loss

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" to help you steadily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods as long as you don't increase your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire."

It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough for weight loss (worldwide patents pending).

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles from food that you have just eaten. Then, the trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Pills Go To Work"

The fat-magnet pills alone, "automatically" help reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat, with no exercising. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals. However, you can lose weight "faster" if you choose to follow the fat-magnet diet plan along with the pills.

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with record sales and glowing reports of weight loss. It's a "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating.

Now Available to Public

If you need to lose a large or small amount of weight, you can order your supply of these new highly successful fat-magnet pills and diet plan (now available from the doctor's exclusive manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$2 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), cash, check or money order to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. WR48, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) South Shore Coalition briefs . . .

Hidden affordable housing

There is a hidden supply of affordable housing on the South Shore and Ed Bates wants to help local officials find it.

A development design manual developed by the University of Massachusetts at Boston and the Metropolitan Area Planning Council shows how large single-family houses could be developed into two-family homes Bates, deputy director of the MAPC representatives to the South Shore Coalition last week.

This manual would be good for small towns with land left for development, Bates said.

You take the high road

Ed Bates, deputy director of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, said the state legislature is considering increasing gasoline and auto excise taxes to pay for road repairs and maintenance.

Under Proposition 2 1/2, he said, communities are spending half what they once were spending on road maintenance.

"The legislature is looking at ways to give the communities more money for maintaining roads," he said.

Presently, there is a $25 excise cap on automobiles, he noted. The new cap could be as high as $66.

Bates said Massachusetts taxpayers pay three cents less in tax on gasoline than their neighbors in other New England states.

"I know people don't like to talk about increasing taxes," he said, "but our roads are hurting."

History on hold

"Major changes" have delayed the printing and distribution of a brochure outlining an historical trail through the South Shore, according to Jean Christensen, comprehensive planner for the South Shore Coalition.

Scituate selectman Jerry Dwight, who organized a subcommittee of local historians from throughout the coalition's 10 member-towns—and from Pembroke, said he was miffed the brochure was not ready as he announced it would be.

Christensen said Carol Knox of Duxbury had included a map in the brochure, but a trail was not clearly depicted on the map.

One of the "major changes" made to the brochure before printing is that it now depicts "a real trail."

Christensen said Thursday she anticipates the brochure will be out in about two weeks.

Coalition backs Hanover

Members of the South Shore Coalition added their voices last week to Hanover's plea to the state legislature to allocate federal money for the reconstruction of Route 53.

The state department of public works notified Hanover selectmen two weeks ago that there are not enough federal funds to pay for completion of the road work between Pond Street in Hanover to the Pembroke town line.

In a letter informing their counterparts in neighboring towns, Hanover selectmen said "the corridor was designed as a unified project, and to finish only part of it will increase the problems that we now have on the unfinished portion.

"Since this road is used by citizens of all our neighboring towns," they continued, "we are asking for your assistance in contacting state senators and representatives to inform them of the need for the funding to complete the project.

"We feel this is not just a Hanover concern, but one which affects all the area towns."

Norwell selectman Connie Hughes told her fellow representatives to the 10-town coalition that her board is concerned about the recent development.

"We asked voters at our town meeting for $140,000 in matching funds for the same thing," she said, "and we told them that the state wants to do it and that this is how Hanover went about it and they got the funds."

Soccer camp

For the second year, a specialized soccer goalkeeper's camp will be held August 22-26, 1988.

The day camp is offered to both newly interested and experienced male and female goalkeepers thirteen years of age and older. The camp will be held at Gates Intermediate School, 327 First Parish Road (off RTE 3A) in Scituate. Arrangements can be made for pick ups at local public transportation sites. For example, the Scituate bus stop for the Plymouth and Brockton Bus Company, Hingham for the Boston to Hingham commuter boat.

The camp program emphasizes instruction and training in the areas of fitness, technique, tactics, and the psychological aspects specific to the position of goalkeeping. Each camper will receive: instruction/training from an experienced goalkeeping staff, at least a 6:1 teaching ratio, aid of video replay, one top quality soccer ball, and a clinic notebook.

Registration before July 21 is $150. After July 21 $175. Registration and information may be obtained by calling John Crowley at (617) 545-9537 or by writing Keeper Intense, 19 Cathy's Path, N. Scituate MA 02066.

Army unit at museum

The Cohasset Historical Society's Capt. John Wilson Historical House and Maritime Museum on Elm Street at Cohasset Center will be visited Sunday, June 26, by members of His Majesty's 47th Regiment of Foot, an authentically reconstructed British Army Unit of Revolutionary War days.

Originally scheduled to be present at the museums' official opening day last Sunday, the unit was regretfully unable to attend the formal opening day event because of a conflict of dates with a major encampment event.

This Sunday the 47th, in authentic 18th century British Army uniforms and carrying muskets of that time, will turn out in force at the Society's museums. Commanded by Cohasset's Col. Bruce Collins, the unit plans to send from six to ten men to the Capt. Wilson House and Maritime Museum this Saturday from 1:30 to 4 p.m.

The original Royal 47th Regiment of Foot, an actual British Army unit which served in England's American Colonies at the time of the Revolution, was present at the Concord-Lexington battle, then served in Boston during the days of the "siege" by Continental forces. The 47th participated in the battle of Bunker Hill, then was evacuated from Boston with other units of the British army.

Subsequently stationed in Canada, the 47th Regiment of Foot served with Gen. John Burgoyne's army in the battle of Saratoga, the key battle won by American forces. It was at Saratoga that Cohasset's Ambrose Bates fought on the side of the victorious Continental forces and, in his diary, described the battle and the long march back to New York as British soldiers left, under guard, for Boston. Ambrose Bates was one of the 12 men recruited in Cohasset to "reinforce the northern Army" for the battle of Saratoga.

This Sunday's appearance at Society museums marks the second time a recreated British Army unit of Revolutionary times has visited the museums. The first appearance, a few years ago, proved to be one of the most popular events of the Society's summer museum season, and this forthcoming appearance promises to be both exciting and informative to spectators and students of America's Revolutionary War days.

This week's update on Cohasset Little League

A couple of twinbills on tap this past week, one of which produced a big surprise. Monday night in game one of the set, the Yankees ambushed the Mets 18-5 and opened the door for the Braves who promptly climbed into first place the next night when they hammered the Red Sox. The Mets avenged their loss 12-2 on Thursday night, but the Braves continued their dominance of the Red Sox Friday night and clung to the top of the standings.

So...back to Monday's big surprise! Gert Lubitz led a Yankee onslaught with his first three-hit game of the year. In addition he scored two and drove in four. Other notable stars in this one were Tim Brister with three hits and 6 ribbies, and Tom Greco and Jonathan Hislop with two hits and two runs apiece. Mike Reynolds picked up his third win of the year with six solid innings of work around the mound. Key defensive plays were contributed by Nate Caldwell with a fine running catch of a ball off the bat of hard-hitting Andy Kamataris, and by Chris Goodman as he made a leaping stab of a line drive and then doubled a runner off second.

In Thursday's rematch it was all Mets as Kenny Heahy helped jump start his team with a bases-clearing triple in the first. After that opening explosion, Chris Rolandelli punched in cruise control. He picked up his sixth win of the year as he issued only four hits while punching out (strikeout) 12 Yanks. Mike Reynolds and the sharp hitting Emily Spencer accounted for all the Yankee offense with two hits apiece.

Tuesday night the Braves got great pitching from Chris Kondrat and superb hitting throughout the lineup and parlayed that combination to a 24-0 rout of the Red Sox. Chris struck out 13 of a possible 15 Sox and had a no-hitter going before Jim Magner and Mike Riley reached him for clean singles back-to-back in the fifth.

The Braves had a four-hit night from Steve Harrington (3 doubles), 3 hit games from Doug Ellinger and Tim Conroy (each had a triple) and a homerun to deep center by Brian "Elvis" Pattison to highlight the slugfest.

Friday night followed the same pattern. The Braves got solid pitching from Tim Conroy, another three-hit game from Doug Ellinger, two hits apiece from Conroy and Pattison, and another blast to straightaway center, this time by Steve Harrington, to crush the Sox 18-6. On a bright note from the Sox, Wes DeSantis, just up from the minors, was perfect in his debut. He tripled in his first at bat and scored on a wild pitch. Later his walks fueled a four-run flurry by the Sox as he scored on a sharp single by Chip Moore. The McKenna Kids, Chris and Kevin, and Nicky Welz also contributed to the Sox attack.

League of Women Voters house tour July 12

Tuesday, July 12, the Scituate League of Women Voters will host its 27th annual house tour. Six homes, most with a water view, will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and refreshments will be served to all tour participants from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the James Landing Club House.

Variety is the spice of life and the theme of this year's tour. The tour's oldest house, built between 1750 and 1770, is a charming Cape on Country Way and now the home of a young couple with two small children. Wide plank floorboards and beamed ceilings seem comfortable next to the bright, skylighted, completely remodeled kitchen, which looks out on a lovely garden and play area.

The present owners have adapted this historical house to their family needs without sacrificing the spirit of antiquity. The "borning room" is now a small playroom, while the parlor of Israel Cudworth, a former owner, is now their dining room, and the common room, with its 18th century fireplace and baking oven, is the family sitting room. The whale knocker on the red kitchen door extends a cheery welcome.

Contrasting sharply with the antique Cape are two contemporary houses in the Minot area. Located near each other and built three and four years ago, they are nevertheless different in mood and design following ideas and specifications of the owners.

One home has subdued colors, which create an atmosphere of comfortable relaxation, and the view of the Minot marshland and ocean reinforces the sense of a tranquil haven.

The other house has a color scheme of black, white and bright red exclusively, and imaginative, unconventional use of space, together with innovative (often humorous) objects d'art, combine to make this home dynamic and surprising.

A 110-year-old farmhouse on a hill above Route 123 is another example of the diversity of architecture and lifestyle represented on this tour. Victorian charm mingles with modern accents to make this residence a blend of old and new.

The entry room with wood plank ceiling, slate floor and wood stove leads to a cozy living room, with oversized sliding patio doors that present a magnificent view of the Third and Fourth Cliffs as well as Cape Cod Bay. On the second floor there is a wrap-around deck, connected by glass doors to the master bedroom, with an observation deck above that.

The tour provides another spectacular view from the 50 year old Cape on Second Cliff. Renovated twice in the past five years, it has more than doubled its original size without losing its charm. The blues and whites of ocean and sky are reflected in the interior color scheme, which enhances the feeling of openness, air and space created by the imaginative design. This is especially evident in the cathedral ceiling, skylights and general decor of the delightful extended kitchen/sunroom, the focal point of this gracious family home.

Completely different in style and mood, but again offering a water view, is the one-floor terrace apartment at James Landing on the Driftway. Stepping down into the formal living room, the visitor enters a modern world of luxury, which contrasts subtly with the restful vista beyond the North River and marshland. From here the tour goer can move on to the James Landing Club House and refreshments — again with a view.

The house tour is the league's major fund raiser and proceeds make possible scholarships, voter service activities and educational programs.

Advance tour tickets are available for $10 from any league member, Gates Store in North Scituate, Verge Jewelers in Scituate Harbor, and North River Packet, Greenbush. On the day of the tour, tickets will be sold for $12 on Lawson Common, at the intersection of First Parish and Beaver Dam Roads.

Children are not invited to participate in the tour and cameras are not allowed. For more information, call 545-3231 or 545-0335.

Resident offers town a house- but move it!

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Donald Staszko, a local resident who is proposing a 12-store complex at Cohasset Plaza on Rte. 3A, is making an offer he hopes the town will not refuse.

Although his plans for the 12-store addition to the Super Stop and Shop plaza have not yet been approved, Staszko intends to remove a single-family house that abutts the property. The white-shingled house is located on the corner of Sohier Street and Rte. 3A, but it must be removed before construction of the plaza stores begins.

Staszko has offered to donate the four-bedroom house to the town. In return, the town will be responsible for removing the structure.

The developer has suggested the home could be moved about 1,000 feet away onto town-owned property and converted into a single-family affordable housing unit.

Bildner's says bye to 3A plaza

After much fanfare that heralded Bildner's arrival in Cohasset two years ago, the flashy "supermarket for the yuppies" disappeared from Cushing Plaza.

The store, which featured a gourmet meats and butcher section, a bakery, freshly-ground international coffees, and delivery service, closed its doors Sunday. Most of the produce had vanished by the weekend, and a 25 percent discount had quickened the sale of many other items in the store.

The 10,000 square-foot clapboarded building, featuring green awnings and tasteful decorating, is now vacant. Hunneman and Co.'s investment management division in Boston is handling the rental at $10 per square foot, according to broker John Wilson.

"We're just beginning to market the store," he said. The owner of the building is Cape Elizabeth Realty Trust, a subsidiary of J. Bildner and Sons Co.

J. Bildner and Sons came into Cohasset with Festival featured arts for all ages

By Kris Sheridan
Mariner correspondent

Dancers, artists, theatre lines
Singers, costumes, enchanting wind chimes —

No — it's not a child's rhyme but a brief description of selected sights and sounds at the 33rd South Shore Arts Festival held June 24 through 26 on Cohasset Common.

This annual event sponsored by the South Shore Art Center and Prestige Imports (with additional funding from the private and corporate sector) is a showcase for, and celebration of, local, national and international art and crafts of every kind.

The three-day festival offered a wealth of talented performers, artists and craftsmen to those smart enough to attend. Included in the roster of scheduled performers were: Tom Rush, Cambridge - spawned folksinger and balladeer; Fortaleza, a group composed of three Bolivian brothers who perform folk music of the Andes on traditional Bolivian instruments; Mobius, a performance group who incorporate various art forms into their always original productions; Boston City Lights, an exuberant breakdancing, rap singing company of talented city kids, and Puppet Projects, a nationally renowned troupe utilizing costumed actors, hand puppets, magical scenery and a classical music score to present The Wind in the Willows, a time-honored children's novel.

Several other talented musicians — Stephen Baird, Joni and Rich Jensen, the Touch of Brass quintet and the South Shore Concert Band — were also slated to perform.

As varied and multi-talented as the performing artists were the works of the exhibiting craftspeople whose wooden birds and miniatures, stoneware, stained glass work, handwoven baskets and rugs, leather and antique brooches and enamel jewelry kept the masses browsing.

Cruise to Minot scheduled July 31

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Local residents will be able to learn more about the history and the ongoing reconstruction of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse at a four-hour event to be held by the Cohasset Historical Society Sunday, July 31 from noon to 4 p.m.

Selectmen granted permission for the society to use Government Island for the event tentatively titled, "Minot's Light Revisited."

Osborne Ingram, a member of the society's board of directors and an organizer of the event, explained to selectmen that the event will include boat trips around the lighthouse.

Ingram said the event will begin with people assembling at a parking lot and being bused to Government Island.

"We'll provide some history of the construction of the light, and other information," he said.

Then people will be shuttled to Government Island Landing and a boat, Mass. Bay Lines' Sea Breeze, for a cruise around Minot's Light, according to Ingram.

Chipping at Cedar Street landfill

The Board of Health has established the following schedule for chipping of residential brush at the Cedar Street Landfill:

four hours on the second and fourth Saturdays of each month;

four hours on the following Monday of those Saturdays.

Chipping will be done from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on those days.

The brush will be allowed only on those days when the chipper is in service. Brush will not be accepted from commercial landscapers. Siting of the chipping equipment will be adjacent to the compost pile.

The first day of operation will be Saturday, July 9. The July schedule will be July 9, 11, 23, 25.

Based upon the trial schedule for July a decision will be made on the possible reduction of hours or days.

Landfill operation changes

Beginning July 1, the days of the landfill operation will change.

The landfill will be closed Tuesdays and Thursdays and holidays. The landfill will be closed for the holiday, Monday, July 4, and Tuesday, July 5.

Effective July 1, mandatory recycling of all newspapers, metal and yard wastes will take place. None of these items when mixed with household trash will be acceptable.

The following are answers to some questions that have been asked:

1. Do I have to separate all paper from my household trash? No, only newpapers and magazines are to be placed in the paper bins.

2. What items qualify for disposal in the metal pile? Appliances, brackets, metal plates, pots and pans, beach chairs, etc. Tin cans can be disposed with your household trash until such time as a market is developed for them.

3. What do you mean by yard wastes? Leaves, sod, grass clippings and hedge trimmings. Special arrangements are being made for residential brush disposal. Look for a future announcement as to the schedule for disposal. None can be accepted at this time per the order of the DEQE.

4. What must I do to gain entrance to the Cedar Street Municipal Landfill? A valid 1988 - 89 sticker placed on your vehicle is required. Beach and dump stickers can be purchased from the Recreation Department at the Town Hall. Please note, purchases can be made with verification of residency during posted hours and on Saturday from 9 - 12 a.m. for the next two weeks (through July 2nd.)

5. What is the expiration date of my current sticker? June 30.

6. What are the hours of operation at the landfill? 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Questions may be referred to the health board offices at 383-1664.

METCO revised

The Cohasset METCO plan has been revised and resubmitted after the state informed Cohasset school officials that the state program will be level-funded next year.

Supt. Stephen Hart said the town will now receive $176,827 for next year's program. An increase in the appropriations was expected.

Although the same number of students will participate in the program next year, Supt. Hart said an additional tutorial position originally requested for the high school will not be added to the program. Each year, some of the money Cohasset receives through participation in the program pays for additional teacher salaries.

Selectmen reverse no parking on King Street

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Those who enjoy the recreational aspects of Lily Pond, which is also the town's water supply, will again be able to park their cars on King Street between house numbers 362 and 388.

Selectmen voted Monday night to reverse their earlier decision to have three no parking signs erected, following complaints by the water commissioners regarding litter from those who use the area.

Selectmen James Gallagher, who had voted against the signs along with Rocco Laugelle, said he received numerous complaints after the board's action.

"I want reconsideration because of the phone calls and personal contact I have had with people who are concerned," said Gallagher, who noted that such activities as fishing, skating and ice fishing take place at the pond.

"It's not a recreation center," said Ben Curley, water department superintendent.

James Sheerin, a water commissioner, said that people have been using the area as a picnic area.

"The reservoir is a light recreation use," he said.

He said that allowing residents with beach stickers to park at the area might be a solution to the problem.

"I'm not against people using the facility," said Sheering. "I'm against people coming in with no control."

"I don't see what the big deal is about," said Ron Goodwin, Water Commissioners chairman.

"I really don't feel one way or the other.

"The water commissioners are charged with protecting the water supply.

"I don't think it's a safe place to park. But I'm not against fishing in Lily Pond."

Goodwin suggested allowing residents to park at the treatment plant by keeping the gates open on weekends.

Sumner Smith of 434 King St., about 100 yards from Lily Pond, showed selectmen several bags of rubbish he has collected around the area.

It included such things as sneakers, socks, paper, bottles, cans and diapers.

He suggested that people park on Pond St. and walk to Lily Pond.

"Kids can't walk from Pond St.," said Gallagher.

"This is sickening that kids can't utilize the pond. . . I don't like it.

"In other communities, they don't allow any recreation on the water supply," said Goodwin.

Laugelle suggested that the no parking signs be removed, and the maximum fines for littering be imposed.

A resident noted that there are no barrels for litter in the area.

"When you put barrels, people fill them right up with household rubbish," said Laugelle.

"Lily Pond is not a recreation area," said selectmen chairman Burt Pratt. "It's a water supply.

"People are just trying to protect the water supply and keep the area clean."

When selectmen voted to take down the no-parking signs, member Cliff Mitman said that the action was an experiment.

"If it doesn't work out, come back," Mitman said.

Coalition asks businesses to recycle

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

The South Shore Coalition kicked off an area-wide solid waste management campaign Monday by asking local businesses to pledge to reduce, replace and recycle their waste.

"It is finally time we stop talking about solid waste recycling and begin doing something about it," State Sen. William Golden D-Weymouth said.

Golden administered the pledge to Barry Culkin of Braintree, vice president in charge of operations for Boston Whaler Inc., which has plants in Rockland, Norwell and Hanover.

Representatives from several other area businesses also took the pledge at the Cardinal Cushing School in Hanover early Monday morning.

Culkin said Boston Whaler decided to take the lead in the coalition's mission to help the region manage its solid waste stream because it is a "win-win situation."

Solid waste management is a big problem for the business community, as it is for the community at large, he explained.

"Boston Whaler's cost for disposing its trash has grown in excess of 35 percent over the past three years," Culkin said.

By reducing, replacing and recycling, Boston Whaler can save on disposal costs and reduce the impact a greater and more toxic waste stream has on the environment," he said.

Boston Whaler will hold a symposium in the fall to teach other businesses how they can reduce the bulk, weight and toxicity of their waste, recycle and replace non-recyclable products with ones that can be recycled.

Other major South Shore corporations that have taken the pledge include Building 19, Wear Guard, Merriman and Armstrong World Inc. Many smaller businesses have jumped on the bandwagon as well.

"I believe this is the first time we have attempted to bring the business community in as a partner," Golden said.

Kevin Costello of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce said the members of his organization are eager to work with the coalition on its Reduce, Replace, Recycle campaign.

"We are forming our solid waste management committee to work with the South Shore Coalition on this plan," he said.

Members of six chambers of commerce and four leagues of women voters also took the pledge.

"One of the things we found out when we came together two-and-a-half years ago," Hull selectman John Silva said, "is that solid waste management is a big problem, one of the top one or two problems in each of our 10 towns.

"As chairman of the South Shore Coalition I have become an expert on sewage and rubbish," he quipped. "It's not because I wanted to, but because solid waste management is a huge problem."

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering recently awarded the coalition a $125,000 grant to develop a model regional solid waste management plan.

Silva said he hopes the coalition's plan will be copied throughout the state.

Developer offers home to town...

According to his estimates, it would cost about $40,000 to $55,000 to rehabilitate the house.

"It's a good solid house. I recently installed thermal pane windows. But it needs insulation, electrical work and plumbing work and new siding," he said.

Staszko suggested that the town move the house to nearby town-owned land off Rte. 3A. The land, which is only about 1,000 feet away from the current site, abuts the new street being developed by Paul Ferrini off Rte. 3A behind the Super Stop and Shop.

The four bedroom house is now vacant, although someone had been renting the property as late as last fall.

Staszko said if the town does not take advantange of the offer, he will remove the house or demolish it.

"It would be a real shame if the town doesn' t accept this offer," he said. "They're really hurting for affordable housing and this would be a real opportunity to get something."

Selectman chairman Burt Pratt said he has discussed the proposal with Staszko. His initial reaction is that further discussions are necessaary.

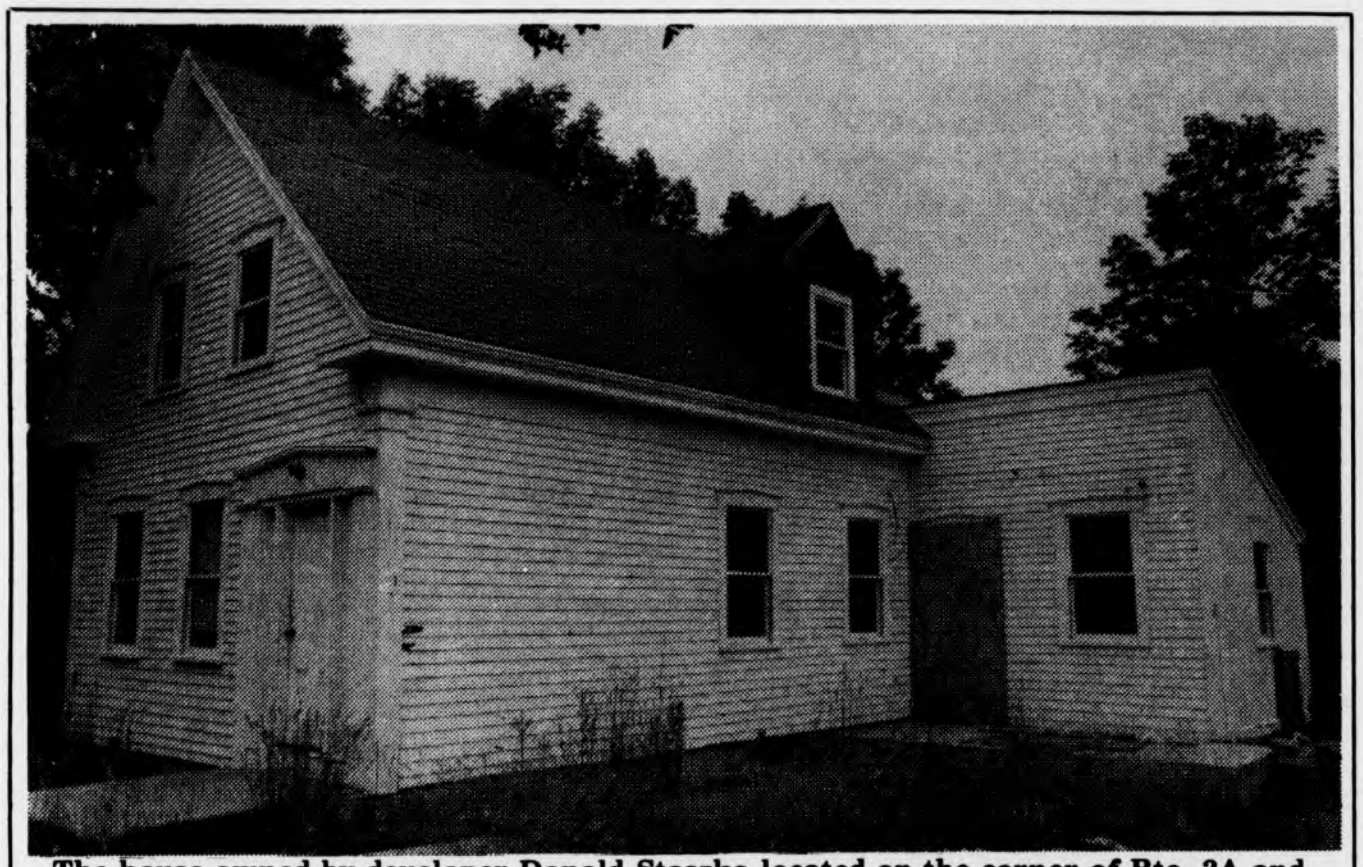
"If it is a salvageable house under the state rules and the state provides the money to rehab it, then it's an idea worth looking into," Pratt said.

Selectmen will discuss the proposal, he noted.

The local developer also discussed his proposition with Rev. Clifford Cutler, chairman of the local fair housing committee. Since that time, Rev. Cutler has discussed the idea at a meeting of the committee.

"The basic idea is good," he said. "And if selectmen feel this is a good idea, and they think it would be helpful pulling together the various committees in town, then we'd be interested. "

He added, "our committee is interested in any creating any affordable housing property in town. And if this affordable housing is possible, then we'd be in favor of it."



The house owned by developer Donald Staszko located on the corner of Rte. 3A and Sohier Street. (J. Paul McDonald photo)

At a recent meeting, members of the fair housing committee registered a positive reaction to the proposal, he added.

The chairman of the Cohasset Housing Authority also shared that enthusiasm, but noted it was up to selectmen to initially approve or deny the offer.

"I'm more than willing to discuss the offer," he said, "but it's up to selectmen first to accept the offer."

Muncey couldn't make a decision on the proposal without first examining the costs involved in moving and rehabilitating the structure. "We'd have to get the money from the state. And they'd be the ones to make the final decision whether it was worth the money," he explained.

"If the state thinks this is a viable thing, then we can go with it. But the first thing is for selectmen to accept the offer, remembering that we have to have some place to put the house. If selectmen accept the offer, then it's time for the housing authority to get involved," said Muncey.

The housing authority chairman noted, "We're willing to listen to anybody. The question is, will the state like this plan and give us the money to do the job. Everything hinges on that."

Cruise to Minot's Light . . .

"There will be commentary about shipwrecks and sites around the route," Ingram said.

"We'll also talk about what's being done at the lighthouse. Hopefully, some of the reconstruction will be underway by then."

The Coast Guard is repairing the lighthouse built between 1855 and 1860.

It hopes to have the reassembly of the upper part of Minot's Light completed by the end of the summer and the lantern re-lit before fall.

After the cruise, those attending will be brought back by bus to the Lothrop House, 14 Summer St., for light refreshments, Ingram said.

They will also be able to view artifacts from such places as the Maritime Museum before being bussed back to recover their cars, he said.

"This is the first major rebuilding in 120 years," said Ingram. "It's time to try for something special."

The event will be limited to about 150 people, he said, because the boat, which can carry 35 passengers, can only operate from Cohasset Harbor for about four hours because of the tides, he explained.

"It's both a service and a fund raiser for the society," said Ingram, who added that cost for the event has not yet been determined.

"We hope to have tickets or reservations available by next week," he said.

More information will be available closer to the date of the event," he said.

"This seemed an exceptionally good time to see the light and the condition it is in," Ingram said.

"After the restoration, it will never be that way again."

Meanwhile, preparation is underway for the Cohasset Historical Commission plans to erect a 25-food replica of Minot's Light on the shore of Government Island.

It will use Quincy granite blocks removed from the original lighthouse.

The $25,000 project, scheduled to take two to three years, is being privately financed.

Sorting the 2,000 pound blocks that made up the top four sections of the lighthouse will be the first phase of the replica project.

The original cement stonecutters' platform will serve as the base for the replica.

After the blocks are reassembled, cracks and chips will be filled with cement.

The rotating mechanism will be installed in the center.

The lantern room will be recreated next, with windows made of unbreakable plastic with wood framing.

□ Hats off to the Ward family! Of Church Street fame, that is. Mary Ward recently graduated from Mass Bay Community College and everyone is celebrating. It was a real family affair that made it possible, with husband Mike and daughters Kim and Michelle doing their part to make sure that Mom got her R.N. degree. Mary was an LPN and wanted to go for her RN, and she did so. She worked full time and was a full-time student as well as being wife and Mom . . . that takes a lot of work on everyone's part and it was done. Congratulations surely go to Mary Ward, R.N.

□ Chad Whitman is home from the hospital and doing real well. He had to have his appendix out, and spent 12 days at Children's Hospital. Mom spent a lot of time there, and there were lots of friends and neighbors who helped out with the rest of the Whitman clan. A great big Thank You to all of you that helped out from the Whitmans.

□ Bill and Mary O'Brien recently returned from Santa Barbara, California where their daughter and son-in-law (Monica and Mark Hemmah) had a baby boy. Cody Allan was born on May 5 and weighed in at 6 lbs. 5 ozs. He has a big brother named Matthew, who is 2½. Their daughter, Erin Flynn (who everyone will remember as being the former director of the Cohasset Swim Center) is expecting a baby in late August. Talk about busy grandparents, they will need a special calendar just to record all of the birthdays . . . wow!

□ Last week the Special Olympics was mentioned, and Kenny Sargent was not. Kenny took part in the Olympics that were held at Boston University and he came back to Cohasset as the proud winner of two gold medals. Kenny won the gold in the softball throw and the 50-yard dash. And, mom Janice has all of the pictures. What a happy time for all.

□ Hope that everyone had a chance to go by the O'Connor home last Saturday... it looked too beautiful with the large pink and white tent in the yard. Daughter Kim and her brand new husband, Keith, certainly had a fine day for a wedding. We wish them health, happiness and love as they begin their new life together.

□ Happy 21st birthday goes to Krissy Pompeo, one of the nicest gals that we know. Sure hope your celebration is a dynamite one, full of fireworks.

□ Yummy news to report, the Taverna is coming! The Community of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church will be holding its seventh annual Taverna during the July 4th weekend. It will begin on July 2nd and end on July 4th, and goes on rain or shine. The food is outstanding, there will also be ethnic dancing and a boutique that will offer many Greek products. Admission is free, it's held on the Panagia Church grounds, and it's something not to miss.

Bildner says bye-bye

much pomp and circumstance more than two years ago. Company president Jim Bildner promised residents a unique one-stop shopping experience.

Their first defeat arrived before the store opened when selectmen denied a beer and wine license to the new owners. Bildner intended the store to be a convenience to shoppers, and wanted to offer a fine selection of beer and wines to his customers. But selectmen defeated the proposal, saying there were enough licenses throughout the town.

The store managment wanted to integrate the Bildner name into the community. They made presentations to the Cohasset Chamber of Comerce and offered tours of the store to local clubs and organizations.

But Jerry Freed, director of property management for J. Bildner and Sons, said the store never showed a profit from the first week. "Except for holiday weeks, this store was losing money," he said last week. "A store this size should have been producing sales between $60,000 and $65,000 each week. Our sales here average $40,000 per week.

"Maybe it's because we were set back from the road. Maybe the store wasn't laid-out properly. Or maybe the prices weren't what they should have been," Freed said.

"People who came here regularly loved the store," he continued.

Freed noted that the extravagent decorating of the store, including tiled floor and brass fixtures, together with the personalized counter service, hiked food prices at the store. "Obviously this wasn't what people in Cohasset wanted in a supermarket," he admitted, noting that an extensive marketing survey completed prior to the store opening indicated people in the area would shop at Bildner's. "Marketing is only as good as the people who do them."

When asked if the addition of a Super Stop and Shop along Rte. 3A hurt business, Freed answered, "it didn't help."

The property manager said the company had seriously considered closing the Cohasset store for several months, although the decision was not made until a few weeks ago.

The company currently has eight stores remaining in Massachusetts.

"Maybe this store was just like a fad. People seemed to like it for a while, but the interest faded," Freed said.

He explained that the 16 full and part-time employees in Cohasset have been offered positions in other Bildner's stores. "No one is walking away from here crying," he commented.

Although originally some Cushing Plaza tenants were not overjoyed to share their corner with a new neighbor, the demise of Bildner's has not been cause for celebration.

Rick Peters, owner of Sea and Cheese at the Cushing Plaza, said his business may be hurt by the supermarket's departure.

"We've got to have an alternative to the Stop and Shop," he said this week. "People should have a place to go for good quality food at fair prices. Cushing Plaza has to have a business that can compete with the Stop and Shop."

Peters said the arrival of Bildners into the plaza actually helped his fish, cheese and wine business. "We relied on traffic generated by Bildner's," he said. "And that concerns me now. I hoped I helped him as much as he helped us. I think our stores complimented each other rather than competed.

"I hate to see us sitting here alone until a viable business comes in."

Peters, who has owned the business for five years, would like to gather a group of businessmen together to form a cooperative market. "It's just in the planning stages, but it's something I'd like to do," he explained. "I'd like to see quality meat, fish, wine, with a bakery located right there under one roof. But we'd need the right people for a successful business.

"It's something that I think people in this area would like to see."

A tragedy

It was devastating just to read about it. The news of Hull's defeat of a Proposition 2 1/2 override is painful for us as neighbors - can you imagine how tragic it is for the people of Hull?

Residents of that town worked diligently to educate each other about the importance of an override. And by less than 300 votes, the voters of Hull decided the educational system can survive without the "frills" - 19 teachers, sports, honors programs, bands and building maintenance.

What a tragedy.

Can people truly believe that valuable segments of this educational system will not be harmed by taking nearly $1 million out of a school budget? There may surely be a few teachers for whom there will be no tears shed.

But we must object strongly to the notion that all these staff members targeted for reduction are not worthy enough to remain. That is simply untrue.

It is unsettling to think about the effect this override defeat will have on the young children of Hull. The tears shed Monday night will surely scar them for many years.

Many of these students, themselves active participants in the fight to win the override, now understand that the majority of residents in their town do not care about quality education. The size of their pocketbooks is primarily important - the future of their town be damned.

Fortunately, that was not the message we sent our children when faced with a similar situation last spring. It was not easy for many is us to accept an increase in our taxes. It had been nice living with an affordable tax rate.

But as we became educated, we understood that number was deceptively low. We accepted that fact and decided to remedy the situation. It was not a pleasant pill to swallow, but we are satsified with the results. We are paying more for services now - but we exercised our right to say that we indeed desired those services. No one had to threaten us - we decided to keep our quality educational system. We decided the transfer station should be built at the landfill, and that town services should continue.

Why Hull came to different conclusions is not for us to speculate. Despite the reasons, we feel their vote was incorrect, and we mourn for those it will hurt.

Jobs in the schools system and throughout the town will be lost. The education of the young children of Hull will be diminished.

And all this because people refused to pay an average $240 more each year in their property taxes.

The effect of this tragedy may well spill over into Cohasset, as students transfer into neighboring school districts. Many parents are prepared to send their children elsewhere, at a far greater expense than the cost of an override, to find a worthy educational system. These concerned parents will be paying high tuition costs for an education that others denied their children.

Proponents of the override say they have not ended their fight. But this is an overwhelming defeat -one that has already begun to effect the innocent children of that commuity as they prepare to attend school away from their hometown.

A busy summer for student leader

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

You won't find Jim Reidy hanging around Sandy Beach this summer. In addition to his summer job and playing for the state all-star soccer team, Jim will be busy with his political career.

The 17 year-old Cohasset High School junior is vice president of the student council. In addition, he has been elected to the Student Advisory Council for Greater Boston, and was most recently named to the State Student Advisory Council.

As a member of the Greater Boston Council, he and CHS Student Council President Jay Staunton meet at the state house once a month to review and discuss legislation regarding students' rights.

Jim was one of only 12 members from the Greater Boston council elected to the State Student Advisory Council. The members meet in Quincy at the state Board of Education offices to read through and propose legislation for the protection of public school students.

To kick off his new assignment, Jim will attend a state convention in Northfield in August. He will be with 44 other Student Advisory Council members from throughout the state.

"What we'll do is divide into groups and different task forces. Student handbooks will be reviewed from various schools, and we'll listen to ideas about new legislation for student rights. I'll probably in the legislative task force, since that's what I'm really interested in," he said.

The idea of the conference, and of Jim's involvement in the state councils, is to bring ideas and programs back to Cohasset High.

"The results will be two-fold," according to John DeLorenzo, Cohasset High assistant principal and advisor to the student council. "Hopefully, the rest of the student council representatives will recognize the positive things Cohasset is doing. And Jim will be bringing back ideas that he shared."

DeLorenzo hopes that in a few weeks, Reildy will be able to teach other student council members what he learned at the convention, and the information will be diseminated throughout the school.

In the future, the advisor hopes to begin an out-of-state student council exchange program where Cohasset students can visit other schools. "They can see how leadership roles are filled in other schools by other students," he explained.

He praised Reidy, noting that the real honor was being selected for the state council by his peers. "That is really something," he said. "Jim exemplifies what Cohasset High School is. He's a fun person to work with."

Jim credits DeLorenzo with the revitalization of the Cohasset student council. It was at DeLorenzo's urging last year that the former council president decided to run for the Greater Boston council.

Jim was also honored to attend the Hugh O'Brien Youth organization at Boston College two weeks ago. Leadership qualities was the main topic of discussion during the conference which featured Soviet speaker Nicholas Daniloff.

"From these meetings, I want to be more involved with our school. I want to talk with students about the ideas I bring back. I want to get their comments about the programs I have learned about," Jim said. In the coming year, he hopes to bring in a speaker or two, or set up workshops for students on subjects of interest to them.

Jim Reidy

During the past year, members of the state student council have actively followed the legislation limiting student rights in school. Members of the state group are working toward passage of legislation that would grant the privilege of student/teacher confidentiality.

"The entire idea is for me to bring back new ideas and to share them with the students here," he said. "It's been very easy for me to suggest things to the student council and to Mr. DeLorenzo."

It also helps, Jim admitted, having a father who is actively involved in the local school system. His father, Russ, is a member of the school committee.

"I talk to him a lot about what's going on at the high school. I need to know what's going on with the school committee, and he lets me know," Jim explained.

In addition to his political pursuits, Jim was recently named to the Massachusetts soccer team. Twenty high school players from across the state were named, including a phenomenal trio of players from CHS. The other local players are brother Joel Reidy, and Ned Chase.

For four days this summer, the state team will compete against other New England teams at Penn State. Jim also plays once a week for a district soccer team.

On days when he isn't at a conference or out of state, Jim works for a local landscaping company.

"It keeps me busy," he said.

A look at the world of art on Cohasset Common

The bronze sculptures of Cohasset artist Richardson White were a featured exhibit at the art center during the summer festival.

CHS graduate wins Scituate 10K Classic

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Kerry Kirkendall, a recent 1988 Cohasset High graduate, walked away with first-place honors in last Sunday's Scituate 10k (6.2-mile) Road Race.

Kirkendall was the first female runner to cross the tape in the 17-and-under division with a time of 44:40. Despite a brisk wind and high humidity, she completely dominated the field, defeating runner-up Michelle Conlon of Scituate by almost nine minutes. After the final results were tabulated, Kirkendall found herself with the eighth-best overall time among the other women finishers.

"I was thrilled just to finish the race (starting and finishing at Gates Junior High). It was difficult to run because of the humid weather," said the Univ. of Lehigh-bound Kirkendall, who was appearing in her first Scituate classic.

She also mentioned that she did not adopt any special, pre-race strategy against the 538 entrants.

Last April, Kirkendall captured first place in the Cohasset's Road Race by the sea. As usual, she destroyed her opponents in the 17-and-under category.

Incidentally, she was not the only Kirkendall to perform in Sunday's race. Her father, Dick, and mother, Karen, also ran in the annual summer event which is sponsored by the North River Athletic Club. Dick finished 51st overall (fifth place in the 40-49 age division) in a time of 40:35. Karen, meanwhile, placed seventh (52:45) in the 40-49 group.

During the post-race ceremonies, both parents donned admiring smiles when their daughter received a medal and a bouquet of flowers.

"I like to run because it keeps me in shape for soccer," said the younger Kirkendall, who insisted that soccer is the only sport she will play in college.

"She is a super great kid," added her proud father.

The overall winners in the road race were Taunton's Frank Ritchie (30:08) and Martha Perkins (36:39) of Cambridge. In fact, both times were considered new course records.

Cohasset little league

The regular season is now completed, and as you read this, a champion is being decided through a playoff format involving all four teams.

The final week, however, was not without surprise. Translated, that means that the vastly improved Yankee team defeated the front-running Braves and deadlocked the standings. The Braves and the Mets both wound up with 11 wins and 3 losses, and one of these teams will be crowned champion this week.

To further clarify matters, the Mets had two wins over the Sox this week. Monday night they used a grandslam home run in the first by Andy Kamataris to crank up their offense and went on to record a 14-2 victory. Scotty Theriault notched the win. Thursday night, Kamataris' bat again provided a jump-start as the Mets batted around in the first and Andy singled twice in the inning, both times driving in runs. He picked up another rbi single in the second, and the Mets with Rolandellis working the mound with a big cushion cruised to a 21-2 victory.

The Braves meanwhile, lost to the Yankees 10-9 in extra innings Tuesday night in a stellar game. They gained revenge Friday with a 16-4 thumping of the Yanks.

And that fans, is where we stand after a season of fun and good competition.

Local scouts in camporee

The Old Colony Council Camporee attended by Troop 28 of Cohasset, was held at Stonehill College June 3, 4, and 5.

Scouts and cubs competed in ten events throughout the weekend. Among the events were: Flag History; Catch the Snapper, a game played with four scout staves tied together to cross a 15 foot river; First Aid, and a Four Man Ski Event, where four scouts raced 50 feet functioning as a team on "skis."

A popular exhibit for the scouts was the demonstration of Indian Dance and Culture performed by Hazel Edmonds and her family from Hull. The costumes used were all hand made and Mrs. Edmonds provided information including their years of practice. Members of the audience were invited to try their skill at Indian Dance.

bartering and buying for the length of the three-day festival.

Outstanding among the craft exhibits were the silver dollar-sized ceramic mask pins of Hingham artist Syma. The white clay pins depict various mythological deities and personalities (Athena, Hephaestus and Merlin to name but a few) and are trimmed or accented with 24K gold. The pins, artistic descendants of Roman death masks and ancient passport masks, are each signed and numbered originals and represent not only special characters but special qualities. The artist, a winning and intriguing personality, not only creates but teaches and "exhibits" all over Boston, where large scale versions of her masks are beginning to appear on building facades.

Another special exhibit, by Vince Gygax, was titled "Fuju Bonsai" — the essentially Japanese art of growing dwarfed, ornamentally shaped trees or shrubs in small shallow pots. This horticultural display seemed to capture the essence, the mystery and beauty, of the Far East in an extremely limited space.

The highlight of the weekend's activities was the awarding of ribbons and prizes in two separate art showings. The juried art show (with winners selected by a panel whose three members had distinguished credentials in the art world) was most noteworthy for the depth of talent displayed by the contributing artists.

Works were broadly grouped into six categories with prizes awarded in each medium. Tuong-Van Ngo's "Continuity," lacquered paint on wood, was particularly striking with villagers in various poses snaking across the painting from the upper left hand corner to the lower right hand corner. They seemed to leap right out of their idyllic world and into our reality.

The popular — and judges' — favorite was Jeremy Barnard's "Girls and Dolls," a black and white photograph in which a young girl sits in the middle of a line of toy figures. This piece, which jurors awarded the ribbon for "Best in Show" captured the innocence, naivete and air of total involvement which only children intently at play are capable of expressing.

In the Patriot Ledger sponsored "Awards for Arts in the Schools," South Shore students had the opportunity to display in a juried show what they are capable of doing today and what awesome artistic potential they possess for tomorrow.

Selected as "Best of Show" was Quincy H.S. 12th grader Luen Y. Wan's portrait of a young girl who casually stares out at viewers from her canvas world.

Rockland's student population made an incredibly strong showing among top prize winners in several categories. Natisha Walton (Rockland H.S.-Grade 10) won first place in color drawings with her rendition of jars of jelly beans and lollipops sitting atop a mirrored table top. Dave Butkiewicz, an 11th grade student at Rockland H.S. won first place in black & white drawings with his drawing of the interior and contents of an ordinary locker.

An honorable mention went to 11th grader Lisa Katilus of Holbrook Jr.-Sr. High School for her fluid and graceful black wire ballerina. Jeremiah Stevenson, a fifth grader at Cohasset's Deer Hill School, won first place in the 3-D, Grades 4-6 category with his clay boxers captured in the heat of battle.

When all was said and done, the weekend's events, which combined the established artists, performers and craftspeople of today with the promising talents of tomorrow, the students had something to offer everyone.

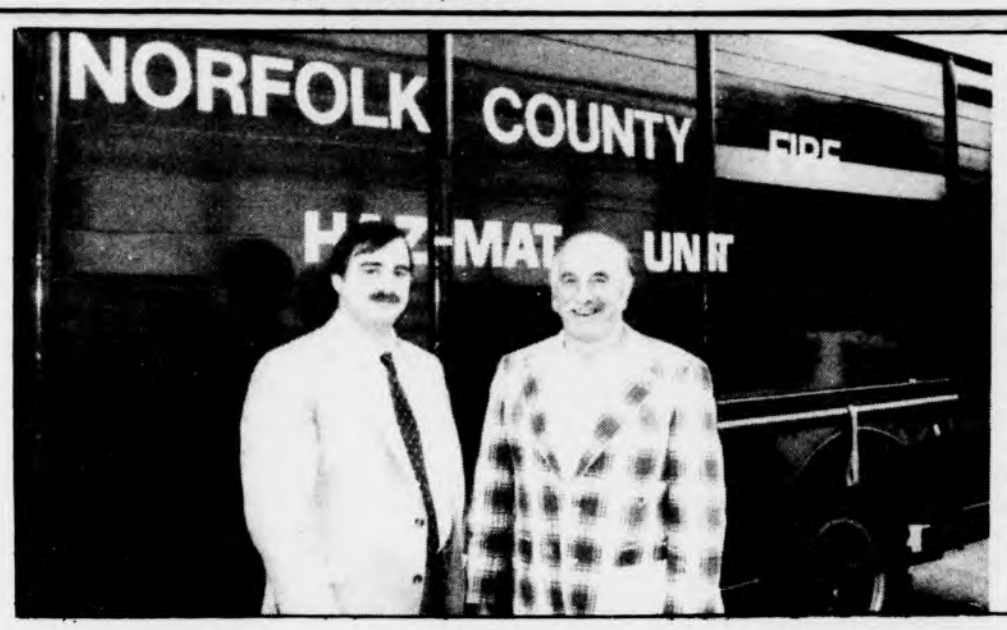
Norfolk County hazardous accident equipment

The Norfolk County Fire Chiefs maintain a specially-equipped vehicle to be made available to area towns in the event of a hazardous material accident.

The County of Norfolk has purchased for the local fire chiefs a supply of specialized equipment — costing a total of $40,000 — including protective clothing, breathing apparatus, testing equipment, spill-containment equipment, chemical neutralizers and training aids and equipment.

At its June meeting, the Norfolk County Advisory Board — comprised of one selectman from each town and the Mayor of Quincy — participated in a ceremonial presentation of the hazardous materials equipment to representatives of the area fire chiefs. Towns represented at this June meeting included Canton, Cohasset, Franklin, Holbrook, Millis, Milton, Needham, Quincy, Sharon, Stoughton, Wellesley, Westwood, Weymouth and Wrentham.



Cohasset selectman and Norfolk County advisory board delegate Rocco Langelle (r) stands alongside Fire Chief Daniel Brock in front of the new County Hazardous Accident Response vehicle.

Eight boaters protest town harbor decision

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Eight residents who lost their moorings in Cohasset Harbor have issued a strong protest and are appealing that verdict to the state.

"Total chaos" will reign in the harbor, their attorney claimed, if the boats are removed from the harbor only to have the state reverse selectmen's June 13 decision.

The longtime mooring holders have asked that the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) allow them to remain in the harbor until the matter is settled.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said until the matter is resolved and the residents' appeal period has been exhausted, he has advised the harbormaster to allow the eight boaters to remain in the harbor.

Atty. Edward Lawson has filed an appeal to the Waterways Regulatory Program of the DEQE, stating that selectmen's decision last month to kick several residents off their moorings for late fee payments is "patently illegal." He is representing Richard J. Guilfoyle, Noel Ripley, Henry Dormitzer, Archie Rasmussen, Paul E. Carlson, Donald S. Clark, Paul Sheerin and Bill Henry.

They have held moorings in Cohasset Harbor from eight to 29 years.

In a letter to selectmen, Atty. Lawson urged the town officials to reverse their June 13 decision "and issue permits to the individuals I represent." At that meeting, selectmen voted to take the names of 58 residents off the mooring list, while 18 mooring holders actually lost their moorings for late fee payments.

The problem was caused by a conflicting set of town bylaws and harbormaster regulations. According to the town bylaw passed in 1985, fees for moorings in Cohasset Harbor must be paid annually to the harbormaster by April 1.

But in 1971, the (former) harbormaster enacted regulations which required fee payment on or before June 1 of each year. Atty. Lawson and his clients have argued that since 1971, "the town has consistently followed the Harbormaster's regulation."

He also noted in his letter to DEQE that in past years, the former harbormaster gave written notice that the fee was due and a second and final written notice stated the fee must be paid by June 30 "as provided in the regulations."

Yacht club hosts Sullivan Regatta

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

One of the biggest local sailing events of the year will take place Saturday and Sunday, July 9 and 10, as the Cohasset Yacht Club hosts the fifth annual Sullivan Regatta.

About 25 participants from yacht clubs in Gloucester, Hingham, Hull, South Boston, and Cohasset are expected to race their 210s, which are 30-foot, one design racing sail boats.

"It's one of the fastest, one-design sail boats in the world," said Thomas Hamilton, an organizer of this week-end's event. He will also participate.

"There are four or five important regattas every year, and this is designated as one of them," he said.

The event is named after Richard Sullivan, 75, a longtime Cohasset resident who is considered to be a founding father of the popular racing fleet.

Past national champion, Sullivan will participate this week-end, according to Hamilton.

An attorney in Hingham, Sullivan has lived on King St. since April, 1948.

But it was as a youth growing up in Quincy that his interest in sailing began.

In 1938, he became a member of the Squantum Yacht Club where he moored a 16-foot Winabout and later owned an Indian racer.

But through the years, he set his sights on Cohasset Harbor, a popular racing locale.

After living in Detroit, Sullivan moved back east to Cohasset and bought his first 210 from a Scituate man in 1947.

It was the first of about six 210s that he has since owned.

"The regatta honors Richard Sullivan, an active 210 sailor," said Hamilton.

Cohasset senior athletes honored

Their philosophy on exercise: "You might not live a day longer, but you'll enjoy living much more."

That's the consensus of Cohasset's four medal-winning Senior Olympians - athletes over the age of 60 who competed this past spring against hundreds of their peers.

Senior Center director Kathy Bryanton explained, "It's a great opportunity for them to realize that they can do it, too. No great skills are needed. But it creates great enthusiasm and competition among all the competitors."

Jack Hubbard, 63, won a gold medal in the half-mile race-walk; a gold in the half-mile run and a gold medal in the running broad jump.

Gerard Keating, 68, was awarded a bronze medal for his efforts in the three-mile race-walk.

Ann Leonard, 73, participating in her sixth Senior Olympics competition, won a gold meal for the three-mile walk.

And newcomer Laura Connors, also 73, won a silver medal in the three-mile walk.

Admittedly, they are not newcomers to exercise. All four Olympians have exercised on their own and at the senior center for years before they decided to compete.

Jack has been a rower for many years, alternating his love of rowing with running on a daily basis. In fact, Jack wanted to emphasize, he will be participating in the first annual Minot's Light Round About on Sept. 10. Using Alden rowing shells, about 25 competitors will leave Sandy Beach for a trip around the lighthouse and

Health educator begins work on doctoral thesis

"I hope I can make a contribution," said Michael Gill, Cohasset's health education coordinator since 1980, who is beginning work this summer on his doctoral dissertation of AIDS (Aquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) and the public schools.

"AIDS is so current," said Gill of the disease which the president called "Public Enemy Number One."

"I've really got to do extensive research before I go and write the dissertation."

Gill will be doing his research for at least the next six months. He has taken a sabbatical from his job from September until the end of January.

This summer he is managing Cohasset's swim center.

His degree will be from Boston University.

Gill, 34, of Marshfield, already has a bachelor's degree in health education from U. Mass-Boston and a master's degree from Bridgewater State College.

"I entered the doctoral program years ago," said Gill. "It was an interest of mine.

"I already did the course work and completed the exams.

"Now it's time to finish the research part.

"I need a good chunk of time to do the research."

Gill said he is both excited and apprehensive about the project.

"It's a lot of work," he said. "And it's a financial strain as well.

"But it's something that I want."

Gill said he is not sure yet how he will tackle the project.

"I'll see what needs to be done, what's missing in the research on the educational aspects.

"The dissertation has got to be a major contribution to the field in order to be accepted.

"The research alone will have an impact on my ability as a professional, and in other areas as well," he said.

He said he will investigate what is being done in schools, and the roles that should be played by educators — health educators and educators in general.

"Hopefully, it will be meaningfull research," he said.

Gill said he does not know of any cases of AIDS in Cohasset.

AIDS education has started with target groups of school students, and each year the program will be

Beach barrier

The Cohasset VFW Post 9146 constructed a 200-foot swimming barrier at Sandy Beach just in time for the warm weather and summer crowds.

Project manager Austin Ahearn, a member of the VFW post, thought of the idea while he was watching swimmers at the beach. The barrier is used to separate swimmers from the waters used by small motor boats and other crafts.

A previous barrier, consisting of four rubber balloons in the water, was stolen a few years ago.

Through donations of materials and manpower, the members of the local VFW post worked a total of 75 hours constructing the barrier.

Harold Litchfield, Steve Osborne and Rocco and Peter Laugelle donated most of the material for the barrier. The mooring for the red float consists of four tires filled with cement which are anchored to a six-foot post. Local lobsterman Herb Jason and his grandson, John Small, helped to position the mooring and floats.

VFW members expect the barrier to endure several seasons.

A fiery morning

It was a busy Wednesday morning for the Cohasset Fire Department as they responded to three fires within an hour. Two of the fires are related, fire officials believe. All are under investigation as suspicious.

For the second time in several weeks, fire broke out at Wheelwright Farms condominiums on Beechwood Street in the Beechwood area of town.

At 1 a.m. Wednesday, the fire department responded to a truck fire at the condominium complex. The pick-up truck which was used at the construction site, was empty at the time of the fire.

Several weeks ago, a trailer used at the construction site was set on fire. The condominiums are owned by John Rudolph of Weymouth.

According to Fire Chief Daniel Brock, the state fire marshall's office found no cause for the trailer blaze, but labeled the fire suspicious.

At 1:07 a.m. Wednesday, firefighters responded to a school bus fire at the Pape property on King Street.

Although no cause has been found for the blaze, Chief Brock said this fire does seem to be connected with the others. There was damage to one seat in the bus which is owned by the Cohasset school system.

And at 1:45 a.m., the fire department again responded to a fire at Wheelwright Farms. A two-bedroom unoccupied condominium unit was destroyed in the blaze. The unit was under contract to be sold.

The housing unit was about 95 percent complete, Chief Brock said, noting that the fire apparently began in the basement and spread to the roof of the building.

Chief Brock said the condo was severely damaged, but he declined to give a dollar estimate.

"At this point," he explained, "it appears the three fires at Wheelwright Farms are connected. Whether it is vandalism or an accident is what the state fire marshall will determine."

At 5 a.m. the same morning, the Cohasset Fire Department responded to a call for mutual aid from Scituate. Cohasset covered a Scituate station during an early morning blaze in the Humarock section of that community.

Advisors prepare for the future

With the reserve fund for the previous fiscal year depleted, a cautious advisory committee is already focusing on the budget picture for next year.

By having budgets prepared early, the advisory committee will be able to analyze the fiscal situation, and predict if adjustments must be made or if an override of Proposition 2 1/2 is needed.

Chairman Jane Goedecke said each town department has been asked to submit its long-range budget forecasts including future capital expenditure requests.

Actual town budgets will have to be submitted by November, she explained. But this year, each department will submit two budgets. One budget will detail the items the department needs to function for the upcoming year. The second budget will include a long-range list of items and capital needs for the department "assuming there will be no override and that this is the level we'll have to live with," she explained.

"This way, we can let the town know what their options are early on," the chairman said.

But Goedecke also noted, "having the override this year helped the situation considerably."

She added, because of the high rise in some fixed costs, there may actually be a net reduction for some town departments next year. Insurance rates are expected to climb 25 percent in the next three years, according to Executive Secretary Donald Andrew, she noted. And there is a six percent salary increase in the new teacher contract, while the police and fire contracts have yet to be settled.

With a slowdown in new growth, Goedecke said local revenue will likely be lower than in past years. But armed with that information, department heads will know how much can be contained in their budgets based on the revenue projections.

Boaters protest harbor ruling . . .

According to the attorney, "this procedure was followed even after the by-law was amended in 1985 to require payment by April 1."

But when they received notification of payment fees due this year, "the appellants assumed that the regulation in effect since 1971 was being followed and that although the fee was due on June 1, they had until July 1 to pay the fee. The appelants failed to pay the fee by June 1."

At their June 13 meeting, selectmen voted to follow advice from town counsel. Based on upon Atty. Henderson's written opinion, selectmen decided the town bylaw passed in 1985, and not the harbormaster regulations, took precedence in this case.

June 24, Harbormaster Steven Osborne issued a letter to the delinquent mooring holders stating, "as a result of your failure to pay (for the mooring) on a timely basis, I am forfeiting your moorings and I hereby order the removal of your boat from the harbor."

Atty. Henderson said under the provision of state law, the mooring holders have 30 days after June 24 to appeal Osborne's decision.

"It was also my opinion to the harbormaster that until that appeal time has expired, that no action be taken against the mooring holders," he said, noting that no boats have yet to be removed from the harbor.

The town counsel explained that only after they have exhausted their appeal to DEQE will those residents be allowed to "seek legal remedy" against the town.

In his June 30 letter to selectmen, Atty. Lawson stated that if the mooring holders are not advised by July 8 that they will be issued permits after payment of fees, "I have been directed to take whatever legal action is necessary to secure the payments. You should be aware that any court action will seek compensatory and punitive damages as well as attorney's fees and costs against the town and you as individuals."

In the letter written to DEQE, Atty. Lawson stated, "If the appellants' moorings are removed pending a decision, they will have no place to moor their boats. On the other hand, maintaining the staus quo will have no effect upon the town. Moreover, the appellants' rights should take precedence over those of individuals on the mooring permit waiting list, who had no right to expect a mooring in 1988. Finally, public interest considerations weigh in favor of the appellants because total chaos will result if the town removes the appellants' moorings and grants permits to other individuals only to have DEQE reverse the town."

At selectmen's June 13 meeting, several Cohasset boaters protested their removal for late fee payments. They claimed that in the past, the former harbormaster would individually contact them if payments were late and their mooring was in danger of forefeiture. No such measures were taken this year, they said.

Other boaters who paid their fees on time failed to sympathize with the 85 late fee payers, and asked that selectmen not treat them differently than any other mooring holder.

Sullivan 210 Regatta . . .

It will include a series of three races with trophies to the first, second and third place finishers in the seven to 10 mile course in Massachusetts Bay.

The first is scheduled for Saturday at 11 a.m., second, 2:30 p.m., and third, Sunday at 11 a.m.

"An award ceremony will be held at the yacht club Sunday about 3 p.m.," said Hamilton.

In addition to the other awards, a trophy of a fully rigged model of a 210 will go to the captain of the overall winner, according to Hamilton.

Last year's winner was Douglas MacGregor of the Hingham Yacht Club, he said.

Most of the local participants have been gearing up for the event by racing for the past month, explained Hamilton.

"We have championship races from our own local club," he said.

"They are held every Saturday and holiday during June, July and August.

"The winner is determined and receives the club championship for the year.

"It's a lot of fun," he said, "It's a great way to spend a summer."

Most people spend years perfecting their sailing, according to Hamilton, who has been involved in racing 210s for about 12 years.

Many started in college, Hamilton said.

Anyone interested in participating in this week-end's regatta can sign up at the yacht club Saturday about 8:30 a.m., he said.

Mrs. Elizabeth O'Connell is in charge of registration.

Diarmuid O'Connell is fleet captain, Hamilton said.

If the club could put in a request for perfect sailing weather, Saturday and Sunday, it would be for sunshine and a south east breeze from 10 to 12 knots, according to Hamilton.

Spectators can watch the races from Sandy Beach or along the coastline, he said.

"People enjoy watching it," Hamilton said.

Once the Sullivan Regatta is over, the excitement for 210 racers won't be over for the summer, according to Hamilton.

"The International 210 National Championships will be held in Cohasset Aug. 20 to 23, with participants from all over the country," he said.

"We hope to have well over 30 participants," Hamilton said.

"That will be exciting."

Senior athletes honored . . .

back.

"I like to do most anything, as long as I keep active," the lean athlete noted.

Ann is the veteran competitor in the group. A longtime member and leader of the Cohasset senior center walking group, the Cohasset Strutters, Ann has loudly proclaimed the benefits of a brisk walk.

"I had high blood pressure, and walking has definitely helped that," she said. "I always tell people, instead of just sitting down in rocking chair and let life pass you by, get out and walk. It's the easiest thing to do. By now, if I don't walk every day, I really miss it. I don't know what to do with myself.

"I see so many people now walking around, - even as early as six in the morning. That's great! Like the motto for the Executive Office of Elder Affairs - keep moving! "

The quartet heartily agreed that moderate exercise at their age has helped them lead more active, satsifying lives. "Exercise even helps your appetite. It helps your outlook on life. All your bodily functions are improved with exercise," Jack continued.

Ann has been leading her senior center walking group for two years. She participates three times a week, bringing the group to various out-of-town locations particularly in the warm weather.

Recently, the groups have travelled to the Cape, Nantasket Beach and in World's End in Hingham. No one is forced to walk at high speeds.

"The purpose is to keep moving," Ann explained. "But we have different levels of walkers. Anyone who can walk and enjoys it, should do it."

With a smile, she quickly added, "but there's no sense in strolling."

Laura learned to play tennis after she retired in 1982. "It gets me in shape," she said, noting that she plays once a week.

Three years ago, she began walking with the senior center Strollers and now completes three miles. "I began at my own pace," she noted. "I was slower when I first began, but I figured I better start doing something."

Together with Ann, she recently participated in Boston's Walk for Hunger. Pledges were obtained from various friends and neighbors before the pair took off for Boston on a cool, rainy day this spring.

Gerard likes his independence. he walks a mile every morning at 7:30 and often takes a three-mile jaunt later in the day. He figures it takes him 13 minutes a mile. If walking for health, he explained, you should be walking at a maximum capacity for at least 20 minutes. Maximum capacity is calculated by taking the figure 220 and subtracting your age. You multiply that figure by 45 percent and that is the rate you should maintain for maximum benefit.

He also begins each morning with exercises. All this, despite suffering a stroke in 1979 and heart bypass surgery in 1983.

"One thing my doctors told me - they tell everyone - walk!" he explained. "It's the solution to so many health problems."

Jack added, "It makes you more limber. A lot of seniors get stiff and sedentary. Walking and exercise help get the blood flowing, and it makes you feel better." Jack practices what he preaches. he is an avid exerciser- preferring low impact aerobics for his daily routine.

The foursome agreed they were never stay-at-home types. They have always preferred skiing or competitive sports to occupy their leisure time rather than taking a seat in front of a television.

The Cohasset Strutters invite all seniors to walk with them Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays at 9 a.m. They meet at the Senior Center, 3 North Main Street.

Gerard explained that the senior population is increasing in Cohasset every year. There are 1,300 people over 60 years of age living in Cohasset. There are 47 people over the age of 90, he explained.

The age group of 89 years and over is the largest growing segment of this town's population, he added.

"A lot of these people are trying to stay active," he said. "And at the senior center, that's our goal.

Gerard quietly noted that his personal goal is to defeat his fiercest competitor at the Senior Olympics - a gentleman 85 years old who has consistently won the gold medal in the three-mile walk.

"And he just starting walking when he was 81!" his opponent exclaimed.

Advisors approve budget transfers

fund transfer was given to Harbormaster Steve Osborne to cover the purchase of a $3,500 engine for the harbor patrol boat.

The engine on the patrol boat quit and the harbormaster requested a replacement before the July 4th holiday crunch. The request was made and approved via telephone, Goedecke said. The board formally voted on the reserve fund request at their Tuesday night meeting.

Osborne had requested a larger, more efficient engine for the boat in this current budget. But the $6,500 request was denied, Goedecke and advisory committee member Arne Gjesteby agreed. "Steve said he told us the engine was dying back then, but I remember him telling us he wanted a larger horsepower, a more efficient engine," she noted.

The $3,500 purchase was approved by the advisory committee and was deducted from this year's reserve fund total of $120,000.

The remaining $2,010 in this year's reserve fund was depleted after the advisory committee approved several transfer requests Tuesday night.

Although the planning board requested $5,500 for engineering services, only $1,495 was left in last year's account. The remaining portion of the money owed for engineering services rendered to the planning board must be appropriated at a special town meeting.

As of July 1, all money designated for engineering services required by the planning board is being placed in a separate account, Goedecke explained. No monies can be extracted from the town's general fund to cover such expenses.

The advisory committee also approved a $168 transfer for the animal control officer's budget for veterinarian services; $27.90 to process parking tickets; and $19.47 for interest penalty for late payments to the Division of Unemployment Security.

around town

□ Stacie A. Buckley, daughter of Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Dennis F. Buckley of Newport News, VA, formerly of Cohasset, graduated from Menchville High School in Newport News, on June 19, 1988. Also there for the graduation were her grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Leonard J. Reidy of Weymouth; her godmother, Ms. Jane Smith also of Weymouth; her uncle, Paul Reidy from West Palm Beach, FL; and, her great uncle, Neil O'Brien of Cohasset and Cape Coral, FL and an aunt, Pauline Keating also of Cohasset. Stacie will be attending Christopher Newport College, located in Virginia.

□ The Cohasset VFW Post 9146 has designed, built and installed some warning markers to help keep boaters at a proper distance from swimmers. The work was done as a community need. This project is one of the many requirements of the VFW National Programs in community involvement. A total of 75 hours was spent in building the project and Post 9146 would like to thank Rocco Laugelle, Peter Laugelle, Harold Litchfield, Steve Osborne, Austin Ahearn, and other members of the Post in obtaining materials for the project. Also the Post thanks Cohasset Hardware for the luminous paint and Herb Jason and John Small for the use of their lobsterboat in placing of moorings and the floats in position.

□ John Repogle graduated June 12 of this year, from Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H. The whole family was on hand for the grand event. John was awarded the Dean's Award for service to his college (that was given on Class Day.) Had there been such an award at CHS he would have received that here too, he's that kind of wonderful guy. After a huge dinner party held for John and all of his friends, he and three of his buddies began their tour of the western half of the country. He called from the Grand Canyon last week, and got to speak to his brother, Jamie. Jamie, as you might remember from reading Around Town last summer, took the same route; thus, they sure do have a lot to chat about, and a lot of notes to compare. Fill us in when you get home, John.

□ The residents around Cohasset Harbor say it won't be the same again, now that Eric has gone...Eric Theriault is the last of the paperboys to hand deliver The Boston Globe in the area, and last weekend was his final time. Eric was the paperboy for three years, and everyone is unhappy that he's given the route up...everyone but Eric that is!! Eric gets a $5,000 Scholarship from The Boston Globe, which they award to boys that have done their routes for three or more years. And, he gets to sleep a little longer in the morning! He will be dreaming of colleges in his sleep, we'll bet. (He has a good jump on tuition with that scholarship!) Eric has another special day this week, his sixteenth birthday. Have a happy day, Eric.

□ Joseph O'Rourke was recently presented a service award by Milton Hospital for 15 years of dedication to the hospital and its patients. Congratulations.

□ On Tuesday, June 28th, a luncheon was held at the home of Andrea Merrill on King Street. It was an expression of appreciation to the volunteers of the Social Service league. As you know, these gals do such good work at the Consignment Shop, and work long and hard hours. Sixty people attended, and a great time was had by all.

□ Hats off to Melinda Johansen, one of eighteen girls to make the all-star team for the Plymouth District in the twelve and under division. There were 12 towns involved in this, so we can certainly see that Melinda is a real soccer player.

□ Happy 24th birthday to Kimmie, in Hawaii.

□ Congratulations to Kerry Kirkendall, who "walked away" with a first place in last Sunday's Scituate 6.2 mile Road Race. Kerry was nine minutes ahead of the second place finisher, and this was her first appearance in the race. Last year she finished first in the Cohasset Road Race By the Sea. You can be sure that her medal is in a place of honor, and at least part of the bouquet is pressed in one of her books. We are proud of you Kerry.

□ Saw Floyd Hardwick this weekend, and he reports that he is in great shape to go into his senior year at BU. Everyone remembers Floyd as a superstar in football, and he will surely receive lots of ink for his abilities this fall...watch for him.

Historical Society presents historical site tour

The Scituate Historical Society offers a tour of the six historical sites in Scituate, July 10 and Sept. 11 from 1-5 p.m.

A map and brochure will be available at each site, which include the Old Scituate Lighthouse at Scituate Harbor, the Cudworth House and barn and the Lawson Tower near Scituate Common, the Mann House Museum on Greenfield Lane, and the Stockbridge Mill and the Old Oaken Bucket Homestead and Museum in Greenbush. (Rte 123 and 3A)

The Old Scituate Lighthouse for the first time in many years has new tenants whose enthusiasm for their unusual home is appreciated by visitors who see the Lightkeeper's cottage and then climb the tower for wonderful vistas of Scituate Harbor.

The Cudworth House and barn are classic examples of Colonial architecture and are furnished accordingly. An old working loom fills one little ell of the house and the material for the curtains was woven on it.

The Lawson Tower, long a landmark for sailors and landlubbers alike, is a long climb but offers a view and bells at the top. These bells are played on special occasions. The tower was Tom Lawson's answers to beautifying an ugly but necessary water reserve tower in his days as owner of Dreamwold.

The Mann House was the home of generations of the Mann family and the continuity of this family in this spot is evident throughout the house in its decor.

The Old Oaken Bucket Homestead — the home of Samuel Woodworth composer of the poem the Old Oaken Bucket will be open for tours of both the house and the museum.

The house has been done over completely including a kitchen of handmade pine cabinets. The Justic Cushing one-horse shay is in the barn.

A short distance away from the Old Oaken Bucket near Greenbush Pond is the Old Stockbridge Mill. This mill still grinds corn as it did in earliest times. If there is not a water ban, it is expected that the Mill will run for grinding demonstration from 2-4 p.m.

Consider the little ones

School is out and children are out having a good time — often in or along the streets.

The Massachusetts chapter of the American Automobile Association in Rockland reminds drivers to be extra careful during the summer, when roads are more crowded with cars, kids and pets.

The AAA urges caution around playgrounds, swimming pools, tennis courts, and fast food stores, where youngsters tend to congregate. Cohasset motorists should pay special attention around beaches. From Minot to Hull all summer long there will be wet, inattentive little bodies apt to dart unpredictably into the street.

Motorists should also be aware of bicylists, joggers, skateboarders and the like.

Parents and recreation instructors can also help by telling children not to assume that every driver can see them, or guess their next move. Children should be told to stay as far out of the road as possible, using streets with sidewalks, if available, when going to the beach or ballfield.

They should also remember to bicycle with the traffic and stay in single file. Bikes on both sides of the street are particularly annoying and dangerous for drivers.

Stranger danger

The Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children also has suggestions for a safe summer.

Children should memorize their telephone numbers and addresses and if old enough, should learn at least one parent's workplace and telephone number.

Hats or tee-shirts should not be labelled with the child's name. According to the society, "Molesters may call them by name, pretending to be a family friend."

Of course, children should never, under any circumstances, accept food or a ride from someone they do not know.

At the zoo, museum, amusement park, hotel lobby or other public place, children should be taught to always hold someone's hand, preferably an adult's.

The buddy system works well at the beach, too. No one should swim unless there is a lifeguard or other adult watching from the beach, and non-swimming children should not be left unattended on the shore.

Small children should not be left alone in a closed park, which could cause suffocation, just as it could with a pet. On the other hand, children in unattended open cars could be abducted, the MSPCC says.

The group also advises small children to wear a hat while in the sun to prevent sunburn (which is more serious in children than adults) and to prevent glare and heat exhaustion.

Finally, the society suggests that if a child's reaction to an insect bite is unusual, seek medical attention.

While we all like to think that Cohasset is a safe, friendly community, caution is advisable. Terrible things have happened in other nice places, too. Unfortunately, they can happen here.

Chris Abbruzzese unties his boat to take his daughter Kelsey and son, Jesse, for a ride.

Letters

Return grave plaque

To the Editor:

This letter is addressed to the person that removed a plaque from my son's grave at Woodside Cemetery in Cohasset. The plaque is a Lion's Club Memorial with my son's name, Joseph Palimeri, on it. The area has been searched by Mr. Laugelle, my mother, and myself, and we were unable to find it. It was noticed missing on Thursday, June 16.

Joe's plaque could be of no use to anyone but his family. It was extremely painful to find it gone. When a child dies the best one can hope for is to have connections with what that child was, as there is no hope for the future of what that child was to become. All a person has to do is walk among the headstones at Woodside Cemetery, and they will know that there are a number of us that tend the graves of our children. Please try to imagine that pain, and return our plaque to where it belongs.

Sincerely,
Kathaleen Palimeri

North River Players

The North River Community Players held its annual meeting at the North River Community Club in Norwell for the annual election of officers and to discuss plans for the coming year.

The following board of directors was voted into office: Joe McAlarney of Weymouth, president; Peg Traniello of Plympton, vice president; Rose Duggan of Weymouth, treasurer; Janice Daley of North Quincy, secretary; and Jeff Rutledge of Kingston, John Amore of Marshfield, Terry Kelly of Marshfield, Janet DiBona of Weymouth and Susan Darnell of Norwell as board members.

John Senk of Weymouth will direct the group's first production of the season, which is scheduled for presentation in October. Several plays are under consideration, and final selection will be made and auditions announced in the near future.

The members voted to undertake several extensive projects during the winter for the renovation and improvement of their playhouse.

Photography exhibit

A nature photography exhibit entitled "Landscapes and Birds" will be on display for the month of July at the Audubon Sanctuary headquarters, 2000 Main St., Marshfield.

If you've always wanted to see the exotic birds found in the Everglades, this is the opportunity, and you don't have to leave the South Shore!

Sandy and Don Selesky have traveled around New England and have made their way to the Rockies and Florida to capture their subjects on film, revealing quite a variety of birdlife and wildlife.

The office is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and Saturday mornings.

Thanks for help

To the Editor:

To all the Fire Department personnel and Paramedic team who came to our aid June 28th. And a very special thanks to Bob Byrnes and his "crew" (Michael, Sam, Joe, Janice and Joe) and James McNamara. I couldn't have made it through that day without your help and support.

Most Sincerely,
Nancy G. Ross and family

Minot's Light replica to honor Cohasset's past

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"We're trying to preserve the flavor of Cohasset, and certainly this is part of it," said Noel Ripley, chairman of the historical commission which is planning a 25-foot replica of a portion of historic Minot's Light on Government Island.

The project will take two to three years, said Ripley, and will cost about $25,000.

"People have a great reverence for Cohasset Common, but the harbor is like a step-child," he said.

"We're trying to get people to appreciate the harbor a little more."

The project, the largest undertaken by the commission, will feature a replica of the upper portion of the 128-year old lighthouse about as high as a small house.

It will use Quincy granite blocks taken from the top of the 114-foot tower last summer and the original rotating mechanism from the lantern.

The Coast Guard, which is repairing the lighthouse, agreed to donate the 40 blocks. It will replace them in the lighthouse with new blocks.

"The stones are government property," said Ripley.

"The Coast Guard was concerned that they not be thrown away, but used for the proper purpose.

"I think they are happy that this project is going on."

"In its application to the coast guard, the commission wrote, "We feel these should be preserved in the same way and for the same reason that the templates for the light, located on Government Island, were uncovered and restored.

"They are part of our history — part of the history of the sea — part of the history of the New England Coast — part of the history of Cohasset.

"We feel they should be preserved and returned to their place of birth. Returned to the location where a few able and dedicated stone cutters — artisans in their own right — chipped, carved, formed, honed, sanded pieces of quarried granite into unique, special pieces of a lighthouse that was, and is, to live for centuries."

Some of the 2,000 to 3,000 pound blocks are already at Government Island where they were transported by helicopter from the lighthouse.

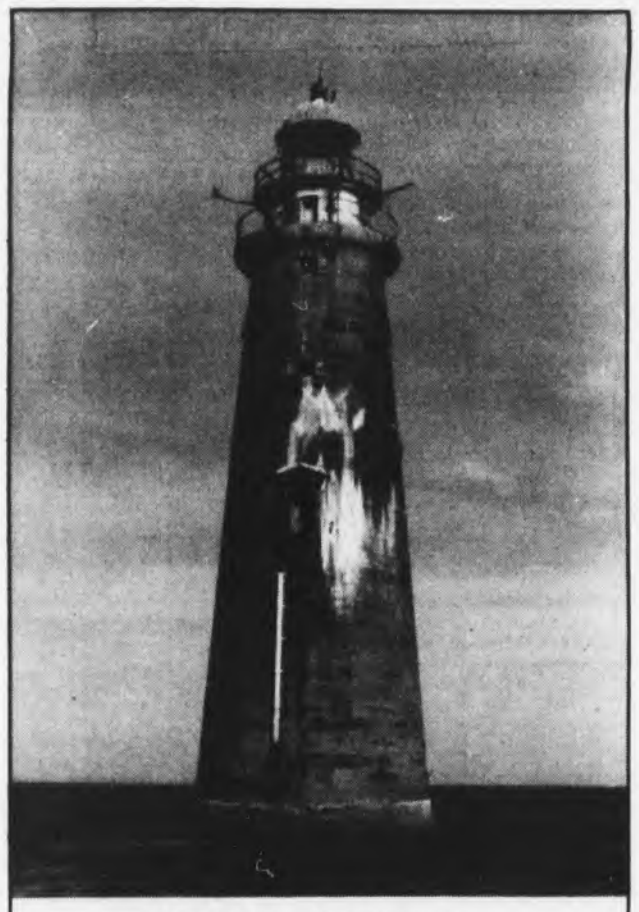
Others are in New Hampshire where their shape is being copied so that the new blocks will fit at the lighthouse.

Using a small crane with 3,200 pound lifting capacity, the old blocks will be positioned on the foundation of a building, since demolished, that housed the drawings and tools of the stonecutters, the men who built Minot's Light.

The foundation was built with a ramp, so it will have access for the handicapped, noted Riley.

The stonework will be supervised by Harry Litchfield, of Cohasset's Highway Department, and Tony Sestito, Ripley said.

Cracks and chips in the blocks will be filled with cement.



Minot's Ledge Lighthouse

Various pieces of the light rotating mechanism will be installed in the center of the watchroom.

Then the roof and top of the light will be reproduced with the help of architects and historians so that the completed lighthouse watchroom will be as similar as possible to the original.

"It all fits in with Captain's Walk," said Ripley of the historical commission's walking tour which encompasses the permimeter of the town's harbor.

The tour, developed a few years ago, illustrates by the use of signs and maps, the history of Cohasset's harbor during the era in which Cohasset was a fishing and mercantile port, and a center of shipbuilding.

It begins at Government Island.

Other projects by the commission, founded about 15 years ago by Ripley, have included rebuilding the town clock and dial and renovating the lighthouse keeper's office.

"We help preserve those things that are worthwhile in the Town of Cohasset," said Ripley.

"We have no powers," he said, "We can't say not to tear something down.

"But we encourage historic preservation.

"We should really give more support to historic preservation, not that everything should be worshipped.

"I don't think everything should be saved.

"But some things should, like the lighthouse."

Ripley, who was born in Cohasset and lives with his family in a house built in 1695, noted that the lighthouse, built over five summers from 1855 to 1860, has an interesting history.

"It was the creme de la creme when it was built," he said.

According to The North Scituate Beach Association Chronicle, "The light on the first Minot Lighthouse went out forever in the tempestuous night of April 16, 1851.

"Work on the present granite shaft was begun at sunrise Sunday, July 1, 1855.

"A lighthouse of stone had never before been built under such conditions as existed at Minot Ledge.

" . . . The peculiar difficulty here was that only a very small part of the top of the ledge was exposed except at low water and most of the time the greater part of the surface was covered several feet deep.

" . . . The first work, after removing from the ledge the stumps of the old piling, was to reduce the irregular surface of the rock to a series of levels.

"A participant in this preparatory work thus wrote: 'We would watch the tide from the cove, and just as soon as the ebb had reached the proper stage, we would start out with it, and at the moment a square yard of ledge was bare of water, out would jump a stone cutter and begin work. Soon another would follow, and as fast as they had elbow room others still.

" . . . Minot Ledge Lighthouse was first constructed not on Minot Ledge but at Government Island in Cohasset, which for many months must have presented a busy scene.

"Here stone sheds were erected and two perfectly level circular pavements of granite were laid, the larger pavement 30 feet in diameter, the other slightly smaller.

"On these pavements, the stones of the lighthouse were perfectly adjusted to each other before they were sent out from shore."

On Saturday, Oct. 2, 1858, ceremonies were held for the laying of the cornerstone.

Capt. Barton S. Alexander of the U.S. Engineer Corps., superintendent in charge of the construction, welcomed the assembled guests who included the mayor of Boston.

Capt. Alexander said, "At first the men were nervous with the natural fear incident to their seemingly dangerous situation, but no accident ever befalling any of their number, and every precaution being taken for their safety, as they saw, this fear was soon dispelled, and they worked as cheerily as if on dry land; and you now see before you, gentlemen, the results of the labors of as fine a body of workmen as it has ever been my fortune to meet with."

" . . . On Sept. 15, 1860, just in time for the autumnal evaluated, he said.

"We'll find out how the community feels. Decisions will be made in conjunction with parents," said Gill.

The Parents Health Education Committee has a great deal of input, he said.

"They're basically a support group," he explained. "They make recommendations, not policy."

This year, an Adolescent Development Program was presented to fourth, fifth and sixth graders, he said.

"It included human reproduction, puberty, and the different changes during puberty," said Gill.

"That needs to be completed before the seventh grade AIDS education because they have to have a basic knowledge of human reproduction."

Seventh graders went through a four unit AIDS education program this spring and it was "highly successful," according to Gill.

"We provide a parent orientation meeting beforehand," he said.

Gill sees his job as coordinator of programs which promote lifelong physical, emotional and social well-being.

If there has been any positive side to the AIDS epidemic, it has been the added attention to health education, he said.

"Because of the whole AIDS epidemic, a lot of programs that were stymied in part, are now receiving priority.

"Now people are saying we have to do something because it is a matter of life and death.

"If there is a silver lining to the atrociousness of the disease, it is that health education is receiving greater priority."

fury of the Atlantic to test its right to existence, the lighthouse was triumphantly finished.

"It was first regularly lighted Nov. 15, 1860.

"The total first cost of the lighthouse was $315,000.

" . . . The worst storm since the erection of the present lighthouse, the most destructive storm, indeed, in the history of the Massachusetts coast, occurred Nov. 27 and 28, 1898.

"In this storm, the spray from the waves was thrown up many feet above the top of the lighthouse.

"Even in the storms of the present summer, which have not been extremely severe, the spray has risen to the height of the lantern.

"But through wild tempests and in the face of raging billows, as well as in calm and pleasant weather, the noble shaft stands unshaken and serene, by day and by night, an ever faithful beacon of warning."

Ripley noted that the lighthouse, sometimes a subject of author Edward Rowe Snow, has many interesting historical foot notes.

"For example," he said, "Wicker baskets were used to take the ladies up to the lighthouse."

He also noted that the lighthouse's signal is 1-4-3, I love you.

"It's so unique; it has so much of interest," said Ripley.

When the replica is completed, Ripley is not sure if it will be regularly open to the public.

"It could be open to the public on special occasions," he said.

In the meantime, it will be made as vandal-proof as possible, Ripley said.

The commission, which is only budgeted $85 a year by the town, will have to keep a close watch on the cost.

"I don't know if we can do this for $25,000," he said.

"There are a lot of expenses.

"If this is done carefully, we should be able to get this done for that amount of money.

"I'm not worried about money at this point."

He noted that the South Shore Music Circus recently donated $7,500 towards the project.

"This is a fun project," Ripley said. "When it's done, it should be nifty.

"History is sort of fun.

"From looking back, you can look ahead."

Education loan program information

Information about the Family Education Loan Program is contained in a brochure that Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray has supplied the libraries in Cohasset and Hingham.

The brochure provides information about financing education at Massachusetts colleges and universities.

The Massachusetts Education Loan Authority's (MELA) interest rate on the Family Education Loan and Graduate Education Loan has been set at 9.5 percent for the 1988-89 academic year.

At a fixed rate of 9.5 percent monthly payments will be $11.53 per thousand dollars borrowed for the fourteen year repayment period. Loans can be secured with a home mortgage at the borrower's option.

"For additional information, please contact my office at 617-722-2400", stated Rep. Murray.

Cohasset dominates tourney

By Bill Bowers
Mariner staff

Peter Whitman and his boat Seven Buoys have done it again.

Peter and angling partner Sheldon Sladen, both of Cohasset, continued their sweep of the July 4th Weekend Bluefish Tournament sponsored by the Scituate Harbor Marina.

Sheldon captured a beautiful fish of 14.3 pounds to claim the $400 first prize. Seven Buoys also claimed a $100 prize for catching the first fish of the event.

Not bad for a single afternoon's fishing.

"It's pretty amazing, I guess. Peter and Sheldon have won the tournament every year so far," said Scituate Harbor Marina manager Dobber Reynolds. "They know what they're doing," he added.

This year's event drew 16 boats, the most ever. Owners paid the $125 entry fee, which covers up to four anglers and includes a big party to finish off the afternoon.

Veteran tournament angler Bob Johnston took the most fish (34) to claim a $300 prize.

Peter Whitman, for his part, attributes his phenomenal success to angling partner Sheldon Sladen.

"It was Sheldon's doing," Whitman told the Mariner, pointing out that Sheldon Sladen has been a lobsterman for more than 35 years, and is also an avid hunter and fisherman.

"Sheldon found the fish. He's a great all-around sportsman. He knows just where to go," Whitman said, adding, "Sheldon has very keen eyes and a great knowledge of the sea."

Dobber Reynolds says he is already looking forward to next year's tournament.

"It was a very successful event. Everyone had a great time," Reynolds said.

Carillon concert July 10

Karel Keldermans, Carillonneur of the Thomas Rees Memorial Carillon in Springfield, Illinois, will perform a free recital on the 51-bell Jessie M. Barron Memorial Carillon at St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Avenue, Sunday, July 10 at 6 p.m.

Minot's Light tour July 31

The Cohasset Historical Society has finalized plans for its "Minots Light Revisited" program to be held Sunday afternoon, July 31. It will be an opportunity to learn in detail about the Light, its construction, history, and reconstruction, and to see the beacon close up.

Billed as a bit of "hands-on history", the program is cast as both an educational experience and a fund-raiser for the Society. Participants will hear experts discuss the structure, visit the rings where the granite blocks were fitted, view some of the damaged stones that were removed from the Light, and, depending on Coast Guard scheduling, see the newly-cut stones and perhaps observe reconstruction if the work has started.

A highlight of the afternoon will be shuttle trips by the Mass. Bay Line "Seabreeze" at 12 p.m., 1 p.m., 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. around the Light and along the coastline. At the Lothrop House headquarters of the Society there will be additional displays and refreshments will be served.

Because the operating time of the boat is limited to two hours before and after high tide, reservations must be limited to about 150 people. Reservations at $15 for Society members and $20 for non-members may be made by mailing checks to the Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset, MA 02025. For further information call 383-6930.

Summer recreation programs

JIMMY FUND SOFTBALL SPONSORSHIPS

Again this summer, an opportunity exists for local business and residents to sponsor a town official for this season's Jimmy Fund softball games between area town's.

Sponsorships are $30 each, and will sponsor a Cohasset town official in a five or six game softball series between local area towns. The money raised by the events will be given to the Jimmy Fund. Last year, the program generated $2,100 which was donated to the Sidney Farber Cancer Institute.

Each team will have team tee-shirts with their respective town's seal on the front and sponsors' names on the back. Each of the five or six town's will play each other once, then there will be a special "All Star" game.

If you wish to be a sponsor for the 1988 season, call Jack Worley at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, 383-6791, for further details.

NEED FOR DONATED ITEMS

There are a number of items that we could use for the playground programs. Should you be willing to donate any of these, or any other items, there will be a box at the recreation office, and at the playground for collections.

The department is primarily interested in items such as the ones listed below, but not necessarily limited to those:

art supplies, playground balls, children's books, book shelves, boxes, children's games, board games, card games, outdoor toys or games, sporting equipment, art paper, newspaper, hoses, sprinklers, water games, wading pools, towels and blankets, beach balls, balloons, posters, golf clubs, kites, outdoor trash barrels, and large tackle box for first aid.

The Cohasset Summer Playground is looking for anyone willing to volunteer their time working with the children or interested in sharing a special skill or activity. Call 383-6791.

First Parish

Summer Sunday Services for 1988 are 9 a.m.

The Music and Worship Committee thanks the following persons for volunteering to be sure our Meeting House is open on Sunday mornings throughout the summer. Music and a friendly greeting will be offered each Sunday, and in some cases there will also be readings, a prayer, the presentation of a thought for the day or a discussion topic:

July 10 — Linc and Iri Bloomfield, Foreign Policy in an Election Year; July 17 — Chartis Langmaid; July 24 — Debbie Cook, The Woodbury family, visitors from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, will speak about Pioneer Day; July 31 — Debbie Eaton and Bryan Bruce; Aug. 7 — Bobbi Leary and Evelyn O'Brien, Piano duets, Marilyn Hobson, Readings; Aug. 14 — Carolyn Curtis, Piano music; Aug. 21 — Madeline and Chuck Olney; Aug. 28 — Anita Franks, Reflections on a recent trip to Brazil; Sept. 4, Gail and Bill Bell.

Parish Committee Notes:

The Parish Committee has accepted with regret the resignation of Ken Wilcox as our treasurer. Having served one year beyond his original commitment to the committee Ken has done an outstanding job as our treasurer and will be sorely missed. Chuck Olney has accepted appointment as Treasurer until the next Annual Meeting of the Parish. Roger Whitley has agreed to serve as Assistant Treasurer in order to ease the work load of the treasurer.

Lenten Manual — 1989

Our 1988 Lenten Manual was so enthusiastically acclaimed that the Music and Worship Committee is making plans for the publication of a 1989 edition.

After considerable thought, discussion and input by the Committee, the theme Transitions was selected for the 1989 issue. As the word implies, a wide range of subjects and thoughts come to mind as being relevant and appropriate: childhood to adolescence, youth to adult, marriage, death, divorce, career change, religious conversion, serious illness or disability, retirement, etc.

We invite all parishioners to contribute their own original writings of prose or poetry as well as a favorite quotation or two on our theme. Your personal commentary relative to your selection its origin or source as well as its significance in your philosophy will enhance its meaning to others.

Your contribution should be approximately 150-200 words in length and will be collected at our Thanksgiving Service on November 20.

While you are on vacation, relaxing at the beach or on a mountain top, you may find your inspiration to compose an appropriate message to share with us all.

Dick Wheeler, Chair
Music and Worship Committee

From Gladys:

It is with trepidation that I trade in the typewriter, Macintosh, mimeo and copy machine for such mundane contrivances as the dishwasher, vacuum, paint brush, scraper, garden tools, etc. I have enjoyed my seven years as Parish Secretary and will miss you all. I'm adding my name to the mailing list so that I will know what is going on here, and I hope to encounter you at the Stop & Shop or around town.

Love, Gladys

South Shore Art Center Center adds courses

The South Shore Art Center's education department has added several new courses to its summer sessions.

Summer at the Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, offers two four-week terms, July 5-July 31 and August 1-31, with certain classes meeting twice a week for four weeks and others meeting once a week but spanning both sessions. Advanced registration is required for all courses and workshops at the Center.

An opportunity to tour the Museum of Science's Ramses Exhibit will be offered during "Hands on Egypt." This is a new course, taught by artist and teacher Elizabeth Gemperlein, in which she will explore the mysteries of the mummies.

The course meets Mondays and Fridays from 7:30-9:30 p.m. starting July 6. During the four-week session she will work in a tour of the impressive Ramses Exhibit. Through slide presentations and studio projects students will learn about the mysteries and magic of the afterlife and create their own "mummies."

Develop painting skills by copying the old masters in Michael Phillipps' course, "Old Masters In Detail," meeting Mondays and Wednesdays from 1-3:30 p.m. starting July 6. "Copying from the past masters," as he explained, "has been a learning tool that has been employed by artists from Titian to Cezanne."

His course benefits both the beginning artist and those more advanced by dispelling some of the fear students face when confronting the task of painting. He demonstrates how the old masters treated a painting as a series of tangible steps. By the end of the course, Phillipps hopes to have instilled in his students a sense of self-confidence in their works.

Judy Rossman, noted for her successful art department at the Rockland High School, comes to the Center for a four-week course, Modeling the Figure in Terra Cotta, meeting Tuesdays and Thursday, 9 a.m. to 12 noon, beginning July 5.

The July session also offers several other courses: Virginia Avery's Outdoor Watercolor, Wednesdays and Fridays, 9:30-12:30 p.m.; Berj Kallian's Monotype/Collage, Fridays, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.; and both David Tandy's Introductory Drawing and Introductory Painting, Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7:15-10:15 p.m.

Spanning the two sessions and meeting once a week are Albert Abany's Drawing From Nature, on Tuesdays, from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.; and Clement Micarelli's Portraiture, Tuesdays, from 7:30-10:00 p.m. Both courses begin July 5.

The photography department offers Beginning Photography, Intermediate Photography and Masters of Photography, all meeting once a week for eight weeks. A darkroom course taught by Hingham photographer Amy Whorf will be offered during the August session and will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays starting August 2.

Beginning Photography, taught by Tom Hannon, will meet on Mondays from 7:30-9:30 p.m. starting July 11. He will cover the basic components of good photography including camera mechanics, lenses, accessories, films, composition and lighting.

Paul Fortin will teach the other two photography courses. His Masters of Photography, meeting on Mondays from 7:30-9:30 p.m., emphasizes the visual influence of photographers Edward Weston, Eugene Atget, Paul Strand, Henri Cartier-Bresson and Walker Evans. Subject matter will include documentary, landscape and portraits. His intermediate photography course, meeting on Wednesdays from 7:30-9:30 p.m., will explore portraits, people and landscapes.

Rep. Murray to attend rally

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, the Republican candidate for the 3rd Plymouth District, will be joining a rally on the steps of the State House to protest the rising tide of taxing and spending in the state.

The Republican-sponsored rally will be held Wednesday June 29 at noon, and will be sponsored by Ray Shamie, Republican Party Chairman, GOP House Leader Steve Pierce, and Republican Senate leader Dave Locke.

Radio personality Jerry Williams will conduct the rally, with support from the Massachusetts Taxpayers PAC, the foundation for Economic Research, the Massachusetts Civic Interest council and the Committee for Responsibile Government.

"What we've seen again and again over the last two months is a bloated state government which is spending so much that now they want to reach into the pockets of working men and women by raising fees, fines, and taxes." Rep. Murray said.

She cited the new taxes the General Court has passed including $75 million from a so-called "coupling" bill, $24 million from a hidden tax on bottle and can deposits, $40 million in new sales taxes on cigarettes, and a $50 million grab from the lottery fund that had been earmarked to go to cities and towns.

Rep. Murray hosts fundraiser

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and Cohasset businessman Jack Conway will be hosting a fundraiser at Hugo's Restaurant at Cohasset Harbor, Thursday, July 7 in honor of Jon Bryan, the Republican challenger for the 10th Congressional seat.

Bryan does not support any special interest groups and will not support PAC money. Bryan said, "my only special interest group is the people of the 10th Congressional District. In 1988, it is my hope that we the people of the 10th Congressional District will follow in the path of our forefathers and make a declaration of independence on November 8 from one of the biggest spending, government intrusive members of Congress, our own Gerry Studds."

The event will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets can be purchased from Pat and Michele Buckley at 383-0304; Lillian Murray 383-1000; Lloyd Prescott 925-2472; Greg Hall 749-3405. A donation is $25.00.

Coffee for Silva

Diane and Jack Sullivan, 708 Jerusalem Road, will be hosting an informational coffee at their home for John Silva, Democratic candidate for state representative.

The coffee will be held Thursday, July 14 at 7:30 p.m. Anyone who would like to assist the Sullivans, or would like to attend the event, call 383-1166.

Senior Center news . . .

Kathy Bryanton, Director
Director's Message:

Once again this year, we are giving ourselves a vacation in that we are combining the July and August issues of the Senior Vista. Do not expect to receive any other newsletter until September.

Please note the Senior Center is open daily and there is always someone available to assist you.

We would like to caution you to be extremely aware of the high temperatures recently and take very good care of yourself. Remember to drink plenty of liquids especially water. Avoid alcoholic beverages, sedatives and tranquilizers, hot baths or showers, and some rest and clothes which alter the ability to sweat. Should be aware of the increase risk of hyperthermia.

It is important, however, that people taking these medications, continue to do so and discuss possible problems with a Doctor. Other factors which may make a person more susceptible to heat-related illnesses are changes in skin, slow circulation, and inefficient sweat glands caused by the normal aging process, obesity or alcoholism.

Heat stroke can be life threatening. Immediate medical attention is required. Heat-related illnesses can be avoided by simply following some basic, common procedures. 1. Drink plenty of water and juice. Bathe or shower frequently using cool water. 2. Wear light weight clothing. 3. Stay out of the sun as much as possible. 4. Stay in an air conditioned [illegible]

Also, if you know of someone who would like to start receiving a copy of the Vista in September — we would be happy to add them to our list.

Developer plans artificial island 22 miles off coast

By Jane Lane

A New Jersey man plans to erect a 155-acre holiday resort island 22 miles off the coast of Cohasset Harbor.

Richard A. Gugel of Clinton, N.J. has submitted an application to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to construct this country's first "artificial island" in international waters midway between Cohasset and Provincetown.

The 1,000-foot-wide platform, supported by 16, 50-foot-wide steel reinforced pilings, each weighing 28,000 tons, will be the first of many proposed by the New Jersey developer. He has submitted a second application for a similar island to be located in waters between New York and New Jersey.

"Japan has 57 of these artificial islands," the developer explained in a telephone conversation this week. "Each island is different - each is for a different use. One is actually an international airport where the biggest planes in the world fly. Another is a chemical plant, and there are manufacturing plants, condominiums, and golf ranges."

There is one such island, he explained, that is a "city within a city" located off the coast of Japan, supported by 110,000 pilings.

Gugel's plans for his "Arabian Nights" island 30 miles east of Boston, will include docking facilities for ocean liners and cruise vessels, a heliport, a forty-story main tower featuring casinos, nightclubs, discos, hotels and shops, a

Officials consider taking Salt House

In an effort to stop the private sale of waterfront property, officials are pursuing the possible purchase by the town of a historic Cohasset Harbor structure.

Selectmen this week expressed their dismay at the impending sale of the Old Salt House, deeded to the town more than 10 years ago by the late Jessie Cox.

"If Jessie was alive today, she'd be b------t," Chairman Burt Pratt said, referring to the sale under negotiation by the Cohasset Conservation Trust.

"Well, her sister (Jane Cook) is b------t," Selectman James Gallagher answered.

They voted unanimously to pursue a possible eminent taking of the property which has been under the jurisdiction of the Cohasset Conservation Trust since 1974.

Local realtor Peter Guild said a purchase and sales agreement has been negotiated with a local resident who plans to utilize the structure as a ship's chandelery, retaining the dock and gas pumps used by Cohasset boaters.

Members of the conservation trust defended the sale of the Old Salt House on Cohasset Harbor, saying their purpose is to acquire and maintain conservation land, not waterfront property.

At their Monday night meeting, selectmen reiterated their "dismay" at the impending sale to a local resident.

And in a letter sent to the conservation trust members, selectmen urged them "to reconsider

Tuition hike approved for '88

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Out of town students who would like to attend Cohasset schools will have to pay $3,536 a year in tuition, after action by the school committee Monday night.

That's an increase of $336 over the current rate of $3,200 a year, according to Supt. Stephen Hart.

The school committee action came after inquiries by a number of Hull residents interested in sending their children to Cohasset schools next year.

Hart said he has received eight to 10 inquiries from Hull parents.

"No one has put in a complete, formal application," he added.

The inquiries were prompted by a school budget crisis in Hull.

In Hull's current budget, more than 20 teaching positions have been cut, as have all sports and most extra-curricular activities.

Maintenance, transportation and other services have been curtailed sharply.

In a June 27 referendum, Hull residents voted against $1.5 million in tax limit override requests for all town

Scorching heat doesn't dry up local water supplies

"I feel comfortable that we have a sufficient amount of water for the town of Cohasset, even if it doesn't rain for a while," said Ben Curley, water department superintendent.

Curley's comments came as scorching temperatures and dry weather caused at least 33 Massachusetts communities to restrict or ban outside water use.

"I don't see a ban now," said Curley, superintendent for eight years and an employee of the water department for 22 years.

"We might put a little awareness program in the papers," he said.

It could cover such things as conserving water and the best time of day for watering lawns and flowers, according to Curley.

"The best time to water is in the evening," he noted.

The awareness program was to be discussed at a meeting of the Water Commissioners July 13, he said.

"We haven't had any big problems," said Curley. "We have a sufficient amount of water.

"The only problem is an antiquated distribution system," he said.

"Some people at the end of the line are experiencing very low water pressure."

Curley said the water department received three calls regarding the water pressure problem around the Linden Drive-Jerusalem Rd. area.

"They weren't complaints, they were questions," said Curley.

Selectmen seek review

Selectmen will ask the building inspector to review a house on Rte. 3A that has been offered to the town by a local developer.

Donald Staszko has offered a single-family home, now located on his property along Rte. 3A at Sohier Street, in return for an agreement by the town to move it.

At their meeting Monday night, selectmen requested that the building inspector review the home and estimate how much it will cost to renovate the structure.

Staszko made the proposal to selectmen, noting they had 60 days to decide whether to accept the home.

Selectmen agreed they could not meet that deadline, and also decided to have the building inspector determine if the home was worth renovating.

Saying that one local builder told her it was not worth the money, Selectman Martha Gjesteby it would also cost $10,000 to $15,000 to move the home. "And if he (Staszko) is really magnanimous, he would pay to move it. It should have been part and parcel of the offer," she said.

Planning board action

The Cohasset Planning Board took the following action at its meeting July 6, at 43 Elm St.:

• Agreed to continue to Aug. 3, at 7:30 p.m. an informal discussion of possible subdivision of land off Beach St. requested by Dr. Patrick Morrissey.

Mrs. Ellen Morrissey said the 20 acres of land could be subdivided into three lots with a building on each.

She also said the applicant could entertain using some of the land for town hall parking, a helicopter pad for medical emergencies or to locate a house developer Donald Staszko has offered to the town.

• Agreed to allow Paul Ferrini to do the final blacktopping of a common driveway on property off Rte. 3A if Harry Litchfield agrees that it is satisfactory to be paved.

Some board members said the final paving should wait until the three homes planned in the project are built because heavy equipment needed for that work could damage the driveway.

The state fire marshall's office is still investigating two suspicious fires that occurred last week at Wheelwright Farms on Beechwood St. One single family unit was destroyed in a fire. Earlier, a truck used by construction workers at the site was destroyed by a fire. (Brian Naughton photo)

Livingston Sq. hearing continued to July 20

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"We really intend to do a nice job there," Thomas Cummings told the planning board July 6, after an hour-long discussion of his plans for a small shopping plaza next to Jonathan Livingston Square on Rte. 3A.

During the discussion, the public hearing portion of the site plan review was closed. No residents spoke at the meeting.

The board now has 45 days to approve or disapprove the plans.

Discussion will continue Wednesday, July 20, at 9 p.m.

Cummings and his brother, Paul, are proposing a five-shop building.

Board chairman Robert Sturdy told Cummings that he would be expanding a legal non-conforming use.

"You are integrating all of this into one parcel," he said.

Cummings argued that he was continuing with an existing use.

"The existing conditions are lawful," Cummings said. "It doesn't constitute a substantial improvement."

Cummings said he would like to discuss the matter with Town Counsel Richard Henderson before the planning board makes its decision.

He said he preferred to develop the property as one single lot.

"But we are not opposed to merging the two lots if that's what the board wants," Cummings said.

"I see this as a technicality that can go either way," said board member Al Moore.

"We've pretty much discussed all the issues," said Sturdy, as the public hearing was closed.

"Now we are down to fine points."

Cummings then went through part of a 36-page memorandum with board members.

He said that the same lighting used at the Super Stop & Shop would be used at the new shopping plaza, as requested by the board.

"Put it so it won't blind people," said board member John O'Toole.

Cummings said he has not yet applied for a variance to put up a fence on his back property line.

"But we probably will after this is granted to increase the height of it," he said.

Cummings read a definition of a cellar, referring to a discussion at the last meeting on whether the lower level could be used for commercial purposes.

Sturdy contended that if it were used for those purposes, it would double the size of the building and require more parking.

"The planning board has no authority to include the cellar area to determine parking requirements," Cummings said.

"According to your bylaws, it is not to be used in the net floor space."

"Could it be used for commercial space?," asked Sturdy.

"It could be used to store merchandise," answered Cummings.

Sturdy said that if the cellar were to be used for retail space, it could be a loophole regarding parking requirements.

"Useable retail space counts for parking," Sturdy said.

O'Toole asked Cummings if he considered Filene's Basement a cellar.

"I don't know," answered Cummings.

"If it is illegal to use the cellar for retail space, it's up to the building inspector to order a cease and desist order," he said.

"I don't plan to use it.

"I own another retail mall, and they need space to store merchandise.

"They have to save boxes," he said.

Cummings said that the new building would take about a year to construct. Then work would start on refurbishing the old building.

An architect said that the proposed building would have a common window about head height.

He also said that a sign band would be on three sides of the building, and that the grading has been revised a bit.

School action

The Cohasset School Committee took the following action at its meeting Monday night at the junior/senior high school:

- Approved a 6 percent salary increase for bus drivers, instructional aides, activity aides, Chapter 1 tutors, school nurses and school physician.
- Approved extension of the contract with Northeast Petroleum Corporation for #4 fuel oil.
- Approved Scituate Auto Driving School Driver Education Program at Cohasset High School for the 1988-1989 school year.
- Approved five department heads. They are Kearin Dunn, mathematics; Samuel Erbe, science; William Kite, English; Paul Narkiewicz, foreign language; and Dorothy Wondolowski, social studies.

Planners to decide on Cohasset Plaza July 20

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"There is a feeling of helplessness when you see brick and mortar creeping up on Rte. 3A," one resident commented as the planning board continued its discussion of a proposed 12-shop plaza next to the Super Stop & Shop.

"From time to time, I share your view," said board chairman Robert Sturdy at the July 6 meeting.

Linden Drive resident David Chittim was one of two residents who shared their thoughts on the project before the public hearing portion of the site plan review was closed.

The planning board now has 45 days to approve or disapprove the plan.

The matter was continued to Wednesday, July 20, at 10 p.m.

"I'm concerned with the whole issue of Rte. 3A," said Chittim.

"The Super Stop & Shop is a beautiful store.

"But it is overhanging other stores in Cohasset," said Chittim, referring to the recent closing of Bildner's.

"I have overall concerns about Tedeschi and Cushing Plazas becoming derelict.

"Does Cohasset need or want all of these shopping plazas?"

"Compared to the Hingham, Scituate and Marshfield parts of Rte. 3A, these are end to end," he said.

Sturdy replied, "Cluster developments, stores and groups of stores are out in the free market.

"They have to be left to the market place.

"I don't see us as the planning board/chamber of commerce.

"I don't feel too inclined to take a heavy-handed planning role in the town."

Board member John O'Toole said, "I don't think the other areas will become blighted."

"We have asked Cushing Plaza to spruce up," noted Sturdy.

"We can't say that it is too much for the economy. But we can say if it is too much for the site.

"I'm looking for some better overall plan," said Chittim.

"I don't see the long-term look at this kind of stuff.

"I feel helpless as a citizen. Who do you bring this too?"

Another Cohasset resident, Robert Davenport of Sohier Street, said that developer Donald Staszko should have been allowed to do the whole project when the Super Stop & Shop was constructed.

"He should have been allowed to do the whole project at once," said Davenport.

"It will come out less for the town now, having two different buildings, because of the way the first application was treated."

O'Toole said that one of the two entrances of Chief Justice Cushing Highway should be designated for trucks.

He also said that shopping carts should have brakes because they roll into parked cars and cause costly dents.

Sturdy said he would like to see a protected pedestrian walkway between the two shopping plazas "as opposed to here's the parking area and good luck, folks."

"The handicapped and elderly don't walk to buildings in a single bound," he said.

"Pedestrian safety is a very specific charge of the planning board.

"I want to make sure pedestrian safety is addressed.

"Some people won't have cars if they are dropped off by the senior shuttle.

"They should have a reasonably protected walkway. It could be enhanced so that it would be a nice walk."

Humphreys said that the suggestion could be looked at "but pedestrian traffic by its very nature is randon."

The walkway would probably be used for carts, he said, and would wipe out the center parking area.

Sturdy suggested that the walkway would not have to be down the middle of the parking area, but could be on one of the sides.

Legal questions concerning the project were also discussed.

Board members read an opinion from Town Counsel Richard Henderson that the proposed building would not be to close to the residential zone line which divides the property. A business use can continue 50 feet into a neighboring zone.

They said they will also ask Henderson for a ruling about the surface material on the lot after a question arose during the meeting.

Selectmen seek to purchase Old Salt House

your decision before this valuable property is released from Trust and future generations are denied the beauty and enhancement that it adds to Cohasset Harbor."

Chairman Burt Pratt called the Old Salt House, "a genuine antique and a valuable resource to the harbor." But the chairman noted that conservation trust members ignored the May 24 letter, and in subsequent conversations with a trust member, questions about the impending sale "were answered very negatively," Pratt said.

Jack Hubbard, chairman of the conservation trust, said the trust members voted several months to place the salt house on the real estate market. "We had quite long deliberations about this," he explained, "about whether we should continue the liability of the gas and oil pumping operation there. We decided that we really aren't in business to do that - it's not the sort of thing the trust was meant to maintain."

According to Hubbard, the salt house was deeded to the trust by the Jessie Cox before her death."She owned it, but had no particular use for it," Hubbard said. "A trustee, Richard Leggat, knew her well and talked to her about the property and at that time, we felt there was some interest in acquiring the property.

"In the old days," he continued,"the gas and oil pumping operation was simpler. Now it's much more complicated. We can't buy any type of environmental insurance against gas and oil spills in the harbor. We felt that this operation was getting less and less away from what our original intent was - to preserve open land in the town."

The money the trust receives from the sale, Hubbard said, will be set aside for the future purchase of conservation land in the town. "As a trustee," he said, "we receive no personal return on any sale. Our interest will be to receive funds for the acquisition of more land."

He noted," you know, selectmen sent us this letter saying how disappointed they were about the impending sale, yet they never offered any alternative. They didn't say why they were so disappointed"

In that May 24 letter, selectmen said their disappointment in the private sale of the salt house "is enhanced by our understanding that not only has the property been offered for sale, but offered with limited or no restrictions."

However, realtor Guild and trustee Hubbard maintain there is a restriction which was added in mid-May to the sale. Guild told selectmen Monday night that no sale can be completed without the agreement which prohibits all exterior alterations to the building without the written permission of the conservation trust.

"The trust will have the right to consider the suitablility of any proposed changes and materials," Guild said, noting that any changes by the new perspective owner "will have to be in harmony with the existing structure which is a replica of the original."

"You mean that gives a private organization authority which is usually in control of the public," Selectman Chairman Pratt answered.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby supported looking into possible eminent domain taking of the salt house by the town. "I believe we would be losing public access to the harbor," she said.

Selectman Gallagher said he originally brought the subject before selectmen several weeks ago. "I feel strongly about using this land for docking facilities. It's just ideal for our needs - it's the only place in town you can gas up."

Guild said the sale between the trust and a local resident is imminent. He declined to name a purchase price of the property.

Conservation trust chairman Hubbard noted that as part of the sale, they have been guaranteed the salt house will be preserved and maintained. "There won't be any condos or anything like that there," he said. "The agreement is a good compromise so there will be no significant change in the appearance of the harbor. That was a big concern to us."

Guild said the new owner, who does not wish to ben identified, intends to operate a ship's chandlery, similar to Kehoe's Chandlery in Hingham. The gas and oil service will continue to be provided from a pier at the salt house.

AFS students show they're 'really the same'

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

At a cook-out Friday, July 8, for 44 American Field Service students on a four-day "bus stop" visit to Cohasset, a Turkish teenager presented scenes from life in his native country as part of an impromptu talent show.

"They were universal human events such as a father reacting to the birth of a child, or of someone experiencing the death of a loved one," said Judy Dwyer, co-president of the Cohasset AFS.

"They were done in a very creative, funny way. They captivated everyone," said Dwyer, who is co-president of the local group with her husband, Leo, a lieutenant colonel in the army.

"And they showed that we are really all the same."

That's a recurring theme in the international, inter-cultural exchange program which was started in 1947 by American ambulance drivers, from World War I and II who wanted to make an effort at world peace, according to Dwyer.

Frances Bromet of Columbia grooms Austrian Chris Werle's hair after a swim in the pool, while Michelle Davidson holds the mirror.

"It has always retained its universal goal of working towards world peace through cultural exchange," she said.

The program involves teenagers ages 16 to 19 from all parts of the world who spend 10 months in this country, said Dwyer.

"They all speak some English," she said. "In fact, most are embarrassingly proficient.

"We couldn't say that about speaking Turkish or Israeli."

Teenagers from this country spend time abroad as well.

"Kim Hunt from Cohasset recently returned from a year in Turkey," said Dwyer.

"She had already completed high school and spent a year abroad." She plans to attend the University of Vermont."

Another Cohasset resident, Laura Kuhn, is expected back this week-end from a year in West Germany, according to Dwyer.

"She spent her senior year abroad," said Dwyer, who added that Kuhn will attend Tufts University.

"Their performance was shining academically and in every aspect," she said.

Five other local teenagers are spending the summer abroad, she added.

They are Brian Ormiston, who is in Japan, Allie Redfield, Dominican Republic; Matt Beggan, Uruguay; Laura Smart, Peru; and Brian Shultz, Brazil.

"It really becomes an enriching experience for the host families and students," Dwyer said.

"It's a very important contribution to promote better understanding of people around the world.

"As a good illustration, we had severl Turks here over the weekend.

"Most of us had a relatively poor understanding of people from that country.

"But they were the most endearing group of people. Their sense of humor was most endearing."

The 44 teenagers who attended the cook-out hosted by John and Carol Martin of North Main St. had stayed in the metropolitan New York and were on an AFS "bus stop" before they return home, she explained.

The students stayed with local families.

"They unwind before they return home, and see something of the rest of the country," said Dwyer.

During the AFS students' four-day stay here, they visited Quincy Market, enjoyed a Boston harbor cruise and saw Harvard University.

"Everyone had to see Harvard University," said Dwyer.

"A lot of them aspire to go back and study there in the future.

"They are very academically-oriented in comparison to most American kids.

"They all found American schools quite easy in contrast with what they had left."

Another observation of the visitors was of alcohol problems, particularly with teenagers, according to Dwyer.

"It doesn't appear to be a social problem in other countries," she said.

"In no way are their comments indictments of American kids," explained Dwyer.

AFS students really the same . . .

"Their observations are for us to think about."

The students also noted that materialism seems to be stressed more than academics, she said.

Dwyer noted that American host families have been very warm and generous in giving their time and love to exchange students.

"It's a difficult adjustment for kids to come and live with a strange family," she said.

"There is a lot of adversity to overcome.

"But the ones who come here are survivors."

Cohasset's foreign exchange students this year were Steven Sont of the Netherlands, who stayed with the Ralph Coley family of Elm St., and Ita Granita of Indonesia, who stayed with the Francis Collins family from S. Main St., she said.

There are currently 500 teenagers waiting to come to different parts of this country, said Dwyer.

So far no host families have come forward in Cohasset.

"This could be the first time in eight years that we won't host foreign exchange students," said Dwyer.

"We're a little disappointed, but we're still looking and we're still optimistic."

The exchange students arrive at the end of August and leave around the end of June.

They attend local schools, explained Dwyer.

"The teachers and administrators are completely supportive of our efforts," she said.

And it is not a prerequisite that host families have their own children, whether teenagers or otherwise, added Dwyer.

"Some students have lived with widows or widowers," she said.

"Others have lived with families with tiny children."

Those who host exchange students are "very, very special families," she said.

"They open their homes and give love and support," said Dwyer.

"It's really an enriching experience for a family.

"The students are from countries from Indonesia to Thailand to Turkey to Germany.

"We're more the same than we are different, and it's important for all of us to learn that."

For more information on becoming a host family, call Dwyer at 383-1654, as soon as possible.

Requests for boys or girls, or for students from certain countries or of certain religions can be accommodated, she said.

□The first baby born at the South Shore Hospital this past fourth of July was Vanessa Jean Plante, daughter of Patrick A. and Mary (Frugoli) Plante of 53 Norfolk Road in Cohasset. Celebration of Vanessa's home-coming was combined with her sister Nicole's third birthday at the home of their very proud and happy grandparents, Pat and Marie Plante, also of Cohasset.

□Another fourth of July bundle to tell you about...J.T. Price and his wife, Wendy had a baby girl, Jennifer Marie, who weighed in at 7 lbs. 11 ozs. Jennifer came into the world on Independence Day, just missing Canada Day when they were flying the Canadian Flag. J.T.'s brother, E.T., was in Cohasset for the event, he brought his fiancee, Kristen Johnson from Hartford, Conn. with him. E.T., who was Class president of CHS 1978, came on from Minnesota for the event. E.T. and Kristen will be married on October 29th, in Hartford, let's hope we get all of the details.

□Frank Wheelwright should be home as he reads this, recovering from recent surgery at South Shore Hospital. We know that you will be up and about in no time at all, you can't keep a good man down...

□And, we are happy to report that Donald Haase did not have a heart attack as he first suspected. He is home and resting comfortably. Be sure to follow your Doctor's orders and you'll be great, Donald.

□ Suzann Collins of Jerusalem Road was named to the Dean's List at Westfield State College for the spring semester. Suzann is majoring in special education.

□ Kenneth Breitkreuz of 52 Fair Oaks Lane, received a Bachelor of Arts in Architecture, and a Bachelor of Science in Building Science from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

□ Alyssa Giagrando, an eighth grader at Thayer Academy, recently received a recognition certificate at the school.

□ Lisa-Anne Laugelle of Cohasset graduated from Quincy Junior College. She is now a licensed practical nurse.

□Congratulations to Suzanne Collins, who graduated from Westfield State in May. She sure ended her college career on a fine note, she made the Dean's List last semester.

□We sincerely hope that the letter in last Week's Mariner will be heeded, as it is a desparate plea from a fine family. If you missed it, Kathleen Palmeri's son, Joseph's plaque was stolen from his grave at Woodside Cemetery. To say that the family has been through enough heartache is a vast understatement, to have added hurt is more than one can bare. You know who you are, just put it back and there will be no more said. Please, do it today.

□Evie and Eric Pearson have been in seventh heaven recently, they have had visitors! Their daughter, Carla, has been in Cohasset for the last couple of weeks, along with her children, Devon, 3, and Katelyn, 7. We'll bet that Katelyn and Devon were "spoiled rotten" during their stay, but what are grandparents for?!! In any case, a great time was had by all.

□We hope that Philip Lehr is feeling better. He had a "double whammy," appendix surgery and hernia surgery.

The next time you see Margaret Taylor, Eileen Tyeryar or Martha Douglas be sure to congratulate. These are the ladies that give so freely of their time and efforts at South Shore Hospital. They were honored recently for their community services, but a word from you would mean a lot to these energetic volunteers.

□Hats off to Felecia Bartow, who was this year's recipient of the Smith Book Award. It is given in recognition of her academic excellence, leadership and concern for others. Its an honor indeed, and everyone is proud of Felecia.

Everyone loves news, so be sure to call yours in!

Editorial

Too little/too late

Selectmen are "dismayed" and "disappointed" with the conservation trust's decision to sell the Old Salt House on Cohasset Harbor.

Removing this antique building from the harbor, which includes docks and gas pumps for local boaters, will eliminate a needed commodity in Cohasset, according to selectmen.

And they are distressed that members of the conservation trust, who were given the building by the late Jessie Cox, would sell the gift she so generously donated for town use.

We understand their disappointment, but we can also understand the conservation trust's decision to sell the property. They want open space conservation land, not waterfront property with an existing fuel operation.

They are not out to make a profit on the sale. None of the trustees will make a penny from the sale of any property or land they have under their jurisdiction.

They have no interest in making lots of money for themselves, and no one has ever implied such a possibility.

And while we would hate to see the Old Salt House converted into anything, we believe the conservation trust feels the same.

"We never want to see anything like condos there," chairman Jack Hubbard has said.

Indeed, the trust has added a restriction to the sale of the property which will prohibit any exterior changes to the building by any owner. Any addition or alteration to the building or the piers must first be approved by the conservation turst. They are not about to place their stamp of approval on any plan that will prove unesthetic or unnecessary in the harbor.

And, in fact, the local resident who is about to purchase the property plans a ship's chandlery at the location. The gas pumps will continue to function as has been the custom for many years in Cohasset Harbor.

Which leads us to another segment of this problem. If Cohasset selectmen were so concerned that this building was about to be sold, why did they wait until the 11th hour to issue their opposition. Why did they decide to investigate the option of eminent domain taking in July when they knew months ago the building was for sale?

If this building was being considered for sale by the conservation trust, perhaps it was up to them to communicate that decision to selectmen. It would have been up to selectmen at that time to go forward with the eminent domain proposal.

As is often the way, this may be a case of too little too late. If selectmen go forward with a proposal for eminent domain taking, the final say will be up to the residents of this town.

It may be a sound idea, but certainly it would have been an easier procedure, and perhaps less costly, if it was initiated by concerned officials months ago.

Successful hazardous collection

The town of Hingham along with Cohasset, Hull and Scituate just completed the second of two successful household hazardous waste collections for residents of those towns.

The May and June collections combined served a total of 307 households and collected household hazardous wastes that included used motor oil, liquid and solid poisons, flammable liquids, asbestos, and batteries.

Thanks are due to Administrative Assistant Daisy Janey, Fire Captain Paul Peaslee, Health Agent Bruce Capman, Conservation Officer Joe Stigliani, and all the others from Hingham as well as the other towns involved who worked so hard to see the project through from the initial planning, to the collection itself, and to the final reporting.

The Hingham League of Women Voters assisted with publicity for the event. The last collection took place in November 1986. As a result, the May collection in Hingham had to be closed three hours ahead of schedule due to the high volume of hazardous waste collected and the need of the handler for time to safely package and pick up all that residents had brought. Similarly, coordinators had to begin turning away residents one hour early at the June collection in Scituate. Many disappointed residents returned home with their household hazardous waste, hopefully to store it patiently until the next collection rather than dump it in the landfill or pour it down the drain or in the ground.

All Hingham residents who came to both collections — from a total of 132 households — were enthusiastic about the opportunity to dispose of their hazardous materials in an environmentally safe manner. Many expressed the belief that household hazardous waste collections should be held more often, thereby cutting down on the high volume of dangerous materials accumulated, permitting more residents to be served, and reducing the amount of time waiting in line.

One obvious deterrent to more frequent collections is the high cost of disposal. Hingham was billed $13,629 for the two collections by North East Solvents, the licensed North Andover hazardous waste transporter that handled the collections. The four towns were each charged on the basis of their populuation. Part of Hingham's cost is offset by a Department of Environmental Management (DEM) grant of $3,396.60.

No matter how environmentally conscious we become, household hazardous waste collections such as those recenty conducted by the towns of Hingham, Cohasset, Hull and Scituate will be necessary and costly. Regional approaches, too, make sense since the DEM considers them more cost-effective and is therefore more willing to provide funding, the Hingham League stated.

No water crisis in Cohasset

"We explained that after the peak demand period of 5 to 9 p.m., they should have recovered pressure.

"It goes back to normal then."

A water system engineering evaluation done in 1980 recommended such things as a new 12-inch line looping around the Jerusalem Road and Forest St. area, Curley said.

"But there is a money factor," he explained.

The evaluation also recommended an additional stand pipe.

Curley explained that a standpipe is a back-up tank.

"Cohasset's is behind the high school' and it holds 2 million gallons of water.

"We pump to fill the tank, and supply water from the tank.

"If it drops below a certain mark, we lose fire protection."

Fire Chief Daniel Brock said there have been no problems with water pressure.

According to Curley, Scituate has three standpipes and other neighboring towns have four or five.

To make sure there is an adequate supply of water, department employees have been working overtime on weekends and two to three nights a week, Curley said.

"It usually happens every summer," said Curley. "We allocate money for overtime."

Demand for water is usually about 600,000 gallons in the winter and up to two million gallons in the summer, he said.

The old pumping station off Beechwood St. operated seven days a week, 24-hours a day, according to Curley.

At the new station, opened in 1978 on King, normal operation is seven days a week, eight hours a day, he said.

While Curley did not say Cohasset has a surplus of water, he did say that it has a kind of "mutual aid" agreement with such towns as Scituate to help out in a crunch.

Heart fund swim

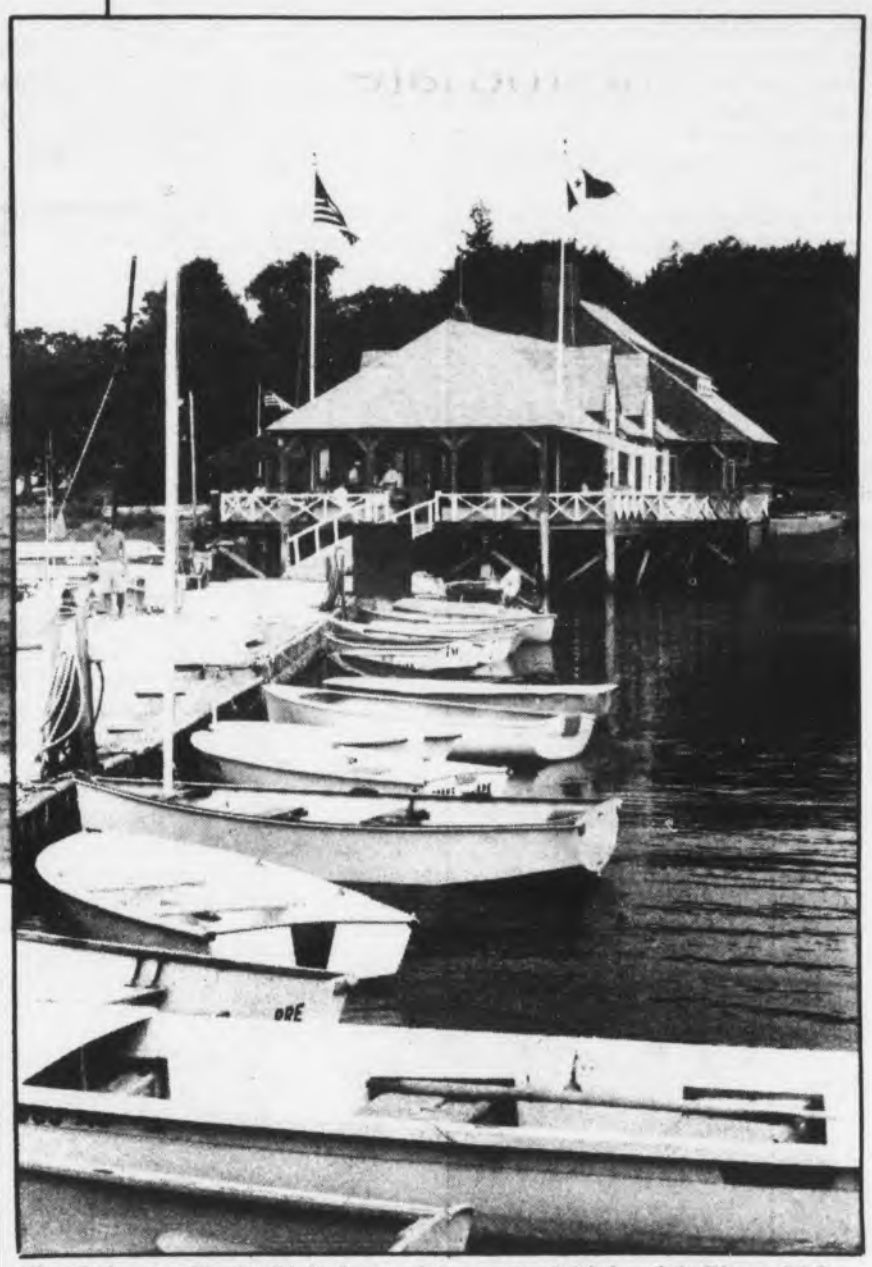
More than 150 swimmers will participate in Swim for Heart July 25 from 1-4 p.m., at the Cohasset Swim Center.

This event will include the local swim team among its participants.

Swimmers will solicit pledges for the number of laps they can complete in one hour. Proceeds from the event will be donated to the American Heart Association to fund cardiovascular research, and public and professional education programs.

Swim for Heart is a national event designated to educate swimmers about the cardiovascular benefits of swimming while raising valuable research dollars. Registrations may be obtained beginning July 11 at the town hall and at the Cohasset Swim Center.

Yachter John Keane and his crew watch out for the finish mark.



The Cohasset Yacht Club, host of the annual Richard Sullivan 210 Regatta, awaits a busy weekend of sailing.

The newest 210 in Cohasset harbor belongs to Diarmud O'Connell. He's pictured here readying his boat for the regatta.

Senior Center news

Massachusetts Sec. of Elder Affairs, Paul J. Lanzikos cautions elders to stay out of the heat and to heed stay cool-tips. "Hot weather can place a dangerous strain on your body, especially risk of heat exhaustion when strain on your heart."

Secretary Lanzikos offered the following tips to stay cool:

Find a cool spot, such as a cool room in your house, an air conditioned shopping mall, senior center, library or movie.

Draw cool air into your home with a fan. Air movement may reduce heat stress by helping to remove excess body heat.

Take a cool bath or shower.

Drink plenty of fluids whether or not you feel thirsty. Avoid alcoholic and caffeinated drinks: they interfere with your body's attempts to cool itself.

Wear light clothing. Wear a hat or use an umbrella to protect your head when outdoors.

Slow down, physical activity produces body heat. "Most victims of heat stress are elders. With the buddy system, lives may be saved. Check in on elder friends, neighbors and family members." "Do not ignore the early warning signs of heat strees, seek appropriate assistance before the strain of the heat becomes too great."

Developer proposes ocean island . . .

sports arena and penthouse apartments under 220 foot-wide gilded onion-shaped domes.

"I believe these domes will be the largest in the world - bigger than anything anyone has seen in Russia," the developer said, praising the design of New York architect Walter Musciano.

The artificial island will be able to support 100,000 people, and will be equipped with its own security force, a courthouse and jail, a hospital facility and staff.

"I wanted to begin in the northeast corridor of the United States," he explained,"and I felt going further up towards Canada would be too congested. This will be the furthest area and it will be my first.

Gugel said he plans to locate these islands along the East Coast down toward Mexico and along the West Coast to Washington.

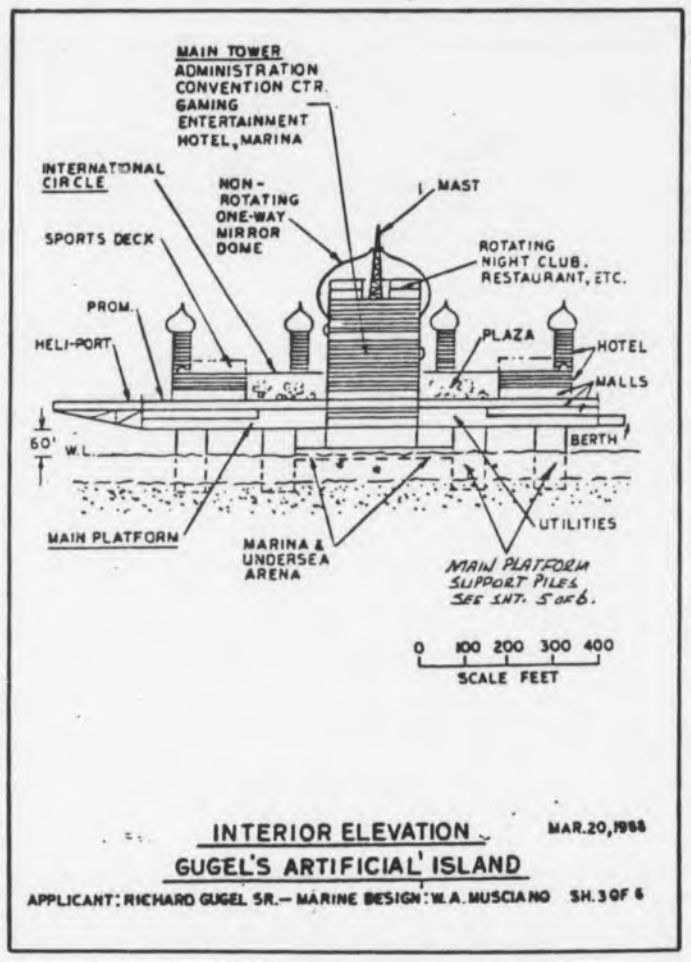
The Army Corps of Engineers in Waltham is soliciting public comment about the proposal until August 5. A decision will be rendered sometime after that date, according to a spokesman for the agency. If enough information is not received to make a decision, the Army Corps of Engineers may decide to hold a public hearing, according to Sue Douglas. Prior to issuing a final decision, the agency may request an environmental impact study or report.

Construction time for the project is expected to be six months, with the entire facility completed in a year-and-a-half after approval is granted, Gugel said.

The octagonal main platform will be 1,000 feet wide and 60 feet deep. It will be constructed of steel and reinforced concrete. The bottom of the platform will be 60 feet above the mean high water surface, and the depth of the water at that point is between 80 and 85 feet.

The upper level will contain a variety of shopping malls designed around a 40-story main tower. The lower levels will include a sports deck, a hotel and malls.

The main tower will include a variety of stores, a convention center, casinos, nightclubs, a hotel and marina. The top of this main tower extends 500 feet above the water level and will feature a slowly-revolving 40,000-square-foot nightclub and restaurant. Sixteen to 20 glass-domed elevators will carry patrons from the platform to the top of the tower.



"Right now," Gugel said, "we're looking for people to rent space for stores and the entertainment centers. We'd like to invite store owners and business people from the New England area to participate in this."

The main tower may include as many as 40 stories, depending on whether the ceilings are constructed ten, or 20-feet high. Each story will contain an open-mall type of operation, including clothes shops, jewelry stores, fast food establishments and ice cream shops.

There will be several convention centers on the island, he said, featuring the largest casino operation in the world.

"As far as we understand, New England attracts more than 12 million tourists from Canada each year," he added. "We hope that at least a portion of those people will drop off at Arabian Nights for a weekend or longer."

The artificial island will feature a 1,500-room hotel and a sports center which will include racquetball and tennis courts, skating, tennis and miniature golf.

Drinking water will be distilled from sea water. Heat for the plant will be taken from the diesel engine cooling water outlet. Waste water from drinking fountains and showers will be discharged directly overboard beneath the water surface, according to Gugel's application. And sewage from bathrooms and kitchens will undergo an aerobic digestion system, and the pure effluent will be dicharged beneath the waterline. The sludge, according to Gugel, will be incinerated, in addition to all garbage.

"We believe this is going to be an excellent economic opportunity for Massachusetts," he said, adding that he hopes to operate a ten-vessel fleet which will transport people from ports throughout New England to Arabian Nights. Gugel also plans to request commuter boat service during off-peak hours and weekends.

The pilings will be constructed in European shipyards with construction to begin soon after approval is granted by the Army Corps of Engineers.

Education director seeks to expand classes

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The new education director at the South Shore Art Center has no intention of coming in and tearing down.

Linda Keating would rather build upon the variety of programs already in place for children and adults.

Keating was recently named education director at the Cohasset center. The Duxbury resident, herself an accomplished pastel and watercolor artist, is a graduate of Skidmore College and a former art teacher in public and private schools.

"What I'd like to see here," she explained, "is to maintain the caliber of adult art classes and the variety of childrens' classes, but I would like to take off from there - to build upon that.

"Along with the current curriculum for adults, which is a solid program of studio art classes, I'd like to see series of lectures and workshops aimed toward art history and art appreciation. Perhaps we could have lectures and discussions relating to current exhibitions at the center, so education works together with the gallery."

Chairman of the Creative Arts Council in Duxbury and past director of the Duxbury Arts Association, Keating envisions a new continuity of the courses offered children at satellite locations throughout the South Shore.

She explained, "The way it is now, we have a class and we find a location for it. Now that that has been accomplished, I have to start thinking about what these classes are doing for the community, and how can we form some sort of connection between one class and the next. We need to build upon the classes we currently offer."

She would also like to expand the number of satellite locations currently offered by the center. Beginning this fall, there will be childrens' classes offered at locations in Hull, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate, Hingham, and in Weymouth. All childrens' program are funded through grants received from the Drown Foundation, she noted.

Linda Keating

"I think the art center is really good at involving this community and surrounding communities by bringing art throughout the South Shore - to towns that would have no art center activities unless we were there," Keating said.

"The South Shore Art Center is on a healthy growth spurt," she continued. "I really like the education programs we offer. Art education is my main focus here, and I am interested in expanding the childrens' programs and the adult classes. We have a lot of credible, good teachers here. Many of courses are certifiable by the Massachusetts College of Art - but many people don't realize that. How lucky we are to have such a facility right here."

Keating, married and the mother of two girls, credits former education director Penny Redfield with paving that road to a successful program at the art center.

"She got the curriculum in really good shape - it's pretty solid right now. Penny worked on expanding it so we could offer more classes and teachers recognized by Mass Art," she noted.

"This place is a real boon to the South Shore," she added, looking around the center's gleaming white gallery filled with lights illuminating colorful acrylic paintings and a masterful exhibit of sculpted horses.

One of her new ideas for the upcoming fall schedule includes an "Art is Art" program for children, combining the visual and performing arts. "I'm working on getting a program together with a visual artist and a dancer/composer, so the children will be able to see that the connection between the motivation of the creative urge is the same in all creative disciplines, and they can work together," she said.

This type of program has been done in the schools, she noted, "but in order to offer it as a class at the center, we have to present it so people understand what it is and they'll want to attend," Keating added.

Syma, a popular artist with the children at the art center, has accomplished this type of program with great success. "It was a really fund project for the kids," Keating said, explaining that the students work together to complete a finished project at the end of the course. "They don't simply have something to show their parents, but they have a tangible project that they accomplished together. It was a team effort, so

Cohasset 13-15 yr. olds Pony League champs

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

The Cohasset Savings Bank became baseball champions in the Senior Little League division (ages 13-15) June 30th.

In conjunction with the Scituate Senior Little League, Cohasset Savings Bank defeated Scituate Rotary Club in the finals, 11-7 and 9-5, thus taking the series two games to none in the best-of-three format.

In addition, the sponsored team is the first Cohasset representtive to obtain the league crown. Last year, Cohasset formed only one team. This year, however, because of the baseball interest from the 13-15 year-old boys in town, they were able to produce two teams (the other one being Bob's Coffee Haus).

"In the past, the boys would just lose interest in baseball once they reached the age of 13. However, we had an incredible turnout this spring. In all, 27 Cohasset kids participate in the program. This is why we divided the boys into two squads. This is a good age-group representation (Scituate had a total of 60 kids but they were split up between six teams)," said coach Richard Henderson, whose club captured the regular-season title with a 11-1 record and then managed to go through the playoffs undeafeated.

"By finishing 14-1, it was an outstanding year for us. Everyone contributed on the field. We played well together as a team, and we supported each other as well."

Henderson credited the pitching of Michael Rolandelli and Evan Spencer as the primary reason for the team's success.

"By far, our pitching was the strongest part of the team. They were probably the best throwers in the league. It also helped that they had some high school varsity exerience," he noted.

Michael Ellinger also pitched for the team but Henderson stuck with the previously-mentioned two-man rotation for most of the season.

"Michael and Evan did the bulk of the pitching. In the end, they combined to win 13 out of the 14 games we collected."

Nathan Fiore, Kevin Mulcahy and Christopher Henderson provided the team with clutch hitting during the campaign.

"They were steady, consistent hitters from day one. With two kids from the high school varsity program and five from the junior varsity, we had a good blend of experience," Henderson said.

Other players on the roster who assisted toward the championship banner include John Grady, Peter Fahey, Doug Schultz, Dan DeMichele and John Brister.

"Fahey and Schultz were only seventh-graders but they performed like veterans instead of first-year players. For Brister, he was such a remarkable person. He moved to Cohasset one year ago from Newton. Being his first year in the program, he had to adapt to his new teammates. It didn't take him long to win respect from his peers with a productive season." added Henderson.

Henderson also praised the team's defense which turned seven double plays in 15 contests.

"The kids really deserved this honor. They played solid baseball for nine straight weeks (the season started on May 9)," he said.

now they see that cooperation is needed not only on a baseball field, but in the arts as well."

Currently, Keating is hard at work, attempting to prepare a fall schedule for the center and its satellite locations.

"I'm trying to get a feel for the administration, the teachers and the center itself. Right now, it's matter of trying to fit in with all that is going on here. There's a definite personality to this place," she laughed. "I'm keeping real busy."

Coaches are becoming hard to find

It's getting more and more difficult to fill coaching positions, the athletic director told the school committee Monday night.

In addition, the number of students participating in some sports is dwindling, Clark Chatterton said.

Chatterton's comments came as the school committee approved 22 coaching positions for the 1988-1989 school year.

"It seems every year that it is getting tougher and tougher to fill the coaching positions," said Chatterton in a letter to high school principal Mary Ellen Gallagher and reiterated at the meeting.

"The necessary time commitment and the low pay do not make coaching very attractive," he said.

"Certain undue pressures at times are exerted on the coaching profession that do not exist in other areas.

"I feel very confident that even though the above situations make it difficult to attract many people, many of our coaching positions have qualified personnel."

School committee chairman Diana Kornet agreed that it "is very difficult to locate people."

"People helping out have been a boost to the program," she said.

"Their reward is working with the type of student we have in Cohasset."

Chatterton said that five coaching positions have not yet been filled, "and we have to take a serious look at them."

They are cross country, boy's track hockey assistant coach, fourth assistant coach for football, and junior varsity baseball.

Chatterton said he will see how many students sign up for those sports.

He noted that the number of participants are down in such sports as hockey and junior varsity baseball.

Chatterton said that only nine members of the base-departments.

However, a bid for $915,000 in supplemental school spending received 45 percent of the vote, better than any other override request on the ballot.

Selectmen chairman John Silva recently proposed a compromise revenue plan featuring a tax increase and a town-wide fund drive.

Silva's proposal calls for an August override vote specifically for the school department for some $500,000 to $565,000.

A one-time townwide public and private fundraising effort would allow school boosters to raise the difference between the override amount and the original $915,000.

During Cohasset school committee members' brief discussion of the tuition increase, Hart said he thought many Hull parents might be rethinking their options.

He also said he didn't think many people had thought about such things as transportation.

"I think there are many unanswered questions," said Hart.

In response to a question from committee member Russ Reidy, Hart said that Cohasset's tuition was about the average.

He also said that only one non-resident student attended Cohasset schools this year.

In a related matter, the committee voted to adopt Policy 501A, a residency requirement for school membership.

"That means that a student has to live in Cohasset seven days a week to go to school here (without paying tuition)," explained Hart.

Prior to the change, a student could live in Cohasset during the school week and attend school for free, then return home to another town on the weekends.

ball team were on a bus for a recent game.

"The coach is really strapped," he said.

Freshman football is a major area of concern, according to Chatterton.

"There were low numbers last year, and the same is projected for next year," Chatterton said.

"If that is the case, it could be the demise of football two years down the road.

"With football, you need 30 to 32 kids out there."

"It's getting difficult to have enough students in enough numbers to have the sports," agreed Hart.

Kornet commented that hockey has the highest per capita cost.

"Hockey does get an unfair rap," said Chatterton.

"There are a lot of hidden costs in other sports, such as heating and lighting the gym.

"Soccer is the most streamlined sport," he said.

Chatterton also said that enrollment in spring sports is declining.

Coaches who were appointed are:

Also, Ruthann Sargent, gymnastics; Torin Sweeney, wrestling; Dennis Walsh, head hockey; James Franey, golf; Mike Gill, varsity softball; Marilyn Watson, junior varsity softball; Ron Emmons, girls track; Betty Zadel, girls tennis; Ed Amaral, boys tennis, and Joanne Fichtner, cheerleading.

Selectmen join Hingham animal shelter group

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Selectmen decided to come out of "the dark ages" of animal control, and join with Hingham in the newly-formed Animal Shelter Committee.

Five Cohasset residents are needed to serve on this committee which will oversee the construction of a tri-town shelter in Hingham.

Hingham member Justine Thurston explained Monday night to selectmen that a possible site for the shelter has been located off Ward Street in Hingham. That 40-acre site will be shared by a proposed new police station, she said, but definite plans can not be completed until specific plans are first prepared by the police station site committee.

Since the animal shelter site committee has completed its responsibilities, Thurston said it was time to appoint a new group as the animal shelter committee to oversee construction. Five representatives from Cohasset will be sufficient, she said.

The Hingham representaives, including Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy, estimated that a new shelter will cost Cohasset residents $1.25 per capita for a total $9,000 to $10,000 annually.

Officer Murphy suggested that license fees be raised to about $8 for a spayed dog, and $15 for unspayed animals. At that rate, the committee has estimated that a total of $15,500 in license revenues will be collected annually.

The estimated $5,375 surplus generated from this program could be pumped back into an expanded animal control operation for the town, Officer Murphy said, suggesting that the current 10-hour animal control officer service could be increased to about 20 hours.

"You should look long and hard - you need at least a 25 hour operation," the animal control officer said. "But if you withdraw from the county fund, you will come up with a substantial revenue not from the taxpayers' pocket."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he objected to the "continual" practice of increasing fees and assessments to the taxpayers.

"How long are you going to stay in the Dark Ages?" Officer Murphy asked. "You are one of the few towns that charge three and six dollars for licenses."

Thurston noted that during their research the past two years, the animal shelter site committee concluded that Massachusetts is the most "backward" state when it comes to animal control. "This shelter," she said, "will help animal owners and those who do not want animals around them. And it won't cost us very much."

Officer Murphy explained that Cohasset will not assume any construction costs for the shelter.

The Hingham animal control officer said he currently accepts captured stray dogs into his backyard pens from the Cohasset animal control officer on an emergency basis. But, he added, "it's high time you took a realistic approach to the problem of free-roaming dogs and put some money into an expanded animal control operation."

Selectmen decided to join the shelter committee. Five members are needed for the group. If anyone is interested in joining the committee, contact the selectmen's office.

In other business Monday night, selectmen decided they should deal directly with Joseph Flatley, assistant secretary of the Executive Office of Communities and Development regarding the completion of a housing agreement with the state.

Selectmen were notified last month that the last revised version of Cohasset's housing agreement was rejected by the state.

"Lots of things are being held up by this," Executive Secretary Donald Andrew said, referring to the hold-up of state grants to Cohasset until an agreement is successfully completed.

"I called Joseph Flatley last week," Selectman Chairman Burt Pratt said. "He returned my call but I wasn't there. I placed a second call, but he has not yet returned my call."

In addition, he noted, the state notified selectmen two weeks ago that the Cohasset Housing Partnership's application for designation was rejected. "Unfortunately, we cannot accept this application until Cohasset has executed an Executive Order 215 agreement with the Executive Office of Communities and Development," the regional director of the Massachusetts Housing Partnership stated in the June 27 letter.

"The Massachusetts Housing Partnership is very interested in supporting Cohasset's efforts to provide affordable housing and I strongly encourage you to re-apply after an agreement has been signed," Ana M. Perez, regional director.

Selectman James Gallagher wondered if the original agreement was signed by all appropriate town boards and resubmitted, whether it would be approved by EOCD. "I think their answer would be yes," Pratt answered. "But we'd have to get the planning board and the housing authority to sign it."

Selectmen noted that the most recently-revised version of the agreement contained changes made by the housing authority which were not approved by the state.

"I think too many persons are involved," Selectman Rocco Laugelle stated. "I think if we as selectmen deal with the proper persons involved - right now we're going in all directions. We're all in agreement except for the housing authority. If we go forward with Flatley, I think we'll be better off."

Selectmen agreed with the suggestion, but noted that the appropriate town boards, including the housing authority, must sign the next version submitted to the state.

Hingham Regatta July 14

With 200 young sailors representing clubs from Duxbury to Marblehead, the Hingham Bay Junior Regatta has become one of the area's premiere sailing events. This year's eighth annual regatta, sponsored by the Hingham Yacht Club, provides competition and camaraderie for the 10-16-year-old competitors.

The two-day, five-race program, held on July 14 and 15, at the Hingham Yacht Club, provides the opportunity for the juniors to test their skills in N-10's, Duplins, Lasers and 420s. With an outside line for the Lasers and the 420s and an inside line for the Duplins an the N-10s, Hingham Bay will be alive with racing enthusiasm and talent.

On Thursday evening, July 14, a cookout and dance will be provided for the youngsters, most of them from Hingham, Hull, Weymouth, Quincy, Cohasset and Duxbury along with a contingent from Winthrop and Marblehead.

Minot's Light Revisited tour set for July 31

Cohasset's Historical Society will present one of the major events of its summer season Sunday, July 31 when it holds its "Minot's Light Revisited" boat tour to and around the famous lighthouse located at Outer Minot's Ledge.

The tour will take place aboard the excursion vessel "Seabreeze" and will run from Cohasset's Government Island pier to the light and return.

Last summer the world-famous 128 year old lighthouse was darkened for the first major reconstruction in its long history. From the top of Minot's 114' pinnacle to its main gallery the tower was disassembled and removed to replace damaged granite blocks of the Watch Room, the uppermost part of its stone structure. The blocks, weighing from 2,200 to 3,300 pounds apiece, were brought ashore to be used as patterns for new blocks cut from matching granite. This summer the new granite courses will be used to reconstruct Minot's true to its original appearance.

But at present, the famous light remains dark and its topmost section awaits the reconstruction work. The Historical Soicety's July 31 tour will feature a close-up look at Minot's as work is beginning, and before it again resumes its familiar profile.

For "Minot's Light Revisited" there will be four separate tour sections, the first departing Government Island pier at noon aboard "Seabreeze." Additional tours will depart at 1, 2 and 3 p.m. Persons wishing to park their cars for the tour may do so at St. Anthony's Church parking lot, where a shuttle bus to Government Island will depart prior to each hourly tour. There will be speakers or guides at each part of the tour; at Government Island and aboard "Seabreeze," to provide information about the fascinating history of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse itself, its original construction and the reconstruction now going on at the light.

Additionally, at the Historical Society's Caleb Lothrop House, adjacent to St. Anthony's on Summer Street, pictures and items relating to Minot's will be on view. Refreshments, provided by the Society, will be available to tour participants at the Lothrop House.

Advance registrations are a must for "Minot's Light Revisited" since the capacity of the excursion boat "Seabreeze" is limited. Reservations may be made by contacting the Society at 383-6930. Admission to the tour is $15 for Historical Society members, $20 for non-members. Please make check payable to the Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset MA 02025. Be sure to specify which of the hourly tours you plan to attend between noon and 3 p.m.

"Minot's Light Revisited" is a rare opportunity to obtain a close-up look at the renowned ocean lighthouse as it appears during its first major reconstruction following more than a century and a quarter of continuous service at one of the world's most unique — and at times most dangerous — offshore locations.

Candidate's corner

Murray opposes raise

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray co-sponsored an order in the House of Representatives calling for legislators to give up their 5 percent pay raise scheduled to take effect next month.

"It is irresponsible for the legislature to collect a pay raise at the same time it is freezing programs and voting to increase taxes," Rep. Murray said.

"The legislature, by giving up its scheduled five percent pay raise, would both set an example for the public and free up $390,400 for use in worthwhile programs," Rep. Murray continued.

The base salary for legislators is scheduled to increase automatically from $39,040 to $40,992 starting in July. This order will prevent the increase from taking effect.

Town to look at options after sewer funds lost

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The plug has been pulled on the long-awaited and debated Ward sewer plan.

After six years of research, approval by town meetings, and months of engineering work which began with the blessing of the state, Cohasset has been informed there is no state money for the small diameter alternative sewer plan.

Local and state officials shared their outrage at the letter sent July 13 by the Division of Water Pollution Control, which informed the town that millions of dollars in state grants are not available.

"I was shocked," Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said this week. "The first I had heard of such a thing was when I was called by a reporter. But after talking with (DWPC director) Tom McMahon and (assistant chief engineer) Brian Jeans, it was apparent that the money just isn't there.

"I was under the assumption the money had been earmarked for us," she continued. "I was very upset, especially after that meeting I had arranged some time ago with the attorney general to get this thing moving. But from what I learned, apparently some cities and towns had top priority on that state money, and the money had actually never been earmarked. McMahon and Jeans were not that optimistic that we'll ever see the money."

According to sewer commissioner R. Gary Vanderweil, about $5 million of the nearly $8 million sewer project was to be paid through a combination of federal and state grants. In April, and again in a Proposition 2 1/2 override

Developer anxious to move on $ 1 billion resort island

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The New Jersey man who plans to build the "eighth wonder of the world" 22 miles off Cohasset Harbor, says he has received no adverse reaction since the plans were made public last week.

Richard Gugel of Clinton, N.J., is confident that his plans for an artificial island located in international waters 30 miles off Boston Harbor will become reality.

"This is not a dream," he said this week. "This is reality. People want to have something like this and they want to become part of this project. People realize the money will be flowing like crazy for the merchants and people of the Boston area."

Gugel, who has filed an application with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, said that is the only hurdle he must pass before construction begins.

"There is not one federal agency that can stop me. There are no rules in the United States regulating artificial islands, because this is the first," he said, adding that all reaction he has received since his project was made public has been positive.

A spokesman for Paul Keough, director of the the regional office of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) said an application for the project has not been received. The EPA will not review it unless a need for environmental review of the wastewater discharge is indicated.

"The Army Corps of Engineers will be doing the study, unless the project has to be reviewed by the EPA regarding a discharge permit. But at this point in the review, the EPA has not been involved. The Corps will take the lead to review the permit application under their laws. Unless wastewater is to be discharged into navigable waters, or there is proposed dredging or filling, the EPA will not be involved," the spokesman stated.

Gugel plans to locate an "Arabian Nights' artificial island in international waters using 16 reinforced steel support beams weighing 28,000 tons each, dug 80 feet into the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean. The island, which will be used as a "holiday resort" will accomodate 100,000 people and will cost Gugel about $1 billion.

The island will feature a 1,500-room hotel, casinos, a sports arena including roller and ice skating, three swimming pools, tennis and racquet ball courts and a running track.

"The state can't touch me about a casino license. I'll be in international waters and I won't need a license from the state of Massachusetts, which I hear is very much opposed to gambling," he said. Gugel will be in charge of the casino operations on the island. "I'll draw up the license and I will operate the casinos for the investors. That's how this island will be paid for.

"Rest assured, there'll be no Mafia on our island. Some of the best, most prestigious casino operators in the world. There has been a lot of interest expressed by them."

Indians 'gave more' to teens on church service project

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"They learned lessons you can't preach about," said the Rev. Gary Ritts of Second Congregational Church of Cohasset who recently led a group of high school students on a service project with Micmac Indians in Maine.

"The Indians were very warm, friendly, and happy," said Rev. Ritts.

"They gave us more than we gave them."

During the week-long trip, July 10 to 16 the seven teenagers and two adults spent much of their time repairing houses.

Making the trip with Rev. Ritt and his wife, Judy, were Pam and Troy Haase, Steve Ritts, Erica Ford, Tom Hungerford, Carrie Ripley and Matt Silvia.

They brought with them $1,600 to pay for the repairs.

"The kids earned some of it," explained Rev. Ritts," and the rest was a donation from the board of deacons."

The group was directed by Heilika Jordan, program director for the Micmac council, to two families who need help.

After a nine and a half hour trip in a rented van, the group arrived in Presque Isle, Maine, according to Rev. Ritts.

The next day, they began work on the home of Dan and Mary Shaw.

"He had had a heart attack, and needed odd jobs done around the house, said Rev. Ritts.

"We put wooden stairs on the house, and put on doors that were falling off their hinges."

The next day, they met the three Sanipas families in another town south of Presque Isle.

"They were even poorer," said Rev. Ritts.

"They lived in one-room shanties with shingles on the side.

"One of them was held together by wire across the top."

Don and Mary Sanipas needed roof work done.

"We put on the roof in two days," he said.

"It rained while we were putting it on.

"I'm very proud of the kids. They worked right through it.

"It stopped raining when we were finished," he laughed.

The Indians shared their heritage with the group, according to Rev. Ritts.

For example, they showed the teens how to whittle, and how to weave a basket from the tree to the finished product, he said.

"They used homemade axes and knives," he said.

A highlight of the trip was a visit with the Sanipas' 29-year-old son, David, to the "sacred mountain."

The group started out just after 6 a.m. and walked for eight miles to the mountain, according to Rev. Ritts.

"It was up most of the way," he said, "And there was underbrush and thick growth.

"Finally, we got there and everyone was speechless.

"David said, 'Here is the temple of God," Rev. Ritts explained.

"You could see for hundreds of miles.

"The kids were awed."

During the week, the group slept in a Baptist church.

Committee action praised

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray praised the House Ways and Means Committee's rejection of the proposal to divert $50 million in lottery revenue from the cities and towns.

She called it a "significant victory" for fairness.

Rep. Murray noted that the Dukakis administration proposal to divert $50 million in lottery revenue would cost Cohasset $31,487 and Hingham $94,478.

"When this proposal first surfaced a few weeks ago, the administration and the Democratic leadership were put on notice that they would get a tough fight on this one," said Rep. Murray. "Growing opposition from members of the House and Senate, in communities across the state and from groups like the Massachusetts Municipal Association sent a clear message of opposition to the diversion.".

Regional news show

Continental Cablevision will begin telecasting its first regional local newscast in six South Shore communities July 26.

'Newsbeat 53,' is a half-hour weekly news program produced by and for cable television viewers in Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate. The staff and crew is made up primarily of volunteer reporters, camera people, and newswriters from the community television departments in each of the six towns served.

The producer of the new program is Bill McColgan, Continental's program director for the town of Hull. McColgan has previously produced and anchored statewide award-winning newscasts in Sharon and Hingham. For the past two months he has been teaching news production workshops to interested cable volunteers, most of whom have joined the 'Newsbeat' staff.

'Newsbeat 53' will be cablecast on Continental's Channel 53 each Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m. Area residents who are interested in Continental's news production course are invited to call Bill McColgan at 925-9474.

Several Hingham residents have already joined the Newsbeat team, many of whom formerly worked on 'Update Hingham' the Massachusetts Cable Commission Award-winning weekly newscast produced by McColgan and Bob Belliveau. Paul Hirtle, Larry Dedian, Ray Gallagher, Heide Visser, Dave Kaminski, Carol Meyer, Carolyn Schwenk, Bob Murray, Cathy Corcoran, and newcomers Charlie Meyer, Joanne Rakers, and Todd Wallack are working on the new local newscast.

Larson, North Main Street, appointed to serve a three-year term ending in 1991 on the personnel board; Patricia G. Facey, Woodland Drive, and F. Boosters elect new officers

At the final meeting of the Cohasset Boosters a new slate of officers was elected; President, Pat Tolini, Co-President, Charlene Gardner, Vice President, Ernest Grassey, Treasurer, Debbie Smith and Secretary, Eileen Corbett.

In 1987-88, in addition to providing sports teams with equipment, clothing and presenting banners in honor of winning teams, the Boosters Club awarded two scholarships for spirit and leadership and continued to honor all athletes at banquets.

The Booster's support all sports teams and eagerly invite new members to join our continued efforts. Please contact any of the officers if interested.

Church service project . . .

"We started and ended the day with devotions around a little candle, said Rev. Ritts.

"We shared our experiences of the day. It kept us in touch with our purpose."

"Our last night, we ate with the Indians. They gave us gifts.

"Someone played guitar.

"The teenagers were very much impressed with the humility and warmness of the people.

"They told all the kids they wanted to see them again and for them to come back.

"They were so warm and welcoming of all of us.

"They are almost proud of what they do have, as opposed to what they don't have."

There are 562 Micmac Indians, or 128 families, in Maine, according to Rev. Ritts, and even more in Canada.

"You get the sense that it is a fading culture," he said.

"The kids are more Americanized. They go to Boston for real jobs.

"They are trying to melt into the American way."

Rev. Ritts described the trip as a kind of "mini-Outward Bound" experience.

"It's a strengthening factor for the youth group," he said.

"There is such growth and deepening of faith.

"They see that not everyone lives as we do, and that people can be poor but very happy without all those other things."

"What the Indians gave us is more than we will ever be able to repay," he said.

"They seemed to gain from giving to us.

"They gave us material gifts, such as crafts, and unspoken gifts which the kids will never, ever forget."

"The Sanipas' especially had a tremendous influence.

"There's more to life than all that you can accumulate."

Rev. Ritts, who has been with Second Congregational for a year and a half, has participated in other workcamp activities, such as the Appalachia Service Project.

He is already looking forward to next year's trip.

"Next year, hopefully we will double the size of the group.

"Next year, we'll have more momemtum."

Health board to look at landfill options

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The health board is looking at cheaper alternatives to a landfill transfer station - alternatives that were suggested by two local landfill experts.

Town meeting appropriated $550,000 for the design and construction of a transfer station at the landfill. But new proposals now before the health could save the town hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The board of health met Monday with M and M Solid Waste Equipment Inc. to discuss those alternatives. After a brief meeting and a tour of the Cedar Street landfill, consultant Matthew Galanek suggested that about $25,000 in equipment will be necessary to operate a roll-off container type operation at the landfill. Site construction, the most expensive portion of the project, could not be immediately estimated.

The health board initiated the meeting after local residents, Russell Field of Russell Field and Son, Inc., and Paul Barry, owner of Cohasset Heights Ltd., suggested cheaper ways to operate a transfer station at the town landfill.

Barry said the suggestion was made following a meeting last week between the health board and the dump study committee. "They were considering a major transfer station when we don't know if SEMASS will be built, or if we have to go all the way to Maine in the meantime," he said.

The alternative to a full-fledged, three-sided concrete transfer station as proposed at the April town meeting, would be "less elaborate and cost the town less," Barry said. In addition, the landfill owners suggested that locations other than Penobscot, Maine be considered for an interim disposal solution until SEMASS is completed.

"To think that we're going to go across state lines to dispose of our trash, when there are landfills in Fall River and Plainville that are looking for our trash. It just seemed a little much," Barry noted. "We simply suggested that the board of health look more locally."

Barry explained that many states are considering imposing fees to communities bringing refuse across state lines. "We suggested they look locally," Barry said. "There's got to be alternatives to Maine."

Without a consultant's fee, representatives of M and M Solid Waste Consultant Inc. of Dover, N.H. came to Cohasset to discuss what type of landfill operation would best suit the needs of the community.

Health board member William Baird told the comany officials that the town now plans to tranfer its waste in open top trailers from the landfill to Penobscot for the next years. "But Paul Barry and Russell Field seem to think it's crazy for the town to spend $400,000 on this operation when they think we can use your equipment," he said. "We want to look at all options."

The transfer station operation has been proposed by health board consultants SEA Associates. The operation will cost about $480,000, according to SEA, which will include the station, compaction equipment, bins site construction costs.

"We have serious concerns with the practicality of sending our trash 240 miles to Maine," member Michael Sullivan explained, noting that the trash will be transported in open top trailers travelling to and from Maine.

Field and Barry have told the health board that other landfills are seeking more refuse. Health Agent Joseph Godzik is contacting various landfills to see what is available for Cohasset, Sullivan explained.

The members of the health board explained that Cohasset generates about 10 tons of refuse each day. But M and M official Galenak replied that a $480,000 transfer station project would seem to accomodate a much larger operation - somewhere on the scale of 1,500 tons per day.

"To go out and develop plans for a station and trailers is very expensive for a two-year period (for the Maine option)," he noted.

Sullivan noted that although some dump study committee members will only consider waste-to-energy disposal facilities, the health board is not opposed to using conventional landfills. "We want something that is the least expensive but can handle this community," he said.

Galenek suggested that the health board investigate available landfills for the two-year interim before they join SEMASS. "Even if the tipping fee is high," he said, "it would probably be better just to stay in this area."

Galanek could not estimate equipment costs for the Cohasset landfill transfer operation, but noted that in Harwich, a town whose summer population grows to 50,000, transfer station equipment cost $110,000.

"Are you saying we could get our equipment for this operation for less than $110,000" Sullivan asked the company officials. Galanek replied affirmatively, but added that he would have to view the landfill and its needs before making a definitive statement.

The health board has about 10 days to decide on alternatives presented to them last week by SEA Associates.

But after a tour of the landfill Monday with M and M Solid Waste Equipment Inc., officials, board members were given an equipment

Developer to move ahead with resort island

The New Jersey businessman noted, "At this point, we're even thinking about installing a glass tunnel underneath the water around the island - something like you'd see at Disney World. People will be able to walk around the tunnel and look at the marine life all around them," he added.

Gugel, 56, a marine consultant and president of Atlantic Cash Express, said he has several investors in this project. One international investment firm, which is headquartered in Boston, contacted him last week to indicate its interest in participating in this project and in a "Taj Mahal" island off the coast of New York and New Jersey.

A Cape Cod resident called to tell Gugel that his latest invention, which converts human waste into non-hazardous materials, is now in production. "It appears that this may be something we could use, and then dispose of the material overboard," Gugel noted.

A Nahant company wrote to the New Jersey man, saying the artificial island was a "fantastic idea," and wished him "the very best for this splendid idea." The company specializes in ultrasonic inspection of welded products. They offered their services with underwater welding and inspection of the support pilings and construction.

Gugel's own company is a dormant corporation, he explained, although he is about to invest more than $6 million into the corporation in order to build a high-speed vessel which will service New Jersey coastal communities.

His ambitious plans have been created from his knowledge of maritime laws, Gugel admitted. His desire is to have the "Arabian Nights" and subsequent islands designated as foreign ports. By having the island named a foreign port, cruise vessels will be able to pick-up and discharge passengers along the eastern seaboard to the various artificial islands he plans along the coast. Foreign-flag ships can take on passengers, but not drop them off unless they visit a foreign port. If "Arabian Nights" is designated foreign, cruise vessels will be able to pick up passengers at the island and drop them off at another East Coast port.

"When asked if this is a dream, I simply answer, of course not. This is reality," Gugel repeated.

Landfill alternative

estimate of $25,000.

The roll-off containers suggested by M and M would be on a concrete pad with a hopper where residents would directly deposit their trash. the refuse would be compacted into the roll-off containers and those containers would be taken direvtly to the disposal site.

SEA Associates, had suggested that construction of a transfer station building, site construction and equipment will cost about $400,000.

Students will work with these elements separately and as a unit to plan, arrange and execute still life drawings.

A Clay for Adults course taught by George Dalton will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7-9:30 p.m. starting August 2. He will teach both hand building and wheel throwing techniques with individual attention given to all skills. He will also teach a Wheel for Kids ages 10-15 on the same days from 4-5:30 p.m.

South Shore artists Rosalind Farbush will teach two courses, Life Drawing on Saturdays 9:30-12:30 p.m. starting August 6 and Outdoor Drawing and Painting on Tuesdays and Thursdays, 9:30-noon. Drawing from a model, her life drawing course concentrates on the basic understanding of the surface structure and form of the human figure. Students will study volume, proportion and the underlying influencing anatomy.

Her Outdoor Drawing and Painting is an intensive study of form using pencil and paint. Students will explore different techniques of creative texture and various methods of paint handling, color and values.

The Center's photography department will offer Beginning Darkroom taught by Amy Whorf and meeting on Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7-10 p.m. Whorf will go through the basic darkroom skills, step-by-step, beginning with "how a camera works." Students will learn how to develop black and white film, how to enlarge and print, buring and dodging techniques and how to mount and matt finished work.

In addition to these weekly classes, the Center Offers three intensive workshops during the month of August, with each workshop zeroing in on a particular art form. A one-day collage workshop taught by Judy Hochberg will be held on Monday, August 1 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. She will explore the ways in which collage may be used as an added dimension in creating works of art.

Berj Kailian will teach a two-day Monoprint Workshop, Thursday and Friday, August 4 and 5, 10-3 p.m. Students will work with papers, textures, brushstrokes and colors as applied to plexiglass and sent through the press.

Margaret Dillon

A memorial service was held July 16, at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church for Margaret (Marshall) Dillon, 57, of Cohasset who died of cancer July 13, at Beth Isreal Hospital in Boston.

Retired director of the South Shore Art Center, she was the driving force behind the center's new $1 million gallery.

Mrs. Dillon was named director of the center in 1976.

Last November, she retired to devote more time to her work in acrylics.

Past president of the Cohasset League of Women Voters, she served on the town's conservation commission, cable TV committee and town hall study committee.

Mrs. Dillon grew up in New Mexico and received a bachelor's degree in art from Pomona College, Claremont, Calif., and did graduate work at the University of Guadalajara, Mexico.

She pursued art studies at the Harwood Foundation in Taos, N.M., the Circolo Di Studenti in Rome, the Art Institute of Boston and the Arts Student League in New York.

While in Italy, Mrs. Dillon taught English to Italian jet pilots at an air base near Rome.

She worked in merchandising in San Francisco and in advertising and merchandising in New Orleans after returning to the United States.

Margaret Dillon with Sheldon Ripley

She and her husband, Warren, met after a friend invited her to come to Boston.

Robin Suhrbier, who does public relations for the art center, described Mrs. Dillon as "just a really special lady."

"We were friends and co-workers for a number of years," said Suhrbier.

"The (South Shore Art Center) building is a living memorial to her dedication and spirit."

Another friend, Jan Daggett, who served as vice president of the art center board, said that Mrs. Dillon was "one of the most organized people that I ever met."

"She was an incredible organizer and administrator," said Daggett, who owns two of Mrs. Dillons paintings.

"She contributed so much to the art center and was a good citizen of the town.

"She was also a very dear and close friend.

"I will miss her sorely, and she will be very much missed by the community.

"There would be no South Shore Art Center if not for Margaret Dillon."

In addition to her husband, she is survived by two sons, Charles M. Dillon of Fitchburg and James E. Dillon of Cohasset, and a daughter, Kathryn Dillon-Schwarz of Cliffside Park, N.J.

She was the mother of the late Phillip Dillon.

Arrangements were by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St.

Donations in Mrs. Dillon's memory may be made to the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, MA, 02025, or to Wellspring Center for Life Enhancement, 3 Otis St., Watertown, MA, 02172, Attn: Rick Ingrasci, M.D.

Burial was in Swampscott Cemetery.

Mrs. Johnson was an accomplished bowler who maintained the highest bowling average at the Cohasset Country Club for many years.

Born and educated in Swampscott, she attended Sargent College.

She lived in Lynn and Quincy before she moved to Cohasset 37 years ago.

Mrs. Johnson was a longtime member of the Cohasset Country Club and its bowling league.

She was also a member of the South Shore Garden Club and the Cohasset Garden Club.

Time to move again

If we may paraphrase something Selectman Rocco Laugelle once said . . . we should all live so long to see sewers in our streets.

Despite the incredible amount of work and an incalculable number of hours spent on the Ward Plan, it looks as if we may be back to square one.

This is an outrageous setback to the three sewer commissioners who have worked on this plan for six years, have battled opponents at six town meetings, and persevered when it seemed hopeless.

The state informed Cohasset officials late last week that money for the construction of our sewer project, including the pipeline into Hull has evaporated. Higher than anticipated construction costs on projects already completed dried up the funds that were to be divided among 46 communities in the state.

Although Cohasset sewer commissioners had been working side-by-side with state officials on the design of the project, there was never one word about the possibility of no funding. Sewer commission chairman Charles DeSantis found the news too "incredible" to believe. Why hadn't anyone from the state been able to warn them that money was drying up and that Cohasset was in danger of losing out?

"All I can say is that something must be wrong with the state's accounting system," he said in exasperation.

Now the town must sit and wait. All engineering work that began has been stopped. Our only valid option at this time is to see if legislation providing supplmental funds will be approved. Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray has indicated there is a good chance at its success, but she doesn't want the bill lying around the state house, waiting until after the September primary. She's going to try to push it through this summer.

Then, perhaps we we once again get moving on this important plan.

We realize there are many strong opponents to the Ward Plan. For various reasons, including personality conflicts, some people object to the commissioners' successful efforts to get the Ward Plan approved.

But personalities should have nothing to do with this issue. The commissioners are volunteers who have spent years of their time, sacrificing family and leisure time for the pursuit of a viable, working sewer plan for the town. Before we criticize their efforts, we must question whether we would have donated the amount of time and the number of headaches to the town. They did not get paid for the work and they received little praise.

But praise was not what they wanted. The commissioners wanted a an affordable sewer plan that would best suit the needs of this community.

They did their job. They were seeing it to the completion, and they were proud of the results.

The state simply took the rug from under them. But these commissioners are nothing if not resilient. We musn't give up hope because they have not. It may take even longer, but eventually we hope to see more sewers in the streets of Cohasset. We should all live so long.

Souppes teens return to Cohasset

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

They may not fully understand the punch line, but the visiting students from Souppes sur Loing laugh about most things in America.

There are four teenagers from our sister-town in France now staying in Cohasset. And although the communication may be rough at times, the message seems to get across. Like typical teenagers, these French visitors giggle and laugh almost continously.

And when asked if they are enjoying their summer vacations in America, they smile broadly, nod with animation, and answer in unison, "Yes!"

For the second summer, members of the Cultural Exchange Committee have arranged a summertime visit to Cohasset for the teenagers of Souppes.

Cecile Prudhomme, 12, her cousin, Dianne Prudhomme, 15, Fredy Frot, 18, and Bruce Vandellos, 16, arrived in Cohasset earlier this month. They all had different reasons for making the trip to America, but they agree it has helped their comprehension of a foreign language, and their understanding of another land.

Cecile Prudhomme

Dianne is the unofficial translator for this closeknit group. This is the second trip to Cohasset for the granddaughter of Mayor Victor Prudhomme. He is the man who helped initiate these transatlantic travels between the two towns.

Dianne has been in Cohasset since July 2 and plans to stay until August 8. In that time, the cultural exchange committee has arranged for her to stay with several families, including the Rousseaus, the Moores, the Chitticks, the Welz family and Abby White.

Dianne Prudhomme

She listens intently to questions, and speaks without hesitation in understandable, fluent English. "I have come here to learn better English," she says. "Two years ago, it was really great. I had lots of fun and I wanted to see Cohasset again. It is a good place to learn English."

She made several friends on her first trip to Cohasset, and is eager to make more. Thus far, she has again visited Boston and loved "the shopping" there. "The universities are great," Dianne says with a wide smile, " someday I would like to study here."

Her cousin, Cecile, is the youngest member of the latest entourage from Souppes. She giggles incessantly, talking briefly in French to her friends while she prepares a thoughtful answer to many questions.

When asked if she liked "junk" food here, she looked puzzled. A quick interpretation by Dianne, resulted in another giggle by Cecile, as she replied, "ice cream."

"Do you eat a lot?" she was questioned. "No," she answered, her eyes downcast, "I'm fat enough." Her friends shared in the laughter.

Cecile, who has spent a lot of time with the Jenkins family on Jerusalem Road, has also displayed an interest in Cheese Doodles and

Sprite, according to Lee Jenkins.

When asked if America appeared the same as she had thought, Cecile says, "Yes. It's awesome."

With some help from Dianne, Cecile says this trip has helped her learn English, "a little bit," she adds, using her thumb and index finger to describe the exact extent.

Frederique prefers to be called Fredy. She is small, deeply tanned and has dark brown hair. She is staying with the Jenkins family, and is part of the household already, along with Jessica and Rebecca Jenkins.

Neighborhood friend Tony Morgan has been a frequent visitor to the Jenkins home since Fredy's arrival. "Every morning I get the call from Rebecca," he says, laughing.

A frequent and energetic shopper, Fredy says she has enjoyed a trip to Quincy Market, and has also attempted waterskiing for the first time during an excursion with the Jenkins to Maine.

"I wanted to know exactly what the United States was," she says, explaining her reason for coming to Cohasset. "I did not want to know only the stereotypes." When asked for her impressions, Fredy answers, "Everything is so big!"

It is the first visit for Bruce who hopes his English will improve with all the practice he has had at the Nourie home. Bruce is the constant companion of Greg Nourie. Together they go to the beach or the town pool, or just "hang out," according to Greg.

The Nouries and their guest recently traveled to Newport, R.I. where they attended a Jai Alai game - a first for everyone. They took the commuter boat to the aquarium in Boston, but have neglected the shopping excursions. "I don't like it," he states emphatically.

The group travelled to Fenway Park to watch a Red Sox victory this past weekend. But perhaps more than anything, the teens from Souppes have enjoyed sightseeing in Cohasset.

"Bruce and I go out with my friends most days," Greg explains. "We've been to the movies and just around town."

Tony says a typical day with Fredy and the Jenkins girls often includes a trip to Sandy Beach or the town pool. When asked if the communication between himself and Fredy has been difficult, Tony says, "I think it's been more of a hassle for her. I'm trying to learn French, so it's more of a hassle for her putting up with me."

Fredy Frot

Rebecca Jenkins has enthusiastically accepted a visitor into her home. "I wanted to host someone from the beginning," she says. "There's been no trouble communicating. We fool around."

"And laugh," Cecile adds.

Ginny Nourie hosted Japanese students in her home, but this was her first participation in the Souppes exchange program. "I thought this would be fun," she adds, noting that trips to Boston and Newport were merely excursions she had been putting off for her own family.

It was also the first time the Chittick family has hosted a visitor from Souppes. It's a wonderful program, she said, and looks forward to her and her children visiting families in France someday.

Lee Jenkins, former chairman of the cultural exchange committee, explained that five Cohasset teens, Diane and Celia Mullen, Rebecca Kirk, Anna Sandell and Liz Warren, are spending varying amounts of vacation time this summer in France. Applications, Jenkins noted, are always at the high school and information is always available from committee members.

"We're always looking for families to host visitors from Souppes, but it's also a wonderful opportunity to visit France," Jenkins says. In addition to host families, all residents are encouraged to meet the Souppes visitors and are welcome to share a day with them.

"We're trying to get the entire community together," she says, adding that Cohasset is the first area community to successfully continue and build upon a sister-city relationship with a foreign country.

Sewer commission shocked by no state funds

Letters

To the Editor:

On July 14, 1988 the State Division of Water Pollution Control (DWPC) notified Cohasset and the other 30 communities on the state's top priority funding list that "state monies to finance currently unfunded projects has been exhausted." This means that the Cohasset Hull-Hingham intermunicipal sewerage project has ceased for lack of state funds.

The Sewer Commission is shocked and outraged by this lack of funding support. First, since it came with no forwarning, and second because up until two days prior to receipt of this letter we had been in contact with DWPC representatives who gave us no reason to believe that such a problem with funds existed. However, the most exasperating aspect of this State administrative debacle is the negation of six years of work by our engineer, legal counsel, the sewer commission, the sewer advisory committee, and the participation of Cohasset citizens at our many town meetings. The Town of Hull had commissioned two costly feasibility evaluations of its system, and had spent with us many, many hours in negotiations. It too feels the terrible frustration of this suspension of state funds.

Frankly, we wonder if it's possible to conduct rational business with the State. Cohasset began this project because the DWPC, acting through the Attorney General, convinced Cohasset to execute an "Agreement for Judgement" which forced Cohasset to improve its waste water disposal operation. Cohasset cooperated with this agreement, by modifying an enviromentally unacceptable and prohibitively costly plan to one that was affordable and in full compliance with the federal environmental regulations. We raised on our own the funds, in anticipation of future State and Federal grants, to plan the project. This Spring we appropriated at Town Meeting the entire local cost for the design and the construction of the project. All we awaited was the DWPC review of our grant application and the award of funds to begin. While we moved along, Hull, this Spring, overwhelmingly adopted the Intermunicipal Agreement at its Town Meeting. At no time did either town have any hint that the State would arbitrarily terminate funding.

Meanwhile, we await future developments from the legislature. We believe its the responsibility of the DWPC to find the mechanism to restore all funds to our project. Anything less than full funding would be an abondonment by the administration of its committment to our project. We remain committed to the removal of our discharge permit violation, the lifting of the sewer ban to our downtown area, town wide septage service, and the extension of sewerage into the hillside and veterans areas with previously authorized FY88 grants.

Sincerely yours,
Charles De Santis

Two important legal points missed in article

To the editor:

The article published in your July 7, 1988 edition related to the Cohasset mooring permit dispute failed completely to mention the two most important legal issues involved in this imbroglio.

First, the attorney for the boat owners — who filed a protest with the Waterways Regulatory Program of DEQE — pointed out clearly that the town by-law which the Cohasset selectmen are attempting to enforce — is "patently illegal". He explained that under Chapter 91 (Sec. 10A) of Massachusetts General Law and the Home Rule Act (Art. 2) local by-laws must conform with the state Harbormaster Regulations. The Cohasset constitutional provisions of the state sanctioned acts must prevail.

Second, the attorney for the boat owners also pointed out that even if the by-law was legal the Town waived its right to enforce it when they failed to advise the boat owners of the April 1 deadline and instead notified them that June 1 was the date — as it had been previously —for many years — under the Harbor regulations which include a "thirty day grace period".

Yet the town counsel, Mr. Richard Henderson advised the selectmen that they must enforce the by-law which clearly states that April 1 is the deadline for the payment of fees. Nonetheless the notice that the boat owners received from the Harbormaster stated that June 1 was the date for payment — a serious error. To compound this error the town sent out bills which were printed in 1988 with this printing paid for by the town — which clearly stated "Harbor User Fees are due and payable by June 1 of each calander year".

The town officials certainly approved the Harbormaster's March 11, 1988 letter and these same officials certainly approved the printing of the bills and paid the printing charges. Both these documents clearly indicated to the boat owners that the state sanctioned Harbor regulations were still being followed — as they have been for the last 19 years. These regulations have always allowed a thirty day grace period and this fact was verified by Mr. Henderson in his June 13 opinion letter sent to the selectmen. But Mr. Henderson has concluded that the by-law should take precedence and that the April 1 deadline should be imposed. His logic escapes me. He makes the further asinine after-the-fact rationalization that "in essence all mooring holders were given a sixty day grace period".

The other seven boat owners and I all feel that the action taken by the selectmen based on the opinion of Mr. Henderson is very much out of order. It is arbitrary and capricious. It is also grossly unfair. We are all reasonable citizens and experienced businessmen. We are not a bunch of common "scofflaws" — as has been implied — who are trying to dodge the payment of legitimate fees. We relied on the practice used for many previous years and truly believed we had a thirty day grace period as in the past. We have held moorings collectively for 149 years! It was the new Harbormaster and the town officials who "goofed" by their mismanagement of the notification process when they used the incorrect date. It appears that they now feel the need to save face by "hardballing" the boat owners.

One other item your article failed to mention is that our attorney has been authorized by us to use the full extent of the law to protect our rights and that if necessary he's been instructed to commence a lawsuit against the Town and the selectmen personally. Hopefully these misguided town officials will reconsider and reverse their decision now that they have been made aware of the applicable laws and the irrational advise given them by Mr. Henderson. If they don't we then intend to see them in court.

Respectfully,
Richard J. Guilfoyle

St. Stephen's Church

The Rev. E. Clifford Cutler, Rector, 383-1083.

VESTRY APPROVES OUTREACH GRANTS —

The Outreach Committee at St. Stephen's is involved in the mission of our church. They have chosen to focus in the areas of hunger and housing in the metropolitan Boston and South Shore areas. The Committee conceives of its mission in terms of Matthew 25:35 — "For when I was hungry, you gave me food . . . when I was a stranger you took me into your home . . ."

At its June meeting the Vestry approved the recommendation from the Outreach Committee that a grant be made to the South Shore Habitat for Humanity, an ecumenical, non-profit housing ministry. Working with volunteer labor and donated funds and materials, Habitat constructs or renovates simple but sturdy homes. These homes are sold at cost to responsible low-income families, and financed through long-term, interest-free mortgages. Payments on the mortgages are recycled as an ongoing Fund for Humanity, to finance additional home construction.

Currently, South Shore Habitat is working on projects in East Bridgewater and Randolph. It is our hope that parishioners will join with First Parish in the fall to become part of the volunteer labor to realize these housing renovations.

Additional proposals for funding were approved to Cohasset FISH which allows many elderly and chronically ill to remain in their homes by providing transportation for them to the Episcopal Church Women of the Diocese of Massachusetts for their Outreach Fund.

GUEST PREACHERS TO CELEBRATE AT ST. STEPHEN'S —

While the Rector is away on vacation we will be privileged to enjoy the ministry of Fr. John Gallop, Bob Kaynor, and Jep Streit. It is always good to have Fr. John back with us. Bob Kaynor is an Episcopal priest currently working in the Planning Office at M.I.T. Jep Streit is the Episcopal Chaplain at Boston University. The Rev. John Gallop will be with us Sundays, July 10 and 17. The Rev. Bob Kaynor will be on hand Sunday, July 24. The Rev. Jep Streit will join us on Sunday, July 31.

Sunday services will continue at 8 and 10 a.m. throughout the summer. Ongoing pastoral care will be provided by the Rev. Peter Sturtevant, our Associate. He may be reached at 383-6222. In emergency you may also contact our Senior Warden, David Pottenger, at 383-0713, or our Junior Warden, Gordon Stevenson at 383-1777.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH MEETS IN DETROIT

The General Convention of the Episcopal Church is meeting in Detroit, Michigan, this week. There are many issues confronting the church at this time. One which has been in the news a lot this year is that of human sexuality. The Presiding Bishop has asked that this issue not take over Convention and that the church with a diversity of opinions remain centered in Christ. The importance of evangelization will also be a pressing concern of this Convention.

I have asked the Rt. Rev. Otis Charles, Dean of the Episcopal Divinity School, who will be present at General Convention to preach at St. Stephen's in September. Bishop Charles will be able to give a first hand report of the matters discussed, and also emphasize the ongoing importance of our church's seminaries.

In October the Adult Education Committee will offer a course on human sexuality which will allow us to follow up on General Convention and prepare for our own Diocesan Convention in November. We will look at sexuality from the basis of Scripture, tradition, and reason.

THE DIFFERENT DRUM

The Different Drum is a new book about "community" as "a unique way of communicating, of sharing our deepest thoughts and feelings without fear or guilt." It is about ways we can join together to "overcome our prejudices, transcend our differences, and learn to accept and love ourselves and each other."

We have purchased copies of the book for St. Stephen's library. Several of us will join together to discuss the book informally on Thursday, July 21, at 7:30 p.m. at the church.

Please join us if you are interested, or let us know if you are interested but busy that evening.

Chris Abbruzzese (383-9317); Ed Hoyt (327-8210, 964-1100 Ext. 287); Gordon Stevenson (383-1777, 725-1378).

Post office offers vacation tips

Before leaving on vacation, several simple steps can make sure your mail is handled smoothly while you're away, according to the U.S. Postal Service.

Ask a neighbor or relative to remove mail and newspapers from your mailbox daily or have your mail held at the post office.

A written request to hold mail up to 30 days can be given to your letter carrier or submitted at your local post office.

If an extended absence is anticipated, a temporary mail forwarding order can be requested.

To help prevent your home from being burglarized while you're away, the Postal Service stresses the importance of not letting mail accumulate in your mailbox, a sign even novice burglars can detect.

Other tips include taking an ample supply of stamps and postal cards on your trip and remembering to take the addresses and ZIP Codes of those to whom you may write. Don't forget, standard post cards only require 15-cents postage, while letters weighing one ounce or less and oversize post cards need a 25-cent stamp.

Season wrap-up for Cohasset Pony League

By Elaine Fahey

This may be old news to most readers, but for you baseball aficionados whodon't know. . . the Braves won the '88 championship by sweeping the best of three series from the Mets.

Game 1 featured a grand slam home run by Tim Conroy who split the pitching chores with Doug Ellinger. Game 2 was keyed by budding stars Michael Lennon and Andy Church with hits off the hard throwing Chris Rolandelli.

In other playoff action, the Red Sox and the Yankees battled for boasting rights. Game 1 went to the Red Sox in an explosive offensive display. Every Sox player had at least one hit. Jim Magner, Jeff Littlehale and Ryan Freeman had multiple-hit games. Nicky Wilg and Greg Stevens combined pitching chores for the Sox. Tim Brister had two triples and a single to provide most of the Yankee offense, but Ryan Freeman and Chip Moore (playing short and second for the Sox) made superb defensive play to quell Yankee surges. Game 2 went to the Yanks with Reynolds pitching and Tim Brister again providing the bulk of the offense. In addition he was like a Kirby vacuum cleaner at shortstop and robbed half-a-dozen Sox of hits. In short, he was the difference.

At this point, I personally want to thank all my Red Sox for a season of fun and progress. You kids are a manager's dream and I predict great success for you next year. I wish to thank John Rolandelli and Barbara Rolandelli simply for their organization. I want to acknowledge all the parents' toil in the concession stand, the kids who umpire, the sponsors who make it all possible, and the coaches who keep the managers sane, particularly mine. Thanks to everybody.

I also must pay tribute to one of Cohasset's entries in the Scituate-Pony League, the Mets, sponsored by Cohasset Savings Bank. These Mets are managed by Town Counsel Rich Henderson, who deftly steered this team to the league championship with a 13-1 record.

To briefly profile the team defensively: Mike Rolandelli (that's Big Rollie) and Evan Spencer did the bulk of the pitching and it need be said they were masterful. Gritty Nate Fiore did most of the catching with occasional help from Rolandelli and Kevin Mulcahy. Evan and Mike split first base when not pitching. Steady and ever-improving Peter Fahey nailed down the second-base slot by mid-season. Gregarious Tom Reardon played everywhere and anywhere whenever needed. Kevin Mulcahy roamed the turf at short and John Geary was an anchor at third. Centering the outfield with a cannon and gold-glove was Topher Henderson. Flanking him were John Brister, Danny DeMichele and Doug Schultz.

Offensively: Rollie, Spencer, Fiore and Geary were the big guns. They hit rockets all over the fields as if in continuous celebration of our nation's holiday. Kevin Mulcahy must have walked a hundred times and stolen a thousand bases. Topher Henderson contributed the occasional long ball and good base-running. Pete Fahey found his stroke and drove in important runs late in the campaign. Danny DeMichele was a thrill-a-minute; Tommy Reardon was a terror. Everyone contributed —this was a team!

Lastly, many thanks to Robert McCullock, sponsor of the other Pony League entry — Bob's Coffee Haus Yankees. Though equally talented as the Mets, this year they were not as successful, but should contend in '89. See you then!

Cohasset well represented in Bay State Games

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

At the sixth annual 1988 Bay State Games, Massachusetts own Olympic-style high school sports festival, four Cohasset residents captured gold medals and another took two silver medals.

Bryan Edwards, a recent Cohasset High graduate who will be attending Boston College in the fall, led his Men's Open (college-age players) Basketball team to a 102-99 nail-biting victory over Northeast in the gold medal contest. The state's all-time high school scoring leader chipped in with a game-high 31 points — 18 on three pointers. He shot perfectly from the foul line as well, connecting nine out of 10 attempts. However, the real emphasis of last week's Bay State Games was to find out if Edwards could adjust to the college game.

"I just wanted people to know I'm capable of playing with Division One players. A lot of people said I'd have to prove myself because I played at a Div. Three high school (Cohasset.) Physically, I was ready but I had to prepare mentally."

Edward's high school coach Eddie Minelli, watching him work for the first time with new teammate Dana Barros, the premier point-guard in the Big East Conference observed: "They'll work well together at BC. I think Bryan will handle the ball more, especially in halfcourt situations. I just hope he convinced everyone at the game that he can play college ball. I know one thing, Bryan will be missed."

Also in attendance at UMass-Boston was Edward's new college coach Jim O'Brien. When asked about his impressions on the Barros-Edward's backcourt tandem, he said: "He gives us some flexibility in the backcourt. Bryan has shown he can bring the ball up. Whether or not he is able to do this successfully against the big-time schools, we just have to wait. Nevertheless, Bryan will get some playing time, either playing alongside with Dana or subbing for him."

In their first game as teammates, Barros scored 33 points — 21 on three-pointers — and Edwards added 10 as Metro (players from the Boston Area) defeated Southeast, 94-85, July 13th. Despite Edward's low output in the opener, it was a three-point play late in the game by him that sealed the victory.

The other gold medal winners for Cohasset were Sara Bishop, Kristin Ellinger, and Bill Fallon. The triumvirate were instrumental in leading the Southeast Girls Scholastic team to a 73-70 victory over Northeast in the Championship game at Boston College. However, the actual catalyst was Foxboro's Sara Behn. The high school senior pumped in 40 points, breaking her BSG single-game scoring record for the third time in the tourney. She also contributed with 18 out of 21 free throws and dished out eight assists.

"That's why she's the best," said Southeast's coach Fallon, who moved Behn to point guard from small forward in order to offset Northeast's half-court defense. "When the game's on the line she takes over."

Ellinger, meanwhile, collected two points and played superbly on defense. Because Southeast abandoned their outside shooting due to Northeast's tenacious defense, Bishop was held scoreless.

"Kristin is the best athlete on the team," Fallon said, "we use her for her defense and rebouding. Sara is more offensive, she's one of our best outside shooters."

During the tournament, Fallon utilized their traits by alternating the two on offensive and defensive possessions.

A case in point occurred earlier in the Games. In their opening round against Metro July 13th, Southeast was without their superstar Behn, who had a prior committment to play in the Amatuer Athletic Union's Junior Olympic tournament in Miami, Fl. (the New England entry finished ninth out of 41 teams competing in the 16-and-younger age bracket) the same night.

As a result, Fallon, who coaches at Cohasset High, looked to two of his own, Ellinger and Bishop, for inspiration. Unfortunately, the team could not overcome a strong and deep Metro squad, a 70-60 loss.

The reason Fallon relied on them was because of their familiarity with the Cohasset offense that he used extensively in the Games.

"With Sara and Kristin you have two players who know the offense," said Jason Proodian, Fallon's assistant coach who also picked up a gold medal, "which makes it a lot easier to coach the team."

Ellinger and Bishop, who will be seniors in the fall, didn't seem to mind the heavy burden in the beginning, understanding that they consume certain individual skills.

In other results, Sarah Trask grabbed two silver medals in swimming, one in the 400 freestyle relays and the other in the 200 medley relays.

State says no more money for sewers referendum, the town appropriated almost $3 million toward the project.

Engineering surveys had been initiated in recent weeks, he said. But all work has been ceased and no further money will be expended, "until the dust settles," Vanderweil said.

"Abbsolutely astounding news," was sewer commission chairman Charles DeSantis' reaction to the letter from the DWPC. "It's incredible because we had been working side-by-side with the state all this year - right up to this announcement a few days ago when state engineers were reviewing our site application. There was never a hint that no money was left. This is totally out of the blue."

Engineers had been hired by the sewer commission to complete a survey to be used in the design application for the project. That application was to be forwarded to the state for approval and construction funding by Sept. 1.

"The total contract for the engineering work was $58,000. I'm not sure what has been spent at this point, but we have called a stop to all work and no further funds will be used," DeSantis said.

DeSantis said the letter, which arrived last Thursday at the sewer department offices, was "a total surprise. We had been working with the DWPC until Wednesday and no mention was made about money problem. "I can't believe some state accountant couldn't have predicted this shortfall long ago. We really question the administrative skills there," he added.

As outlined in the letter sent by DWPC director McMahon, there are three alternatives the department is currently reviewing. According to the director, legislation has been filed to provide additional money for the planning, design, and construction of critical waste pollution abatement project.

In the meantime, he stated, the DWPC is preparing emergency regulations which will allow towns to go ahead with the planning and design of these systems, with subsequent reimbursement if state monies become available in the future.

"I'd say that was highly risky and unsound," DeSantis commented, adding that he hoped the legislation is successful and approved quickly.

Although DWPC officials do not sound optimistic, Rep. Murray said state legislators are more convinced that funding will be found.

Steve Angelo, chairman of the House Natural Resources Committee, agreed with Rep. Murray that "something has to be done for our towns," she noted. "About 45 cities and towns received the same letter last week."

Rep. Murray supports legislation filed by Rep. Emmett Hayes of Whitman which will supplement funds for the state's wastewater projects. "The committee chairman believes we will get some money," Rep. Murray said.

The problem is that funding must be approved in informal session prior to the September primary. If the legislature delays a vote on this bill, she said, it will be held up until after the primary when formal sessions are continued.

"When Senate President William Bulger comes back (from Atlanta) this week, I'm really going to push to get this bill passed in informal session. I'm so disturbed about these recent events - I've worked hard to help get this project completed," she added.

"In behalf of the sewer commission, we are outraged for the loss of funds for us and more than 40 other communities across the state," DeSantis said.

The loss of state funding means at least a temporary end to the plan which would have hooked Cohasset's sewage by pipe into the Hull treatment plant. Town meetings in both communities approved the concept last spring, and the design was in the midst of completion.

"We're terribly disappointed," the commission chairman said. "I don't know what's going to happen to us now. In terms of the legislation that's been filed, we just don't know what its chances are of being enacted. If there is a high probability, we'll just sit and wait. But if it means we have to sit and wait for a year, then we'll have to evaluate other options."

If passage of the supplemental funds is merely a month or so away, DeSantis said the delay could be construed as "a hiccup in the project."

He added, "but if there is an indefinite delay of funding, then we have some serious thinking to do. We've spent six years on this project. We've spent a lot of time and money. I believe seven or eight town meetings had some bearing on this project. The Town of Cohasset is exhausted and the sewer commissioners are outraged.

"The state has allowed us to go 99 percent down the road with this program and now that we have 20 more feet to go, they tell us there's no more pot of gold. It's terribly discouraging."

Commissioner Vanderweil agreed that at the moment, they will wait to see if the supplemental funds become available "or we'll have to propose something else. I don't know what at this point," he said. "We have a grant application for the state. Maybe we'll use the time to polish that up. That's about all we can do with the program at this point.

"We're extremely disappointed. We have worked an immense amount of time for six years on this - and then at the last possible moment . . . this," he added.

Summer recreation programs...

More than 150 swimmers will participate in swim for heart July 25 from 1-4 p.m., at the Cohasset Swim Center. This event is the first in Cohasset and will include the local swim team among its participants.

Swimmers will solicit pledges for the number of laps they can complete in one hour. Proceeds from the event will be donated to the American Heart Association to fund cardiovascular research, and public and professional education programs.

Swim for Heart is a national event designed to educate swimmers about the cardiovascular benefits of swimming while raising research dollars. Support the Swim for Heart and the American Heart Association by obtaining a registration form beginning July 11, at the town hall and the swim center.

MUSIC CIRCUS REGISTRATION

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registration for the fourth Music Circus performance, Rumplestiltskin" Thursday, July 21, from 9 a.m. to noon, and again Thursday, from 6 to 7:30 p.m., at Town Hall. The show date for "Rumplestiltskin" is Thursday, August 4. Performances are at the group rate cost of $3.75 per child.

Children will leave from the playground at 10 a.m., and will be walked back to the playground about noon.

The next Music Circus registration will be held Thursday, July 28, for "Cinderella". The show date is Thursday, August 11.

PLAYGROUND SPECIAL EVENTS

See Ted at the playground for a copy of the special event trip calendar. Most special activities and field trips will be done on a self-supporting basis; requiring a per capita fee charge at the time of registration. All events/trips will be registered at the playground.

Regular playground will continue for the children who do not wish to participate on field trips — most trips will be limited in size.

FACILITY PERMIT HOURS

Regular issuance times for Cohasset facility permits will end Saturday, July 16, at noon.

Hours of issuance from Monday, July 18, through Friday, August 26, are as follows: Monday's, Wednesday's, Friday's 10 to noon only, or by appointment.

If you have not yet purchased your 1988 facility permit which is needed for the disposal area, Sandy Beach and Government Island parking, you may register during the stated hours, or you may call the Recreation Department at 383-6791 for an appointment.

In order to purchase a permit you will need either your automobile registration, or a photo copy of it. If your Cohasset address does not appear on your auto registration, you will further need proof of residency, such as a real estate or excise tax bill, or a copy of your rental agreement or purchase and sales agreement.

Boy Scouts award

At the 1988 Old Mills District Awards Dinner Friday, May 6, John Bryant of Troop 28 in Cohasset received a Unit Award, along with Linda Farrag of Pack 38.

Several members of Old Mills District were cited for their work in the past year. Among them was Merle Brown of Cohasset for the Klondike Derby, and Earle Bestick of Cohasset for the Webelos Weekend.

Art Lehr of Cohasset was chosen to receive the William H. Spurgeon award for his work in Exploring.

Conservation trust explains Salt House sale

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

A member of the Conservation Trust charged that selectmen misconstrued their intentions to sell the historic Old Salt House on Cohasset Harbor.

Trustee Richard Leggat said selectmen are "far off the mark" in their perception of what the late Jessie Cox's reaction would be to the impending sale of the property she deeded to the conservation trust in 1974.

Trustees have almost completed negotiations for the sale of the Cohasset Harbor structure. The new owner intends to use the property as a ship's chandlery with docking facilities.

At the July 11 selectmen meeting, chairman Burt Pratt said Mrs. Cox would have been upset at the proposed sale.

Selectmen voted unanimously to pursue a possible eminent taking of the property which has been under the jurisdiction of the trust for more than 10 years.

They also voted at the July 25 meeting to ask trust members to attend their meeting to discuss the issue.

There are some strong differences of opinion on the proposed sale.

"Having been the trustee involved in the acquisition of the properties from Mrs. Cox, I can assure you that you are far off the mark in your perception of what her reaction might be," stated Leggat in a July 20 letter to selectmen.

"When the Salt House was acquired from Mrs. Cox a lady whose generosity and devotion to the well-being of the town of Cohasset is legendary, there was no condition that the property be retained in perpetuity by the trustees.

"Mrs. Cox clearly wanted the property to be retained in an aesthetically pleasing manner, consistent with the attributes that the harbor bestows on the area.

"Mrs. Cox had rebuilt the Salt House in the 1960s. Her gift of the property to the trust was motivated among other reasons by a desire to be relieved of responsibility for its operation.

"Subsequent to the gift, Mrs. Cox also generously provided funds for rebuilding the wharf to assure that it was in good condition."

Leggat said that the trustees have decided to dispose of the property for a number of reasons.

Liability of the gas and oil pumping operation was among the reasons, Jack Hubbard, chairman of the conservation trust, told selectmen at an earlier meeting.

"We can't buy any type of environmental insurance against gas and oil spills in the harbor," explained Hubbard.

"We felt that this operation was getting less and less away from what our original intent was — to preserve

Delegate returns from a 'special' convention

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Donna McGee, the alternate delegate to the Democractic National Convention from this district, carries a painful memory of Michael Dukakis.

"It was right after his defeat for a second term as governor," she recalled. "I was attending a mid-term issues convention in Memphis in 1978 and Michael was also there. But I remember he was sitting by himself, because no one wanted to be seen next to a loser."

Today, the director of personnel and labor relations for the Executive Office of Human Sevices has much happier thoughts. Governor Michael Dukakis has traveled the road from "loser" to the 1988 Democratic candidate for the Presidency of the United States.

"It has been an astounding comeback," she said.

McGee has lived in Cohasset for 24 years, and has been a member of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee for the past ten years. She has been chairman of that group for eight years and most recently won election as a delegate to the national convention.

The 1988 convention was her fourth national presdential forum, but this one was "very, very special" for the Hill Street resident.

"After his defeat in 1978, Michael learned how to be part of a team. He learned many things from that defeat and he was re-elected. It was an honor to see his extraordinary success," she said.

That astounding defeat for the incumbent

Sandy Beach reopened

Sandy Beach was reopened Wednesday following a one-day shutdown caused by raw sewage that washed up on shore this week.

Dr. Joseph Godzik, Cohasset's health agent, ordered the beach closed Tuesday afternoon after he inspected the water and found raw sewage, including at least two medical syringes in the debris.

Although bacterial tests were taken, results would not have been prepared until late Wednesday afternoon. As a precautionary measure, the health agent ordered the beaches closed.

By Wednesday morning, Dr. Godzik said the water was clear and the beach was reopened.

Dr. Godzik was alerted to the situation by Bob Simmons, chief lifeguard at Sandy Beach. Simmons had found two, 1 c.c. syringes which were washed ashore amidst other raw sewage

Panagia Church working to bring 1996 Olympics back to Greece

The 100th anniversary of the modern Olympic games will be celebrated in 1996. And some members of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church of Cohasset are working to see that the event is held where it all started — in Athens, Greece.

"Once every 100 years isn't too much," said George Lazaris of Cohasset, who explained that the last time the games were held in Athens was in 1896.

Some games were held there in 1906 but they weren't recognized by the International Olympic Committee.

He and another church member, Peter Booras, are spearheading a fundraising drive to help Greece pay for such things as buildings, swimming pools and tracks that will be needed if the games are held there.

According to Lazaris, a decision on the location will be made by 1990.

Canada, France and Yugoslavia are also interested in the 1996 summer games, he said.

"The president of the National Olympic Committee said in the newspapers that Greece has the biggest chance," said Lazaris.

"He said if Greece keeps working the way it is, we don't have to be afraid of anything."

A track and field stadium has already been constructed in anticipation of the event, he said.

"We want to support the 'Golden Olympics'," said Lazaris.

"We hope to raise $50,000," he said, while explaining that a committee is being formed to handle the details.

Plans are already underway to sell "Golden Olympics" t-shirts and other items at the second Greek Taverna August 20-21, at the church, 819 Jerusalem Rd.

We want to get the message across that the Olympic games don't have to do with politics.

George Lazarus

The first one was held over the July 4 weekend.

Workers at the first taverna wore "Golden Olympics" t-shirts as a show of support, according to Lazaris, who decided they would also make a good fundraising item.

Another fundraiser will take place Nov. 28, at the Golden Rooster during a $75 to $100 a ticket evening of food, speeches and possibly some films about the event.

In addition, Lazaris has enlisted the help of the Greek Consul, Christos Panagopoulos.

"He said he would give us any help that he could," said Lazaris, "and would spread the word among other churches."

Lazaris, who was born in a Greek town five miles from Athens and came to the United States in 1978, plans to return to his native country for a visit in September.

He hopes to get an idea of what the money raised in this country can go towards for the Olympics.

"We are going to work as hard as we can on this," said Lazaris, who attended the Olympic games in Los Angeles in 1984.

Cohasset's week . . .

Andrew goes to Everett

Aug. 5 will be the last day of work for Donald Andrew, Cohasset's executive secretary, who is leaving to become city auditor of Everett.

He told selectmen the news at the July 25 meeting.

Andrew had told them last month that he did not wish to have his contract renewed. It would expire at the end of December.

He said he learned last Friday that he had been selected for the job in Everett.

"I'm excited about it," said Andrew, 37, a resident of Brookline who will have a much shorter commute to the new job which starts Aug. 15.

He will use vacation time from his Cohasset position starting Aug. 8.

"Congratulations on your new position," said selectmen chairman Burt Pratt. "I want to thank you for your work on the board."

"Good luck in the new position," said selectman Rocco Laugelle.

Selectman James Gallagher said, "I regret the loss of a good man."

Andrew said the position of Cohasset executive secretary is being advertised in the Municipal Association Bulletin due out any day.

Until a new executive secretary is hired, Administrative Assistant Janet Chalke will take over many of Andrew's duties.

EOCD meeting

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew will meet next week with Clark Ziegler of the Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) to discuss how the town can implement a housing agreement.

The state recently rejected the town's latest attempt to compile a housing agreement, because the housing authority failed to approve the document.

In a discussion earlier this month with Joseph Flatley, assistant secertary of EOCD, Selectman Chairman Burt Pratt asked what steps could be taken to implement the housing agreement. Without a state-approved agreement, all state discretionary grants to Cohasset have been withheld.

In reply to Pratt's inquiry, Asst. Secretary Flatley said the agreement submitted by the town last October would be satisfactory, if it is updated. The state rejected that version of the housing agreement because the planning board failed to endorse it.

Executive Secretary Andrew is meeting with the EOCD official next week to outlined exactly what procedures must be followed to implement the agreement.

Town loses in lottery

The town will not receive $57,306 in state revenue this year because of the state budget woes and the $91 million in local aid slashed by Governor Michael Dukakis.

The town was advised this week that because of the $91 million state budget veto by Gov. Dukakis, Cohasset will receive less than it might have from the annual state cherry sheet revenues.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew explained that this money, which is an allotment from state lottery sales, was not expected and not computed into the town's tax rate. "The $57,306 is money we would have had if the $91 million veto had not gone through," he explained. "In other words, we would have had this money if the state did not have to cut its own budget."

That money will not be taken from the original $1,557,064 the state expected to give Cohasset this year. It is simply a surplus the town would have received if the governor had not vetoed the $91 million.

"It's a significant amount to a town like Cohasset," Andrew said. "That amount could mean a capital project we can't fund, or a couple of jobs we can't have, or a capital purchase we can't make now.

"But it's not going to change our budget in any way," he continued. "This was excess lottery money that we never were notified about anyway. But the fact is, we won't be getting it now."

The lottery money, which is part of the total state revenues to each town, is placed in the town's general fund for the town's operating expenses.

"What it means to Cohasset is that we'll have a little less to spend this year," Andrew said.

. . . Cohasset's week

There may be a way

In response to an inquiry from the highway department surveyor, town counsel has determined there may still be a way in which a front end loader may be purchased by that department.

Surveyor Harold Litchfield questioned whether the $50,000 front end loader could be purchased since town meeting voted to buy the equipment, although it was defeated by a subsequent Proposition 2 1/2 override ballot.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson noted that it is still possible to purchase the equipment. He called the opinion "conditional," saying the truck can only be purchased if it does not exceed the levy limt. If that is not the case, the equipment may not be bid, he determined.

Septage waste grant

The South Shore Coalition has been awarded a $37,800 grant by the state Executive Office of Communities and Development to develop a regional plan to manage septage waste for 10 towns.

The grant will be administered by Jean Christensen, executive director of the coalition, and Martin Pilsbury of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council.

Pilsbury previously has worked with the coalition in its groundwater study.

Said Hanover Selectman Janet O'Brien: "Martin is interested in protecting the groundwater, and I see a quality of life issue as protecting the surface water."

O'Brien has served as the project coordinator of the North and South River pollution study and cleanup.

Christensen said the grant will be used to review current practices of septage waste disposal within the 10-town region; to identify all septage haulers; to forecast future demand; to review options for collection and disposal and to develop an action plan.

In announcing the grants, Michael Tierney, assistant EOCD secretary, said he was impressed with the leadership among the communities in the South Shore Coalition.

During the next three days, $850,000 will be distributed to 22 communities and eight regional groups for strategic planning.

Tierney also presented Marshfield representatives with a $15,000 planning grant to review land use controls along the Route 139 corridor from Pembroke to the ocean.

And, a $25,000 grant was awarded to Scituate to develop new land use strategies in the Greenbush area which will emphasize the physical and economic impacts of growth.

Lottery opposition

Both Sen. William Golden and State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray both expressed their opposition to the state's plan to divert state lottery funds from local communities to the state treasury.

Selectmen recently wrote a letter to state officials, outlining their opposition to the plans to balance the state budget by diverting funds from local cities and towns.

Rep. Murray stated, "My own stand has always been that state government must be responsive to the taxpayer and our cities and towns. The majority party at the State House does not look at any issue in that manner. The lottery money has been set aside for the cities and towns and the communities are entitled to all of this money."

Sen. Golden thanked the local officials for their letter. amd noted, "I am opposed to this approach to achieve a solution to our current fiscal problems."

governor in 1978 taught Dukakis many things. "He's a lot smarter now," she stated. "He still has the integrity he had then, but he understands the meaning of coalition government and he knows how to bring people in to help with decisions."

In that re-election defeat, Dukakis repelled many human services advocates by his budget reductions including McGee's boss, current Human Services Secretary Philip Johnston. But he convinced Johnston in 1980 that things would be different in his second term, and the needs of the poor would be met by his administration. Johnston and McGee were convinced and have remained staunch supporters of the governor.

Although McGee is optimistic that Dukakis will defeat likley Republican challenger George Bush, she predicts it will be no cakewalk. "As close as five percentage points" is how McGee estimates that margin of Dukakis' victory.

A fight for the White House will not be slowly surrendered by the incumbent Republicans, she said. But Dukakis, unlike Mondale four years ago, has a super-organized and well-financed campaign.

"On the flight home, I sat next to a man who was running the Dukakis campaign in one of the states. He told me they already had 37 state coordinators in place, ready to begin work Monday morning. That's at least a month ahead of schedule compared to Mondale's campaign four years ago," she stated.

It will take a lot of hard work, McGee surmised. "But that's what he's demonstrated before," she noted. "There's no fooling around now."

Although she admittedly does not possess an objective opinion about Michael Dukakis, McGee believes he is the best candidate for the job. She cited his managerial expertise, and pointed to the possible public confrontation that could have arisen between the candidate and political rival Jesse Jackson.

"While the entire country was watching for a potentially serious situation, what we saw was Michael walking away without giving up the candy store and without hurt feelings. That," she said, "is a classic example of coalition government and that is type of leader Michael Dukakis is.

"Not that he won't have problems as president," McGee admitted. "But that is an example of how he handles problems. He has the capacity to think things through."

The state's budget woes, which McGee quickly added is not "a mess" as described by some. "The same thing is happening in most communities, with revenues slowing down and federal tax changes. Cohasset solved its problems and the same will happen with the state.

"Michael will not leave this state in the same financial condition as Reagan will leave Washington," she added. "Whoever is president is going to inherit a huge deficit. That's why it's so important to have a manager in there - not just a figure head."

Careful not to "bubble" over in her enthusiasm for the candidate, McGee said the most emotional night for the Massachusetts delegation was certainly when the nominee gave his acceptance speech. "He was energized by the crowd," she recalled, remembering that the floor of the Atlanta Omni hall was actually pulsating with the beat of the music and the jumping of thousands of delegates.

"They spent two days lowering our expectations of his speech. So no one expected such a speech. He fed off the crowd. Although the speech was not that different from anything else he had ever said, it was the way he delievered it that was astounding.

"All of sudden, Michael was up there on the podium - he was presidential. All of sudden he became presidential and it was uncanny," she said.

She thought back to the day when Dukakis announced his intention to run more than a year ago atop a small podium in Boston Common. "We stood there and listened to him and thought "oh, this will be fun.' But now we're really thinking, he could actually be the leader of the free world. He has run a nearly flawless campaign, and has been a respectful candidate throughout. There are no skeletons in his closet.

Donna McGee

"We keep thinking, he just might make it."

And if McGee is beckoned by the Dukakis administration in Washington, D.C. next year, would she accept?

She thought for a while, mumbled something about that being only a remote possibility in the distant future - a scenario she has not even discussed with her family.

She answered, "yes!"

Selectmen ask for extension on house move

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

The town will need more than 60 days to remove a house developer Donald Staszko has offered the town for affordable housing, selectmen said Monday night.

Members voted to ask for an extension of the offer which Staszko made June 28.

"I don't believe we can do it within 60 days," said chairman Burt Pratt.

"The building inspector said that it is a sound building," said Pratt of the four-bedroom house at the corner of Sohier St. and Route 3A.

In his report, Building Inspector Donald G. Robbins said, "The basic house is very sound, and is probably well worth saving if possible."

The addition on the rear should not be moved, he said.

New plumbing and heating is needed, according to Robbins, and the house should be rewired.

"The exterior should be stripped down to the sheating and resided, re-roofed and insulated," said Robbins.

"I am awaiting an estimate from a building mover so that you can have a handle on this cost.

"This is a four-bedroom house, which with a small addition to include a kitchen and bath, would be a step in the right direction for the town.

"I think that there may be state grant money available which would make this even more attractive," said Robbins.

The Fair Housing Committee recently approved the offer, according to the Rev. E. Clifford Cutler of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

"The consensus of the committee was that this is a positive step in the direction of affordable housing," stated Rev. Cutler in a June 30 letter to selectmen.

"Following the meeting, I personally inspected the parcel of land on 3A to which the town could move this house.

"I believe the land to be eminently suitable for the purpose of affordable housing."

In other action, selectmen:

• Voted to obtain an estimate for the removal of two abandoned underground storage tanks to the rear of the police and fire departments.

Chairman Burt Pratt said the board will wait for a ruling from the attorney general's office regarding storage tanks owned by residents.

The business is in the process of being sold, according to proprietor James Finucane.

• Granted a one day all alcoholic license to the George H. Mealy Post, American Legion, for a clambake Sept. 10, noon to sunset, at Sandy Beach.

Finance officer John Burke said proceeds will go to a scholarship fund.

• Approved two parking spaces for the Harbor Department.

• Granted to the Community Center one day, all alcoholic beverage licenses for Aug. 21 and 27, 8 p.m. to midnight, and use of the common Oct. 1, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., (rain date Oct. 8,) and Oct. 30, 1 to 3 p.m.

No action was taken on requests for all alcoholic licenses for Sept. 7, 10, 17, and Oct. 22.

Selectmen will check with the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission on whether the center should apply for a club license to sell liquor at functions.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he was concerned about the number of children at the center.

"I just don't think a community center is a place to sell liquor," he said.

Cohasset man at conference

In a "Move the Hands" press conference on the front lawn of the U.S. Capitol, Cohasset businessman Christy Mihos helped remind all Americans to prepare for Daylight Saving Times (DST.)

The press conference, which featured Mihos as event host, celebrated the three symbolic beginnings of spring (Easter, the arrival of Daylight Saving Time, and the opening of the Major League Baseball Season.)

Mihos, who is President and CEO fo Christy's Markets of Brockton, was selected to host the event by the National Association of Convenience Stores (NACS.) NACS sponsored the press conference in an effort to remind Americans to move their clocks ahead one hour so as not to miss Easter Services.

According to Mihos, who currently serves on the NACS Board of Directors, the Associaton sponsors the press conference each year to remind Americans of the time change and thank Congress for the extended DST.

A graduate of Stonehill College and Harvard Business School's O.P.M. program, Mihos is past President of the New England Convenience Store Association.

Cohasset Jewelers sponsors estate sale

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

A $33,000 Art Deco platinum and diamond bracelet with 30 carats of round and baguette diamonds will be among the show pieces at Cohasset Jewelers 3rd annual Million Dollar Antique & Estate Jewelry Show Aug. 3 to 6.

Hours will be 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., longer than the store's usual hours.

A preview show and sale will take place Tuesday, Aug. 2, 6 to 9 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

A portion of the show proceeds will be donated to the South Shore Art Center, Cohasset.

"It's a wonderful offer by Cohasset Jewelers," said Joel Conrad, art center executive director.

Art work from the center will also be displayed for sale, he said.

"We're anticipating a good crowd," said Mark Cirone, an owner of the family business at 790A Route 3A, Cohasset, with his parents, Jerry and Netta, and brother, Don.

The business is beginning its seventh year.

"Last year, over 1,000 people came through the store for the show," said Cirone.

"It's been well-received. Otherwise, we wouldn't have done it three years in a row."

Over $1.4 million in jewelry was sold at last year's show which featured 746 items, according to Cirone.

This year's show will include over 1,000 items filling five display cases, he said.

A sampling of some of the other items to be offered at the show are a platinum diamond solitaire ring with antique cushion cut diamond weighing 4.96 carats, $29,500; 14-carat diamond and coral brooch by David Webb, $9,500; an 18-carat Vacheron-Constanin trapezoid shaped man's bracelet watch, $12,500; an 18-carat woman's Rolex lamp post bracelet with watch, $2,500, and an Art Nouveau 14-carat enamel Tiger bangle bracelet.

But don't let the prices scare you away.

"Items such as pins and brooches start at $50," said Cirone.

Antiques expert Shalom Bronstein will be available Wednesday and Friday, Aug. 3 and 5, to give information, but not appraisals, about jewelry which people bring to the store.

"There is a huge interest in estate jewelry," said Cirone.

"It's better crafted, and a very good buy.

"It's also one third - to one half off the price.

Estate jewelry isn't necessarily old, he explained. "It could have been bought a week ago," he said.

But antique jewelry must be at least 100 years old.

The different periods of jewelry are Georgian, 1740-1830; Victorian, 1840-1900; Art Nouveau, 1890-1910; Edwardian, 1910-1930; Art Deco, 1928-1940; and Retro, 1940s, he explained.

"People look at estate or antique jewelry as a little more romantic," said Cirone.

"It has a story behind it."

For example, a sapphire and diamond brooch with platinum and 18-carat gold from the late 1920s to early 1930s will be sold for about $1,200.

"It would cost double if it were made today," he said.

"There is an attention to detail that you just don't see today."

Conrad said the South Shore Art Center is pleased to be associated with the show.

"It shows their interest in visual art and education offered at the center," he said.

"They are giving us a very generous percentage.

"They are very, very good to give us part of the proceeds of the show."

He said the money will go towards general operating expenses of the non-profit organization.

"It costs $600 every day that the center is open," said Conrad.

"That goes for salaries, building, classes, utilities.

"It's a healthy amount of money that we spend.

"Being non-profit, we depend on contributions and donations as a source of revenue.

"We have classes, art work, and a gift shop with items for sale.

"But we still have to seek other sources."

Conrad said that the art center does receive some funding from the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency, the Arts Lottery Council, as well as private foundations and corporations, and private donors.

In operation for over 30 years, the art center is now located in a new, $1.2 million facility in Cohasset Village, he noted.

Conrad also added that the center has satellite locations from Cohasset to Quincy.

"We're trying to promote the art center as a regional facility, and along with that pay expenses," he said.

Cirone invited residents to come to the antique and estate jewelry show.

"Come in and browse," he said.

"We've got five cases full of jewelry."

"There will be a lot of items people haven't seen before."

Town counsel to rule on two plaza projects

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner Staff

Legal opinions from Cohasset's town counsel could be the deciding factors in the planning board's deliberations over proposals for two small shopping plazas on Route 3A at its next meeting Wednesday, Aug. 3.

Board chairman Robert Sturdy said that Atty. Richard Henderson will have written opinions ready by then on Cohasset Plaza II, a proposed 12-shop plaza next to the Super Stop & Shop, and on a five shop building to the left of Jonathan Livingston Square.

The board's question regarding Cohasset Plaza II involves whether the lots' impervious coverage, or paving, exceeds the 60 percent specified by the town bylaws.

Henderson will also give an opinion on whether the board should treat as one property the proposed development next to Jonathan Livingston Square and the existing building.

The board was to have made its decisions on the proposal at its July 20 meeting according to a legal time limit.

But the hearings were continued with the reluctant approval of the applicants.

At the nearly two-hour hearing on Cushing Plaza II, Atty. Charles Humphrey, representing developer Donald Staszki, said that a pedestrian walkway on the east side of the property has been added to the plans as has been suggested by the board.

He also talked abut increasing to 45 feet the radius of a turn in the parking area.

"We've got a good plan with plenty of parking here," said Humphreys.

"Mr. Staszko did everything asked of him," he said.

However, discussion became bogged down over the disputed amount of paving.

That amounts to 67 percent, according to the board's consulting engineer, John Modzelewski.

In determining the amount, board members contended that a large portion of the new lot that falls in the residential zone cannot be counted.

Reserve parking, which will not be paved unless needed, must be counted, according to the board.

The board also noted the the Super Stop & Shop property is being considered as part of the same lot.

According to Staszko's engineer, paving coverage amounts to 58 percent because, among other things, reserve parking should not be included.

Humphreys said that reserve parking spaces can remain unpaved forever since they are only required to be dust free and durable.

The attorney also contended that the developer is entitled to include the residentially zoned property in the calculations.

In addition, said Humphreys, "We're entitled to use the whole lot for coverage calculations."

Board member Al Moore said he would prefer to wait for the town counsel's ruling before casting a vote.

"I want to make sure that we do this correctly," said Moore.

"It's very difficult to do that until we receive a ruling from town counsel."

Member Pat Plante said, "I'm very satisfied with Phase I (Super Stop & Shop).

"I'd like to go along with Phase II, but I'd like to hear from town counsel."

At one point, Humphreys objected to "town counsel being used as a foil" to delay the board's decision.

"He's doing his best to answer the needs of the board," answered Sturdy.

"To say that we are deliberately delaying this is totally inappropriate. I vigorously object to that kind of slander."

After more heated discussion, most board members indicated that they would vote in favor of the proposal if town counsel agreed with the developer's calculation of paving.

Member Dan Cotton said that he was reserving his options.

There were also heated exchanges during a shorter hearing concerning the proposed five shop building next to Jonathan Livingston Square at 130 King Street.

The board contended that both lots should be treated as one because to reach the 50 required parking spaces for the new property, patrons would have to travel through the original property.

Jonathan Livingston Square, which was constructed before current zoning regulations went into effect, has 64 parking spaces.

It would need 140 spaces under current regulations.

An entrance from Route 3A would be shared by both buildings.

"The traffic flow is through an already too-small place," said Sturdy.

One of the owners, Thomas Cummings, said that the Conservation Commission had complimented the developers the previous night on "a superior job."

"They're looking at it from a completely different viewpoint," said Sturdy.

"The board has to look at whether this meets the zoning bylaw or not.

"My opinion is that it does not."

Cummings said that because town counsel had not yet forwarded a written opinion on the issue, "the town has treated you grossly unfairly, and us, too, probably.

"You should have had an opinion.

"We've tried to do everything you asked us for," he said.

Plante said that he would like to wait for the opinion from town counsel.

"I would like to hear what he says," said Plante. "I want to be fair with you."

"We like what you're doing," said Moore. "We want to tread carefully with town counsel."

including tampons, sanitary flapkins, condoms and other unidentified plastic objects.

The health agent explained it was the type of sewage found when a sewer treatment plant overflows. That is not an uncommon occurrence after a sudden, heavy downpour which occurred Monday afternoon, he said.

Dr. Godzik speculated that the Boston Harbor treatment plant probably caused the beach pollution. The Cohasset sewer treatment plant reports all overflows, and no report was made to the health department that day.

The health agent emphasized that the small syringes, the type used by diabetics for tuberculin tests, were not part of the medical waste appearing on beaches along the east coast near New York. "It appears these syringes were so small, they could be flushed down a toilet. So it was reasonable to assume this was part of the sewage that found its way from a treatment plant to the beach Tuesday," he said.

Based on a visual examination of the water, the health agent determined there was sufficient reason to shut down the beach. Since there is no instant test to determine sewage pollution, Dr. Godzik said he had to rely on what he saw that day.

"Based on the visual observations I made, I felt it was prudent to close down the beach," he said. Lifeguard Simmons then ordered all swimmers out of the water for the remainder of that steamy Tuesday afternoon.

The bacterial test results taken Tuesday at Sandy Beach were expected to be completed by late Wednesday afternoon.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

New 'Fat-Magnet' Diet Pill Gives You Steady Fat Loss

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" to help you steadily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods as long as you don't increase your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire."

It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough for weight loss (worldwide patents pending).

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles from food that you have just eaten. Then, the trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Pills Go To Work"

The fat-magnet pills alone, "automatically" help reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat, with no exercising. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals. However, you can lose weight "faster" if you choose to follow the fat-magnet diet plan along with the pills.

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with record sales and glowing reports of weight loss. It's a "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating.

Now Available to Public

If you need to lose a large or small amount of weight, you can order your supply of these new highly successful fat-magnet pills and diet plan (now available from the doctor's exclusive manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$2 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), cash, check or money order to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. They have the right

The controversy surrounding the sale of the Old Salt House has not receded.

Selectmen are still pondering whether they should recommend taking the harbor property by eminent domain. And now the proprietors of the structure, the conservation trust, have attempted to publicly explain their reasons for the sale.

The members of the conservation trust believe selectmen have misconstrued their intentions. The fact is, they say, their jurisdiction and entire reason for existence is to maintain and preserve open space within the town. Presiding over harborside property, with a working dock system and gas pump facility, is not their forte, as it were.

The former owner of the property, the late Jessie Cox, gave the building to the trust, knowing it would remain in the hands of reasonable, civic-minded residents. They never asked her for the donation, but gratefully acknowledged her generosity by accepting the gift.

For more than ten years they have maintained the building, although it was clear that the Old Salt House was not merely a historic structure - it was a viable business run by people who did not really desire to operate that business.

When the trust decided to put the structure up for sale with a local real estate firm, perhaps it would have been proper to notify selectmen of their intentions. There was certainly no bylaw or rule requiring this action, but it would have been a courtesy that may have prevented the misunderstandings that have since occurred.

It is certainly the right of the conservation trust to sell this property. They will not be using any money for their own profit. The money they receive from this well-publicized sale will go into a fund to be used for future land acquisitions by the trust.

The trust has every right to sell the Old Salt House, and are doing so in a very proper manner. They do not wish to see the Old Salt House converted into a harborside saloon, or a movie theatre.

Before they were requested by selectmen, the trustees devised a full and complete list of restrictions for the property. About the only thing a future owner of the Old Salt House can do with the property is continue to use it as a ship's chandlery.

The town should feel at ease that a local man is purchasing the property and intends to continue that operation from the building. The Old Salt House could use a little repair work, and that is what the new owner intends to do.

So here we have a sale where the members of a respected trust are satisfied, the new owner is anxious, and the town will not be harmed in any way.

Therefore, why do selectmen feel compelled to interefere - and at the last moment? As we have said before, it's a little late to start planning strategy to prevent this sale. The members of the conservation trust had the wisdom to realize that the Old Salt House is a prized part of our harbor heritage. They would never allow that honor to be tarnished.

Regional recycling a solution

In an effort to look at the crisis in trash disposal and explore solutions, area Leagues of Women Voters have provided a series of articles for publication.

By Barbara Zia
Special to the Mariner

Why does so much waste have to be disposed of? Why can't we produce less waste in the first place, reuse a lot more of what we do produce — and recycle much of the remainder? Why do we continue to use products which pollute our air and water?

Wouldn't reduction, replacing, reusing and recycling alleviate some serious problems faced nationwide — high energy consumption, depletion of raw materials, a shortage of environmentally sound technologies for solid waste disposal, environmental pollution, and ever-escalating costs?

Finding answers to these questions is one of the challenges facing communities today.

Last December the Massachusetts Legislature enacted a long-awaited omnibus solid waste law to deal with the 6 million tons of solid waste generated annually in the commonwealth.

This legislation targets $260 million to be used to promote regional solutions to the state's solid waste problems as well as to clean up landfills which are polluting groundwater.

Funds are earmarked for regional recycling and leaf composting programs to be located throughout Massachusetts.

The first regional Materials Recycling Facility, or "MRF," is due to begin operation soon. Located in Springfield, it will serve that city as well as Chicopee, Holyoke and Westfield.

Guidelines in the law attempt to ensure that the trash disposal facilities, such as incinerators, meet strict safety standards.

The South Shore Coalition, acting quickly after the bill's passage, was the first entity in the state to receive a grant through the Solid Waste Management Act.

This grant of $125,000 will enable the 10-town region to develop a model regional solid waste management plan. Work on the project is scheduled to begin soon.

The coalition recently launched its "Reduce, Replace, Recycle" campaign with South Shore businesses. At the campaign kickoff, Coalition chairman John Silva of Hull urged business people to start at the source of solid waste — packaging which accounts for one third of the waste generated in the United States.

Until a regional solid waste management plan is operational, South Shore Coalition officials are encouraging businesses, governments and individuals to make voluntary efforts in order to ease the crisis.

They can do this by:

reducing the amount of waste produced;

replacing toxic or unnecessary materials with those that are less harmful, able to be recycled or smaller in volume; recycling the products used.

South Shore Coalition towns in the meantime are making decisions which will see them through until a regional solution is available.

Many, such as Marshfield, Scituate, Rockland, Hingham and Hull, are operating landfills whose life expectancies are diminishing. Weymouth citizens are reduce replace recycle

considering a proposal to build a controversial waste-to-energy incinerator in their town. Cohasset and Norwell have signed contracts with SEMASS, the Rochester waste-to-energy incinerator which is to begin operation soon. Cohasset residents have a new recycling program, and Hingham plans to have one in the fall.

Answers to the solid waste dilemma facing communities are not easy, nor are they inexpensive. Waiting for development of a laser to blast municipal waste into oblivion is not realistic.

The answers lie first in the rather simple notion of communities working to reduce the trash they generate, replace hazardous materials with safer ones, and reuse and recycle whatever possible.

The next step requires deciding, from careful consideration of the safest technologies available, the option or options best suited to the needs of that community or region.

Subsequent articles will address the options which are currently available in solid waste management technology and what individuals, business people and governments can do to alleviate the problem.

Commentary

Historical Society tour July 31

Participants in the Cohasset Historical Society's "Minots Light Revisited" program Sunday, July 31, may well see progress in the restoration of the topless Light when they circle the famous beacon in the excursion boat "Seabreeze."

Developments in recent days indicated that some work on the top of the light may have taken place by the time of the tour. A shipment of the newly cut granite blocks that will replace those damaged by time and weather was delivered to Cohasset over the past weekend and awaited a helicopter air-lift to the ledge site.

While the schedule for the final leg of their journey and the job of placing them in position was uncertain, it was considered quite possible that some of this activity would be underway before Sunday.

A limited number of reservations for the wide-ranging program built around the Light remain available and can be made by contacting the Historical Society at 14 Summer St., Cohasset, 383-6930.

Highlight of the program will be an hourly mini-cruise from the Harbor, around the Light and return, with a commentary on the area and its history of shipwrecks and recreational activity.

Photos and artifacts related to the Light will be on display at the Lothrop House, where refreshments will be served, and a shuttle bus will be provided from the Lothrop House to the Harbor. Speakers will describe the present reconstruction project and review the history of the Light.

At Government Island, some of the damaged blocks may be viewed, as well as the rings on which the original stones were fitted.

Company uncovers aerial photos of Cohasset's past

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Photographs depicting Cohasset in bygone days are not that hard to find.

But less common are aerial photos of the town from times past.

A Norwood company, Aerial Photos International, Inc., recently began printing such photos from negatives taken during the 1930s and 1940s.

The negatives were acquired over 20 years ago from an aerial photography company, Hartley & Arnold, explained Edward M. Cohen, sales manager for Aerial Photos.

"We just recently opened them up to do something with them," said Cohen, a Norwood resident.

"We're still going through them and finding more surprises everyday."

Aerial Photos president Malcolm Woronoff said that the photos were taken by photographers in an open cockpit, two-seater plane with a big box camera.

"We have over 50 photos of Cohasset," said Cohen, who explained that the negatives measure roughly 8 1/2 by 6 5/8 inches.

"They include downtown, the harbor, coast area and many estates, all dating back to the 1930s.

"We obtained the company's log when we bought the negatives and the photos were taken for assignments and speculation," he said.

The collection also includes locations in Scituate (Lawsons Tower), Cape Cod, Boston and much of the North Shore.

President Malcolm Woronoff displays the camera he uses to take aerial photos from the Tri Pacer plane in the background.

Cohasset Harbor in an aerial photo taken in June, 1988. The Cox Estate is on the right.

"There are several thousand photos," he said.

The photos are available for sale, and were recently displayed at a function at the Cox Estate in Cohasset.

Murals cost several hundred dollars, according to Cohen, who noted that the company has also taken recent aerial photos of the same or similar scenes.

"We want to let people know that they are available, and that we would be happy to show them," Cohen said.

Woronoff noted that the cost of taking such photos hasn't changed appreciably since the 1930s and 1940s.

"It was very expensive then," he said.

Woronoff, a resident of Florida where the company also has an office, is no stranger to aerial photography.

He had a photography background before joining the Army in World War II, and attended the University of Rochester where he studied optics and photographic instrumentation.

Woronoff trained aerial photographers in the Army-Air Force during World War II.

In 1952 while living in Randolph, he started Aerial Photos with government surplus aerial cameras fitted with modern optics.

He still uses them since new ones are not available.

"The cameras weigh 75 to 100 pounds and we use special high speed, fine grained Kodak film," said Woronoff, a pilot since 1952 and former chairman of the Massachusetts Aeronautical Commission.

Up to 250 pictures can be taken on one roll of film.

The resulting negatives measure 9 by 9 inches or 9 by 18 inches, some 30 to 40 times as large as 35 mm. negatives, according to Cohen.

"That's the secret," said Woronoff. "The big negatives."

The company has three, specially fitted planes, two Piper Tri Pacers and a Cessna 206 Turbo which is capable of flying at altitudes up to 38,000 feet.

The planes are outfitted so that photos can be taken out a side door without the wings showing or through an opening in the bottom of the plane.

Woronoff does all the photography for the company.

He goes up in the plane with a pilot and his "co-pilot," Sam, a mini dachshund.

"I love it," said Woronoff of his work. "It's my whole life.

"It keeps me young."

The type of customers for aerial photography can range from developers who need site photos to lawyers who want a picture of an intersection where an accident occurred, explained Cohen.

The company provided Massport with photos of its facilities for a booklet, and Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn with a large photo of Boston to present as a gift during his trip to the Far East.

Photos from the company are also used for such things as corporate reports, brochures and hotels, Cohen said.

For the past 25 years or so, Shoppers World in Framingham has requested a photo of its parking area the Saturday before Christmas, noted Cohen.

A number of towns and cities also purchase aerial photos, he said.

"One of our major accounts since 1980 is Disney-world," said Cohen, who explained that Woronoff has been taking photos of the movie studio being constructed there.

He has also been asked to take monthly photos of the construction of a "Euro-Disneyworld" outside Paris, added Cohen.

For those kinds of photos, the company rents planes in the country of the assignment, explained Cohen.

Aerial Photos also does infrared photography which penetrates haze and deep infrared photography which detects heat.

All the developing of color film is done in the Florida office, and black and white film in either office.

Because of the large negatives, the photos are remarkably detailed.

"The large format negative is very important, as are the lens, camera and filter," said Cohen.

"They are all very important.

"But the most important thing is the photographer."

Coalition task force designs housing guidelines

By John Magadieu

The South Shore Coalition's housing task force wants to make the construction of affordable housing units easier for local officials to deal with and more acceptable to residents.

In the seven months it has been meeting, the task force has developed guidelines to help local officials deal with developers who seek to build affordable housing units through a new permitting process promulgated by the state.

Donna Kileen, task force chairman, said the housing conference held at the Scituate High School library last spring with consultants Stockard and Engler was a big success.

They will be sponsoring another seminar in the fall. At the seminar, engineers will teach local officials how to negotiate with developers.

With these strategies for negotiation, she said, officials can realize there is a "legitimate and vital role for the regulating entity.

"They realize they can have a greater role if they take the first step themselves."

Marshfield selectman John MacMahon said his town is facing a deluge of comprehensive permit applications.

One 90-unit complex is being completed, another 180-unit complex will be built, another 65-unit complex has been presented, and still another 150-unit complex is in the works, MacMahon said.

MacMahon asked if there were some way to slow the growth to allow the town's infrastructure to keep up.

He noted that of 81 local denials of affordable housing projects, 74 have been overturned by the state.

Kileen said towns can determine the sites where affordable housing could be constructed, and could choose the developers with whom they wish to work.

Under the comprehensive permit process, officials cannot rely on the regulations that apply to regular developments.

The task force will be establishing a "skills bank" with the South Shore Coalition that local officials can refer to for negotiating strategies, Kileen said.

The task force will investigate a number of other options that could help local officials provide affordable housing in a way that residents find reasonable.

Regional review by the task force is one option, she said, another is the establishment of a regional land trust.

"We have just begun exploring that issue," she said. "If that is adopted, there would have to be more cooperation between towns."

Kileen said some people may feel that the regional group is trying to usurp the power of local officials, but that's not true.

"We are offering to help on the local level," she said.

The task force also is using the coalition's $125,000 grant from the state Executive Office of Communities and Development to make a video to change people's impressions of affordable housing developments.

Sponsored by American Cablesystems (now Continental Cablevision), the 26 minute video "will challenge stereotypes of affordable housing," Kileen said.

Local cable television stations will air the video, which will be aimed at dismissing the preconceived notions that some residents may have of affordable housing projects.

The video also will cover the housing impact on employment—many would not consider working on the South Shore because they cannot afford to live here, she said.

Meanwhile, businesses, schools and municipal departments are desperately seeking help.

The high cost of housing also has had an impact on the family.

Many who have grown up in South Shore communities cannot afford to come back here to live because the housing costs are so high, she said. The video will address this concern as well.

MacMahon said he is especially concerned that local residents be given some preference for affordable housing units.

Scituate selectman Jerry Dwight said he would like to see preference also given to people who work for the town.

Chartis Langmaid of Cohasset, a member of the housing task force assured them that the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency "will pay attention to what you have to say.

"Differences can be made," she said. "What you say can affect their policy."

From The Pastor's Study:

What a wonderful, awe-inspiring journey we were blessed with in our work project in Aroostook County, Maine for the Micmac Indians, July 10 - 16. The gifts of time, service and materials we brought to them were much over-shadowed by the gifts we received. The gentleness, simplicity and beauty of their hand-crafted gifts have already become priceless treasures. And far beyond the material gifts, they lifted us to a new level of spiritual awareness. Sometime in the late fall we will be sharing the specifics of our adventure. Our blessings upon our new Indian friends: the Shaws, Dan & Mary; the Sanipasses, Don & Mary, Wolf & Lorett, David & Janet; and all of the Micmac band. Our baskets are now full to overflowing!! Gar

Youth News:

Special thanks to the seven teenagers who ventured north to help the Micmac Indians: Erica Ford, Tom Hungerford, Pam Haase, Troy Haase, Carrie Ripley, Steve Ritts, and Matt Silvia.

Thanks also to the other teenagers who helped raise the money and to the church for its monetary and prayerful support; making this ministry of servanthood possible.

Fitzpatrick is a true sport for all seasons

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

When the Marshfield-based radio station WATD named Todd Fitzpatrick, a recent 1988 Cohasset High graduate, as athlete-of-the-year in the South Shore League last month, they were saluting not only his accomplishments in one sport (hockey), but others as well (soccer and baseball). As a result, maybe WATD should change the plaque to Herculean athlete-of-the-year for the Cohasset resident.

"I was very much excited," said the three-sport star who is heading to Bowdoin College in the fall. "My life has been revolved around sports so I knew how to handle all three. I am going to try and play two sports in college."

To chronicle Fitzpatrick's achievements during his senior year at CHS would undoubtedly become a best-selling, inspirational novel.
